Another Notch On The Mongolia Gun, Her Crew Thinks

DINNER TO BE GIVEN TO CAPTAIN RICE AND LIEUT. RICE, OF THE MERCHANTMEN.

NEW YORK.—How the gunners aboard the steamship Mongolia, of the Atlantic Transport line, who had disposed of one submarine by a well aimed shell on April 19 when the Mongolia was on her eastward voyage, in all probability sank another of the Kaiser's submersibles during the homeward voyage, was told yesterday by one of the gunners. Lieutenant Bruce M. Ware, the gun crew's commander, corroborated the story.

"We were off the Scilly Isles at midnight on May 4," the gunner said, "when we saw a white streak crossing our bow only a short distance ahead of the vessel. The moon was shining brightly and we could see the streak distinctly. There was no doubt that it was the wake of a torpedo. We aimed our gun at the spot which seemed to be the point from which the streak started and fired. After that nothing further was seen or heard."

Regarding the sinking of the first U-boat, the gunner said:—

"The shot which ended the career of that submarine was fired by James A. Goodwin, of Portsmouth, Va., gunner's mate. Through glasses I saw a cooning tower off our port bow. Our six-inch stern gun, which has a sweep of about three quarters of a circle was trained upon the tower. It disappeared. Presently, however, a periscope came up on our starboard side. It probably belonged to the same submarine which had submerged when we aimed at her. Scarcely had the periscope shown itself when the gun sent forth its missile and I saw it strike. At the same instant steam or gas—at any rate, a white vapor of some sort—shot up at the spot where the periscope had been. And after that nothing more was seen during the rest of our voyage."

Seventeen gunners were aboard the Mongolia. They were chosen from among the best shots aboard two United States battle ships. Fourteen of them had won prizes for hitting objects at long range. Such a thing as hitting a periscope at 5,000 yards is regarded as child's play for marksmen of their type.

Captain Emery Rice, commander of the Mongolia, and Lieutenant Ware will be honoured on Wednesda yevening with a dinner at Waldorf-Astoria Hotel. Several hundred army and navy officers and representatives of commercial firms with interests particularly in the Far East will be present, not only to show their appreciation of the bravery of the two officers but also to testify to their appreciation of the American merchant marine.

Newton W. Gilbert, formerly Vice Governor of the Phillipine Islands, is chairman of the committee in charge of the dinner, and Major William Tutherly is secretary with offices at the American Defence Society.

PRESS DISCUSSES FOOD CONTROL

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "We should lose no time accustoming ourselves to the idea of government food control. Mr. Hoover puts the case none too sharply. There is imminent peril in the present drift. In particular, the food speculator must be eliminated for the common good."

Secretary Houston is Right.

Springfield Republican: "Secretary Houston is also right in insisting that an early passage of the food control bills by Congress is essential to the successful conduct of the war."

An Imperative Need.

Chicago Herald: "Assuredly the nation must be put in a position in which the temporary fever of speculation, the groundless apprehensions of buyers and reports of a possible future shortage will not be permitted to produce a price inflation out of all bounds."

The Result Doubtful.

Pittsburg Dispatch: "An observing public, possibly limited in numbers, which has for long years critically observed the manipulations which Mr. Hoover and his superiors in official rank have now dared to combat, will await with curiosity, and possibly with amusement, the doubtful result."

Will Become Prussianized.

Watertown Standard: "But a system which will become Prussianized and autocratic, as any system of this sort is apt to become, is not to be considered as a democratic institution. There surely is some method of combating unjust high prices without resorting to autocratic control."

No Limit to Greed.

Philadelphia Record: "If there is no control and speculators are allowed to do their worst there is no limit to which greed may not drive the necessities of life."

A Few Months Hence Too Late.

Charleston News and Courier: "A few months from now will be too late. It is unfortunate that food laws of the kind Mr. Hoover advocates are not already in operation. They should be put in operation at the earliest possible moment, and the full force of public sentiment should be behind their enactment and enforcement."

RUSSIAN EXILES ANSWER CALL OF NEW GOVERNMENT

Thirty Women in the Party, Some of whom have been in this Country Twenty Years.

NEW YORK, May 17.—Ninety-two men and women, who formed the nucleus of the Russian political exiles' colony in New York city, left here with their eyes set on home. Some of them escaped from Siberian prisons to make their way after long marches across frozen steppes to America and freedom.

In the pocket of each man and woman who left here was transportation to Petrograd and $25. It was the gift of the new government made through the Russian Consul General here.

The exiles marched to the West Twenty-third street station of the Lehigh Valley Railroad in a body. At the head of the marching group was a red flag, symbol of the revolution.

"The welfare of the working man comes only from himself: Liberty and bread; Hurrah for the new Russian Congress!" was the inscription on the flag.

Kolia Tepper led the party. Once he was one of the orators of the Jewish Socialist Organization in Russia. He preached liberty and the free right to worship.

Tepper was sent to Siberia to pass his life in the mines, but five years ago he escaped. In the dead of winter, when the thermometer registered fory degrees below zero, he made his way across Siberia and along the old Russian road to China. He is thirty-six years old, but yesterday as he led his little party, he looked aged. His face was careworn and bore the marks of his servitude in the mines.

In so far as Russian revolutionary circles in America are concerned, it was a notable party which left here. Julius Kantling was another member. Others were Maria Ginsbourg, Israel Rubin and Harry Indenbaum. Hundreds of Russian sympathisers and friends in exile went to the railroad station with them. It was like a gathering of the Russian clans.

There were thirty women in the party. In all there were fifty Russians and Poles and forty-two Jews.

They will go from New York city directly to San Francisco where they will embark on board a steamship bound for Port Arthur. They will travel over the Trans-Siberian railroad line.

It was unofficially announced that the new government of Russia would call home every exile. Russia is free to all men to-day and its government, it was said, will pay the cost of the return trip of every exiled Russian who wants to go home.

How many persons in the United States will avail themselves of the offer was a question which many Russians here asked. Men who are in a position to know said there were in the United States at least half a million Russian political exiles. Many have become American citizens. It was said that there probably were twenty-five thousand Russians in this country who would apply to the new government in Petrograd for passports and funds to return.

KING CUTS HIS OWN BREAD

Simple Fare is Provided and Economic Methods in Vogue at Windsor, Says Hon. Mr. Hazen.

OTTAWA, May 16.—"Everyone in England has enough to eat, but the country has come to realise that no food is to be wasted at this time," said Hon. J. D. Hazen to-day. He is just back from the war conference.

"The King is setting an example to his people. We were his guests at Windsor, and found that no wine, beer or spirits of any kind were used in the royal household. The fare at the table has been reduced to simplicity.

"For instance, you can cut your own bread. There is the loaf and knife, and you cut what you want. This is done to prevent waste. No toast is allowed because bread once toasted cannot be used again. All heavy and elaborate dinners are cut out all over England.

Two old women were discussing the meaning of the word "tact" and the one remarked that she did not know what it meant.

"Weel," remarked the other, "it's like this: Supposing you were tae dee, and gang up to Heaven, and at the gate ye were tae meet Peter, ye widna' speak tae him about cockcrawin', wid ye? Weel that's tact!"

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

The Girl Next Door

A Sketch of Juvenile Love

By F. A. MITCHEL

Spring is the season of flowers and love, as has been remarked before, it seems, to the present writer. He does not claim originality for the remark. But it is as true now as it was when first made, some centuries ago, and all English and American poets from Chaucer to the present poet laureate have enlarged on the theme.

Why not use it, therefore, to introduce a little tale, or sketch, rather, of a very young man and a very young maid and flowers and flour?

Billy Atherton was nearing sixteen—that is, he was at an age when two things monopolized the limited space there was in his undeveloped brain, the first being his clothes, the second a girl. It may seem absurd to put the clothes before the girl, but such is the proper relation. There are a great many girls, but only one wardrobe, for a young man, and he requires that wardrobe to be exactly in vogue.

The first sign Billy showed of approaching manhood was when he was fourteen. Then he displayed marked concern about his neckwear. Later a new complication developed; then the period for long trousers came on. The color of his neckwear must match the color of his socks. Nothing would induce him to wear socks that were not clocked. His favorite shade for his scarf and socks was a brilliant yellow, and woe betide the tailor who produced a pair of trousers for him that were not short enough to display seven-eighths of his hosiery!

When Billy was invited to his first formal dance he was confronted with the most important question thus far of his life. Should he wear a swallow-tail or a tuxedo? If a tuxedo, should he wear a white or black vest, a white or black tie? In Billy's time boys of his age were supposed to pass upward and onward to full dress through a tuxedo. So, notwithstanding that he was invited to a formal dance, he must wear a tuxedo.

Consultation with half a dozen other boys of his age soon cleared the way through the vest and tie problems. They were to be both black. But Billy struck a snag on the collar. There was unfortunately a division of opinion. Some of the boys ruled for a standing, for a turndown collar. During the afternoon before the dance Billy was in a fever of suspense whether it should be standing or turndown. Finally the matter was settled by a telephone message from his haberdasher, who, after consulting a periodical giving such fashions, assured Billy that if he wore anything except a turndown collar the bottom would drop out of the universe. That settled the final momentous question as to how Billy should be arrayed on going to his first formal dance.

Since Billy was to enter upon his first love affair during the evening of this dance one would suppose that the apparel of the girl he was to fall in love with should be also described. Betty Hinsdale, aged fourteen and ten months, was as much concerned about her party get up as was Billy about his apparel. A dress had been especially prepared for the occasion. But if her costume were to be as minutely described as Billy's has been it would require a woman to do the job.

This would involve two persons to write the story. Hence I can only say that when Betty was paraded before her father in her party dress he immediately ordered it lengthened at both ends. This is all the information I can give on the subject.

The apparel of these two young persons being the most important part of this story has necessitated its being introduced in the beginning. It is now necessary to mention a certain spring day when Billy had put on his base ball suit and was in his back yard summing himself, occasionally throwing a ball against the brick wall of his home.

Billy was standing within a few feet of the house examining a tear in the ball he had been tossing when he was surprised at a fine powder settling all over him. He brushed it off, but more settled in its place. He looked up to see whence it came. All he saw was that it had emanated from a window in the house next door.

Billy was puzzled. Nevertheless he suspected that some one was showering him. Bending his head over his ball for awhile, he raised his eyes suddenly and saw the laughing face of a girl at a window. It was drawn in with astonishing rapidity. Billy waited and watched for some time, but there was no reappearance of either the girl or the flour that had whitened him.

Be it remembered that this was springtime. One morning when Billy was getting himself late for breakfast by a painful indecision as to which cravat out of more than twenty he should wear he cast his eyes aside from the mirror before him—it was very close to a window—and saw a girl planting seeds or roots in the yard next door. He at once divined that she was the maid who had floured him, and he wished for something with which to return the compliment. In the window was a box of plants, and the plants were budding. Billy began to throw the buds at the girl, who was pretty.

A man would have been surprised at seeing a flower drop near him and would have looked to see where it came from. Not so this young lady. She was conscious of the fact that a young man lived next door. She remembered to have dropped flour on his shoulders and was on the lookout for a response. In fact, she had seen Billy at his window amid a rainbow of cravats. Given a girl in a back yard, a young man at a window, and it is to be supposed that the girl will expect something.

Billy tossed sprigs and flowers, which fell to the girl's right, to her left, before her, behind her, but she paid no attention to them. Then he went to the bathroom, filled a tumbler with water and, returning to his window, sent the contents in a spray on the flower planter. There was just enough of a sprinkling to cause her to fear a douche. She arose from her work and marched into the house. On her way she cast a glance up at Billy and made a "face" at him. Billy in return threw her a kiss from the tips of his fingers.

This time Billy saw enough of the girl to be sure that she was pretty. What else she was he did not know and did not care to know. He had attracted her attention, though he had been obliged to sprinkle her to do so. She had brought the sprinkling on herself by giving him a stage snow-storm, and as for the face she had made at him he did not mind that a bit.

The next day when Billy was going up the steps, getting out his latchkey, who should come out of the front door of the next house but the girl. She passed him with her nose in the air, but she had scarcely reached the sidewalk when Billy heard a giggle. He turned and tried to get up his courage to follow and join her, but he had not been introduced to her, and should she scorn him he would never recover from the blow. She had floured him and he had flowered her, but this did not constitute an introduction. He would no more dare speak to her without the formal introduction required in social life than he would return to his knickerbockers.

Such was the condition between these two next door neighbors when Billy was invited to his first formal dance. He began to array himself at 6 o'clock for a function that was supposed to begin at half past 8. Much time was required. He put three sets of studs in his shirt before he was satisfied with a set of tiny mosaics. He had inserted gold links in his cuffs, and this necessitated a further change, as had he worn mosaic studs with gold sleeve buttons he would expect to be ordered out of the house by the host. The tying of his neckwear was another delay requiring some twenty-five minutes. He succeeded in placing it above the collar button, but was in terror lest it slip down.

He was informed by his mother, who stood by him nobly in this critical period of his life, that he would surely be late, and at last he put the finishing touches to his makeup and, going downstairs and out, entered a limousine that had been summoned to transport him to the scene of hoped for conquests. As he was driving away a car stopped next door. He wondered if the girl who lived there was going anywhere.

Billy on reaching his destination spent half an hour in the dressing room. Whether it was for further arrangement of his apparel or a stage fright at appearing at his first function there is no record. Nevertheless he held on to the finisher on his way down. He made his bow to the hostess and was at once taken off by a member of the family to be presented to some of the young ladies he did not know.

Those invited were all supposed to be between fifteen and seventeen, though some of the girls had barely turned fourteen. Billy was introduced to several girls in succession and was landed for a similar purpose before another when he stood stock still. She was the girl next door.

"Miss Betty Hinsdale, this is Mr. Atherton!"

Why all the retiring qualities are attributed to the softer sex it is difficult to explain. Billy, as he expressed it afterward, was taken "flat aback." Miss Hinsdale was as cool as a cucumber. Billy stammered something like "pleasure of a dance," whereupon she threw back her head with all the air of a society belle, at the same time thrusting out a dance card with not a vacancy on it. But Billy soon caught up with her. He erased several names and boldly wrote his own name in their place.

Minute accounts of love affairs may be pleasingly realistic, but they require much space. But it doesn't require much time for a boy of sixteen to fall in love. Billy did the falling like a house painter from a scaffold—very suddenly. But he was a "dead game sport" as his heart was concerned, long before the evening was over. He had not only been made acquainted with the girl next door, but had fallen madly in love with her.

The flouring, the flowering and the sprinkling, and all that were over, and another phase of the affair was begun.

But that phase has been so often portrayed that we will leave these young lovers at the end of the beginning of their affair by merely stating that the love spats were so numerous one would suppose that they were bitter enemies instead of lovers. Billy was at one moment in the clouds, the next in the slough of despair. This up and down condition lasted till he went to college when he succeeded in getting admitted to the university baseball team, and from this moment he forgot the girl next door. But it is only fair to her to say that before she married she had been engaged six times.

More Enthusiastic Reports On Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Peterboro' People Are Putting This Great Restorative to the Test—Two Interesting Letters To-day

Peterborough, Ont., March 13.—The people of this city were never so interested in any medical treatment as they are to-day in Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. The Examiner has been reporting cures daily, and this has kept the people talking about their experiences until everybody seems to know about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food as a most satisfactory restorative for a run-down system.

Almost everybody feels the need of restorative treatment at one time or another. The business man and school boy, as well as sister and mother at home join in praising this well-known medicine.

Mrs. Craig, 45 Macdonnell street, Peterborough, Ont., writes:

"Several years ago when my family was small, I became run down and weak and was bothered with palpitation of the heart. I commenced using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and found such good results that I continued the treatment until I had taken about four or five boxes. It helped me and made me feel better afterward.

Since then, when I feel that I need a tonic, I take two or three boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, finding the same good results each time. I can also speak highly of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I have used them in my family and found them very satisfactory."

Mrs. J. Freeman, 533 Patterson Street, Peterborough, Ont., writes:

"Last spring, my daughter, aged eleven years, had a serious attack of heart trouble. For three weeks she was in bed under the Doctor's care. After she got up and was going around, we found she did not sleep well at night. We decided to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with her, so I procured some and commenced giving it to her. We found it benefitted her greatly, and that she did no wake up frightened in the night, as she used to. I continued the treatment, and at present she is still taking them. She sleeps splendidly, and has not had any trouble with her heart since she commenced this treatment. I have recommended the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to many of my friends.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

"Semi-ready" is not a descriptive term in tailoring. It is the name of the registered Company which tailors Semi-ready clothes.

There has been attached to the name a secondary meaning, which is used by some dealers to mystify buyers. This attachment accrues always to the successful and the popular man or methods.

URIC ACID SUFFERING.

Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgment in the system when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it forms stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

DEADLOCK IN MINE STRIKE

Prolonged Tie-Up in Coal Fields Is Feared.

CALGARY, May 18.—Unless there is an unlooked for change in the situation, the present prospect in connection with the dispute between the coal miners of District No. 18, United Mine Workers of America, and the Western Coal Operators' Association is for a prolonged strike which will tie up the coal fields of Alberta and British Columbia for an indefinite period.

The latest demands of the miners for a thirty per cent. increase over the old agreement and a general eight hour day are declared by those in touch with the stand of the employers, to be out of the question, and as the men show no disposition to yield and the operators are just as firm, it looks as if the dispute would simmer down to a trial of strength between the two parties.

The Miners' Union received another telegram from Hon. T. W. Crothers yesterday, in which he urged them to reconsider their refusal to place the matter in the hands of a Royal Commission, and intimated there was little chance of Government interference.

Secretary A. E. Carter, of District No. 18, said yesterday that the members of the conference were ready to return to their homes Monday night and let the strike take its course, but had waited over in hope that something might result from the presence in the city of Grant Hall, vice-president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, who is here with A. M. Nanton, of Winnipeg, a director of the company.

In view of Mr. Hall's statement, made earlier in the day, however, this hope is believed to be in vain.

Seventy-Five Per Cent. Of The Spring Seeding Has Been Accomplished

The Soil as a Rule Worked Up Better This Spring Than For Many Years—Reports Sent in by District Representatives—Fall Wheat is Beginning to Pick Up Again.

REPORT ON FARM CONDITIONS

Reports sent in by District Representatives of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, point to a marked advance during the past week in the work of getting in the new crops. Over 75 per cent of spring seeding has been accomplished, for while in many quarters the work has been practically completed, on low land or on poorly drained fields it has dragged somewhat. The soil, as a rule, worked up nicely this spring, better than for many years.

Fall wheat is beginning to pick up again, although here and there more of it has been reseeded with barley or oats.

Clover is doing a little better than wheat, but few fields are up to real form, and at present the prospects for hay are not bright. Pastures have been backward in growth so far, and during the week were ready for sheep and young cattle only, although some have put on more animals than was wise.

Early potatoes have been planted more extensively than in previous years, but the cold ground has prevented much growth, and will be trying to the planted seed.

The indications are tha a much larger area of beans and corn will be planted this season. The former will be more largely grown in several counties where heretofore the acreage has been only a most limited one. Essex County reports some corn already sown.

Vegetable growing never has been so much in favor and the year promises to be a record one for farm and town home-grown vegetables.

Pruning and spraying have been actively engaged in during the week by progressive orchardists.

Live Stock.

Live stock is in good condition. Most of the young cattle are on pasture, but the grass is not sufficiently advanced for general grazing. In most districts cattle are scarce, but Simcoe County reports that probably more than usual are on hand. Young cattle for market are firm in value everywhere at from 9c to 12c. a pound, according to quality and nearness to shipping points, while dry cows are being sold at from 7c to 10c. a pound, although good grade milkers in Thunder Bay District are said to be worth from $125 to $150. Hogs are selling at prices hovering around $16 per cwt., one report mentions $17. Sheep are getting a good living on pasture.

Milk production is barely keeping up to the normal, as pastures are backward, although it is stated that local creameries are looking for a good year. Leeds County reports that while cheese sold for 26 1-2c a pound a fortnight ago, this week only 22c was offered, due to the report that the British Government was likely to take over the handling of the product in Great Britain. Factories are not disposed to sell at his rate.

Fodder supplies are holding out well. Hay is still more than sufficient for immediate needs, although grain and other items are running rather low.

Farm Labour.

While several returns state that conditions are unchanged, others say that with the rush of spring work largely over, fewer requests for assistance are being received, although some farmers are still looking for boys to help out. Peterborough County reports that fifty or sixty men were placed on farms through the District Representative's office or other local agency working in cooperation. Larger implements, with more horses are being purchased. The farm tractor, where tried, is said to be doing excellent work.

STORY WOVEN ABOUT DEATH OF LONDON, ONT., SOLDIER WHO HAD HIS OWN "BLIGHTY"

With Last Breath "Alexander Simmons" Revealed Home Town and Won a Cross Erected to "Good Soldier and True"

LONDON, Ont., May 17.—One of the most touching little stories of the war, in which a London soldier is cast for the leading role, appears in a handsome volume called, "Oh, Canada, a budget of stories and pictures by members of the Canadian Expeditionary Force," which was recently issued in England, and has come to the city. It may be that the name of "Alexander Simmons—a good soldier and true," is fictitious. No such name appears on the city insurance records, but Pte. Bernard Pantell, recently reported killed, enlisted under his uncle's name "Symonds," because he had been discharged as medically unfit from another unit. The story is represented as follows:

THE OTHER "BLIGHTY."

He was only twenty—a tall, light-haired, freckled, quiet sort of fellow, and he had foolishly tried to stop a Boche bullet with one of his vital organs. His captain said—but there's no use going back to that, because this story begins in the hospital at the back of the front, where Simmons—that was his name—found himself in a ward with a lot of other soldiers he had never seen before, a nice, clean, cool ward, with a nice clean, cool and rather pretty Belgian sister stirring a drink for him in a tumbler.

"What is it—a Martini?" murmured Simmons feebly, watching the operation with interest.

"Allo, L 27," exclaimed the nurse, with a smile. "So you have decided to come back to life again, is it so?"

The youthful soldier looked up into her eyes and nodded.

"How long have I been here?" he asked.

BE A VERY GOOD BOY.

"Let me see, five—six—seven days. And now, Mister Cockaigne. I know what you're going to ask next. But you mustn't ask it—you must not talk at all. It is a se doctor's orders. Be quiet and be a good boy. Drink zis."

"I'm a teetotaller, sister," murmured Simmons.

"Heim! You funny boy!"

He made a grimace as she gently raised his head and poured the contents of a wine-glass down his throat. Even the slight exertion seemed to exhaust him and he panted for breath on the pillow. Poor boy, it was just as well his mother or sister or sweetheart was spared a sight of him then,—for he had had a bad time of it, and there were tragic hollows in his flushed cheeks and black rims beneath his blue eyes, and he was thin—almost as thin as a mummy of an official communique of the chances of a man in No Man's Land when the star shell is turned on and the Boche snipers are out for blood.

SOON FOR BLIGHTY.

"Por boy, cheer up," said the nurse putting a deliciously cool bandage on his burning forehead. "Yes, you will soon have your wish, L 27. You will soon go back to Blighty."

"Ah, you see," she said, busying herself with towels and sponges and hosing and things. "I told you I knew what you would say—when shall I go back to Blighty? You wonder how I know? That is my secret. They are all Cockneys in this ward, and their talk is always of 'dear of Blighty'—Blighty from morning to night—Blight; when they wake up and Blighty when they are put to sleep. But it is all right, Mister L 27, I myself love Blighty. I would live there, too, after the war. But hush, I—I come the doctor."

LIKED THE LITLE NURSE.

This sort of talk went on for two days. Simmons didn't say much—it was rather painful to talk—but he liked listening to the little Belgian nurse, and then one night he called out to the man in the next cot, who was minus a leg, and said:

"Old pal, where is Blighty?"

"Chuck it, mate," returned the other man, wearily, "I've got my own troubles."

"No offence. Only wanted to know. What is Blighty?"

The other slowly screwed his head around and stared.

"Ow the 'ell did you get in with this bunch, mate Blighty's England. Some damn lingo or other. I expect We're all from London 'ere."

"Really," asked Simmons, "that's all right then. I'm from London, too. So that's it—Blighty!"

And he sank off to slumber and dreamed he was on the banks of the Thames or wandering in Piccadilly or Pall Mall, and she—the girl he loved, but had never dared to tell her about it—was on his arm, and he had got the D.C.M. and he was so happy that he smiled in his sleep. The little Belgian nurse saw the smile and was deeply touched—more touched than she had been for a long time—because she had grown to be interested to the case of this tall, square-jawed boy with the clean-cut features, and the blue eyes and the light hair, and because the doctor had told her that evening that the chances of recovery were somewhat less than ever—complications had set in and it would be a stiff fight for his salvation.

HE WAS IN A BAD WAY.

"Keep him cheerful, sister. Don't let him think he's in a bad way—and Nature may help to pull him through.

So when she dressed his wound next day, and brought his his medicine she talked to him about Blighty and London and of her own life there She had, it seems, been a governess before she became a nurse, and she hinted at a tragic hurt in her own life, which the great city had partially healed.

"Is there one thing so beautiful as the Thames at moonlight—and London so sweet and silent and strong? It makes you calm. Oh, so calm, L 27. No wonder all you fine, brave London boys want to go back to Blighty. Will you not be happy in Hyde Park?—dear, wonderful Hyde Park, with the Serventine and trees and paths and flowers.

Simmons' eyes grew moist.

"Say, sister, when am I going back to Blighty?"

"Soon. Good night. And go straight to sleep."

"You ain't answered my question, sister, 'When?'"

"In a few days now. You're making fine progress the doctor says. And tomorrow I'll show you some picture postcards my sister has sent me from London. You shall see them. Good night."

CLOSE TO THE BORDER.

Before morning L 27 was taken with an internal hemorrhage ,and two surgeons, summoned in haste, worked over him for an hour. The flow of blood was checked, but from that moment the young warrior's fate was sealed. That little Boche bullet had done its work, and if the Boche who had sent it only knew he would probably have been deeply gratified. In vain Sister Marquerite laboured. Simmons' spirits, like his mortal spirit, slowly ebbed, and it soon became a question of hours.

"Say, sister," he whispered huskily. "You needn't keep it from me. I guess I ain't going to Blighty, after all."

Just then outside a group of convalescents struck up:

"Goin' back to Blighty,
Cross the sea to righty-tighty.
It means a lot to us so far from home,
But walkin' down the Strand you'd see and understand
What a soldier's——"

"Say, sister," whispered L 27, motioning the girl to bend a little lower, "I guess I'm done in. I ain't afraid. I done my best, an' if I had another life an' old Sam Hughes said he wanted it for my King an' Country, damn if I wouldn't go an enlist all over again. But I got something on my mind. I deceived you, sister. That bunch singin' out there ,they know better. They know I don't come from Blighty—at least not your Blighty. My home's across the sea. I'm a Canadian. I am Alec Simmons of the —th Battalion, Canadian Expeditionary Force, but I must have got mixed up somehow. You got your London and I got mine—mine's 4,000 miles away—London, Ontario, an'—an'—say, sister, will you—just—"

HIS LAST SPASM.

He never finished—for a sudden spasm seised him and the grip on the nurse's hand tightened, then relaxed and he had made the supreme sacrifice.

But Sister Marquerite saw to it that the little board above his grave advertised the truth to a (geographically) careless world. And you can see it today in the cemetery about a mile from P——:

The Men She Married

Adapted from the story by Harold Vickers
Published in the Snappy Stories Magazine

Probably the most novel subject ever presented in a play. A young heiress is tricked into a mock marriage by a suave adventurer who deserts her after obtaining her jewels and a large sum of money. Believing him dead, the girl accepts an honorable widower's offer of marriage, and it seems that at last she is to be happy. The man she believed dead turns up at a crucial time and under threat of exposure, compels her to do his bidding. "Give him enough rope and he'll hang himself." He, the villian, does, when he tries to play the same game with the woman's step-daughter. Don't fail to see him.

"The Men She Married"

ADAPTED FROM THE STORY BY HAROLD VICKERS
PUBLISHED IN THE SNAPPY STORIES MAGAZINE

A story unique in its enactment and in the collection of stars who appear in equally prominent roles. Gail Kane has been appearing very frequently in recent World releases, and after each succeeding one, her popularity greatly increases. The other World stars who are in this piece have a large standing following and will not disappoint them by their performances in this splendid story. The piece was one of the most talked of stories which ever appeared in the magazine mentioned above.

Lens Is Being Set Aflame; Germans Preparing To Leave

Fires and Explosions in Coal City Plainly Visible From British Lines--Heavy Rain Has Turned Country Into a Sea of Mud and Only Minor Operations Are Reported From British Front---Persistent German Attacks at Craonne Repulsed By French.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

Special to the Examiner:

(By Wm. Philips Simms)

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, May 18. — Lens is being set aflame. Fires and explosions in France's "Coal City" were plainly visible from the British lines throughout last night. The Germans plainly know the danger they are running now of a British sweep that will close the circle about the city and trap them there. It is possible the destruction of the buildings in Lens may indicate a withdrawal from the city. The same programme of burning and blowing up of buildings has been followed by the Germans in every city and town they have evacuated. Rain for the past few days has turned the battlefield of dust into one of mud. There were only minor operations in progress early to-day. Around Bullecourt, just taken in whole by the British, it was quiet. North of the Scarpe the mud was so thick that there were no infantry operations reported early to-day. As this despatch is filed a small action is in progress near Gavrelle, which is apparently going well for the British. No details are available yet. One of the first aeroplanes of the day was bagged low over Gavrelle just before this action began. Machine gun fire from the trenches brought the Boche down.

LONDON, May 18.—The weather has been rainy, hampering big operations during the last two days, according to British front despatches to-day. Field Marshal Haig's official report to-day bore out this indication of inactivity. He said: "North-east of Armentieres two hostile raiding parties were beaten off early in the night." No mention was made of further fighting at Bullecourt or elsewhere on the Hindenburg line.

LONDON, May 18.—According to an Exchange Telegraph despatch from Amsterdam, it is rumoured at The Hague that a truce is about to be arranged between Russia and the Central Powers as a result of the political changes at Petrograd. The rumour is characterized as of German origin. A Petrograd despatch says it is announced officially that the Ministerial crisis has not yet been solved.

LONDON, May 18.—To-day's story of a truce between Russia and Germany is discredited here.

PARIS, May 18.—Only three French merchantmen were sunk by submarines in the week ended May 13, according to an official announcement to-day. During that period 859 vessels entered French ports and 901 departed.

PARIS, May 18.—Persistent German attacks on the north-eastern slope of Craonne were repulsed by French grenade fire, to-day's official statement reported. In the Champagne, the War Office said there was considerable artillery activity. In Lorraine, French reconnaissances penetrated the German lines.

LONDON, May 18.—In their first engagement with enemy submarines, American destroyers beat off a German U-boat which sought to attack the White Star liner Adriatic, according to the London Chronicle to-day. The Adriatic was conveyed over a certain distance by the American war vessels on their way to Queenstown.

LONDON, May 18.—Encouraging news that Russia has settled her domestic troubles and that the Russian army's power is by no means lost, gave ground for belief here to-day that the Allies can soon count on Russia bearing her part in the general onslaught on Germany. The prediction was voiced in several quarters to-day that Germany will soon find the necessity of hurrying back to the Russian fronts some, if not all, of the reputed six hundred thousand men she is recently reported to have withdrawn from these sectors to bolster up her dwindling lines on the Western front.

BERLIN, via London, May 18.—"The ruins of the former village of Bullecourt were evacuated, according to command, and without disturbance, from the enemy, who established himself there twenty-four hours later," explained to-day's official statement.

The War Office reported the repulse, in hand-to-hand fighting, of a British attack on the Gavrelle-Fresnes road, made after midnight.

ROME, May 18.—Austrian-Hungarian prisoners taken by the Italians in their offensive on the Julian front are known to number 6,432, while much material has also been taken.

Efforts made by the Austro-Hungarians against the new Italian positions on the Vodice and south of Grazigna were repulsed.

Austria has ordered all civilians to evacuate the Isonzo section in which Italian troops are steadily forging ahead to-day.

For the first time it became officially known to-day that British heavy artillery is aiding Italy in her great offensive in the Julian Alps. The War Office announced that the British gunners have materially assisted the Italian advance and were welcomed enthusiastically by General Cadorna's troops.

WILL LIMIT USE OF MEAT AND POTATOES

CHATHAM, May 17.—Two meatless and potatoless days each week will be observed by the members of the 24th Regiment Chapter of The Daughters of the Empire as a result of a resolution passed by the society at a special meeting. The members will also abstain from the use of veal and lamb in an effort to further improve the situation. The chapter also went on record as favouring a measure of conscription or selective draft. A collection of comforts for soldiers will be made on the King's Birthday.

FULL WEIGHT OF UNCLE SAM NEEDED SAYS LORD DERBY

Britain's Secretary of State For War States the United States Must Strike Hard and the Allies Hope That She Will Strike Quickly

END NOT YET IN SIGHT

(By Lowell Mellett.

LONDON, May 18.—"This war will not be over until the full weight of the United States has been thrown into the scales, not until the United States begins making way as though she alone faced Germany will there be a possibility of predicting when the end will come."

So spoke Lord Derby, England's Secretary of State for War (Kitchener's successor) to-day, and then he added emphatically: "The bigger blow the United States is able to deliver, the sooner she delivers it, the quicker will the war end and the new order of things be assured."

The United Press correspondent went to Lord Derby for some expression of belief on the duration of the war and of what part America should take in the fighting. He found the War Secretary firmly of the belief that the end is not yet in sight.

"The United States," he said, "has a big part to play in this struggle to abolish the world menace of militarism. The United States must strike hard. We hope she will strike quickly." Don't let the United States be misled. Germany's active propaganda right now is being directed to that purpose. In every way possible Germany is throwing out the idea that the war's end is in sight. Germany would like this to be so.

"Germany has reached—if not passed—the crest of her military strength. She knows every day she is weaker by so many men.

"She is ready to fight a long, long time yet before accepting the terms that the world's democracy demands to safeguard the future.

"It has been, and still will be, a terrible fight. Lord Kitchener, sitting in this very chair, said it would be a long war. He was right."

Greater Peterboro' Association Will Meet On Monday

Bridges By-law Will Constitute One Topic For Discussion

A general meeting of the Greater Peterborough Association will be held in the Council Chamber on Monday evening next. Mayor Duffus, President of the Association states that one object of the meeting is to discuss the Bridges By-law and make preparations to submit it to the people. Other matters of interest to the Association and the citizens generally will come up for discussion.

The long black silk coats are being revived and will probably be great favourites on account of their general usefulness.

THE CALL TO JOIN THE PETERBORO' BATTERY

Peterborough has raised some mighty fine infantry units and has also sent a large number of the artillery units of other towns. Now the chance has come to raise a local battery, and the citizens of this city are showing their appreciation of the opportunity by boosting the 74th Peterborough Battery. The young men are beginning to show an interest also. The response to the appeals for men in this unit has been very good, and large numbers are talking of joining. The Commanding Officer, Major Crocker, is an experienced officer, and intends to make this battery a crack unit. He received word yesterday from some of his recruiting staff from outside points that three more men have joined. Two of these are bank clerks. These men have felt the call of their country, and giving up good positions to enlist as gunners. This makes seven recruits this week for this battery. Now is the time for the young, eligible men to come along. The battery will be going into camp about the end of this month. The camp life is full of interest from morning until night.

NOW is the time for Peterborough young men to join their home town battery.

CORP. J. G. MILLER OF 93rd BATTALION KILLED AT FRESNOY

Another Well Known Peterborough Boy Has Met Death at the Front--Peterboro' Casualties Since April 9th Have Reached a Total of 171 of Which 41 Were Killed in Action and 18 Have Died of Wounds--To-day's General Military News.

KILLED IN ACTION.

Corp. John G. Miller, late 93rd Battalion, 244 Carlisle avenue.

WOUNDED.

No. 196203 Pte. V. Stewart, late 93rd Battalion.

Signaller Bert Hamilton, late 33rd Battery, 215 Rubidge street.

SHELL SHOCKED.

CORP. J. G. MILLER.

Corp. John G. Miller, son of Mr. Robert Miller, 244 Carlisle Avenue and a former member of the 93rd Battalion has been killed in action the tragic news having been received by his parents in an official message from Ottawa which stated that Corp. Miller met death on May 3rd, the date of the capture of Fresnoy by the Canadians. The sad intelligence will be received with deep regret in the city as Corporal Miller was widely known and had a very large circle of friends, having lived practically all his life in Peterborough. Before the war he was a very enthusiastic member of the 57th Regiment, having been a colour sergeant in No. 2 Company. After being turned down when he tried to join earlier units, he enlisted in the 33rd Battery in August, 1915, but when a number of his former comrades in the 57th Regiment joined the 93rd Battalion, Corporal Miller was successful in being transferred to the Peterborough County unit, with which he went overseas. He was transferred to the 2nd Canadian battalion at the front. Corporal Miller was twenty-three years of age and was unmarried. His parents, four brothers and two sisters survive. The bereaved family will have the sympathy of the community generally.

Corp. Miller was a member of St. Andrew's congregation and a valued member of the Young Men's Guild. He was employed at the Auburn Mills before enlisting.

PTE. VINCENT STEWART

Pte. Vincent Stewart, who enlisted in the 93rd Battalion here in October 1915, is officially reported wounded in the recent fighting, his name appearing in yesterday afternoon's official list. Pte. Stewart went overseas as a member of A Company of the 93rd and was transferred in one of the early drafts sent to France by Lt.-Col. Johnston's unit.

SIGNALLER BERT HAMILTON

Miss A. Hamilton, 215 Rubidge street has received an official message from Ottawa stating that her brother, Sig. Bert Hamilton, artillery is reported admitted to No. 8 Stationary Hospital, Wimereux, on May 10th, suffering from a slight gunshot wound in the left leg. Signaller Hamilton enlisted here in the 33rd Battery and this is the second time that he has been wounded.

PTE. ERIC STUART.

Pte. Eric Stuart, son of Mr. R. N. Stuart, 701 Stewart street lately reported slightly wounded is now officially reported severely wounded in the leg and foot and admitted to the 8th Stationary Hospital at Wimereux. Pte. Stuart went overseas with the 93rd Battalion.

LANCE CORP. BRUCE BELL

Mr. W. A. Bell, Peterborough R. R. No. 4 has received word that his son, Lance Corp. Bruce Bell has been admitted to the 2nd Western General Hospital, Alexandra Park, Stockport, England, suffering from shell shock and trench fever.

Lance Corp. Bell went overseas with the 93rd, but has been in France, a member of the famous 4th Canadian Battalion since November 1916.

Since April 9th, the total casualties from Peterborough and the immediate district, have amounted to 171, of which the majority were members of the 93rd Batalion. The figures up to this morning are as follows:

Killed in action	41
Died of wounds	18
Missing	1
Total	171

WINDSOR, May 17.—The members of Windsor and District Veterans' Association, in session here, passed resolutions asking that all Government positions held by unmarried men who have not offered to enlist be declared vacant, and that returned soldiers be appointed.

The delegates also have decided that all lands held by alien enemies should be sold, and the proceeds turned over to the Red Cross Society and the Association.

Another resolution declared that all subjects of enemy countries, naturalized or otherwise, should be disfranchised.

A minimum salary for civil employes of $1,000 a year and a pension for soldiers rendered incapable by wounds, of $1,200 a year, were among other recommendations of the Association.

NEW YORK, May 18.—At a meeting of Actuarial Society here, D. B. Wood, Canadian actuary said that mortality among Canadian infantry officers was 18 per cent. per annum. Heavy artillery officers about six per cent. and that of medical corps and the army service corps, lowest of all, the average together being about ten per cent.

Quartermaster Sergt. Sam Thomas of the 21st Battalion has sent home a most interesting souvenir of the battle of Vimy Ridge in the shape of a German gas mask taken from a Bavarian prisoner. It is much more complicated than the British pattern, the feature being a heavy metal mouthpiece in the form of a cup, containing chemicals.

Lieut. T. Mark, son-in-law of Mr. A. Nicholls, has arrived home from overseas on three months' furlough. Lieut. Mark went overseas with a Western Ontario battalion.

COBOURG HEAVY BATTERY.

The eighth draft of the Cobourg Heavy Battery requires a few more men to complete the number. This draft should move overseas very shortly, and anyone desiring a quick passage to the front should make application at once. Any information in connection with this unit can be had by writing direct to the Officer Commanding, Cobourg. A number of Peterborough men have already gone overseas through this unit, and there are several on the strength at present.

Germans Are Driven Out Of Bullecourt

PTE. CYRIL GIROUX, well known Peterborough boy, who has been awarded the Military Medal for gallant work during the battle of the Somme.

General Haig's Men Are in Complete Possession of Position Around Which Constant Fighting Has Taken Place Since May 3rd

FRENCH MAKE ADVANCE

THE OFFICIAL REPORT.

LONDON, May 17.—Thursday night's War Office report said:

"To-day our troops completed the capture of Bullecourt, taking some 300 prisoners. The whole of the village, for the possession of which constant fighting has taken place since May 3, is now in our hands."

LONDON, May 17.—After days of most extensive fighting, in which the position several times changed hands and men fell in hundreds in attacks and counter-attacks, the British forces have at last driven the Germans out of the village of Bullecourt and once more are threatening the southern end of the Drocourt-Queant line, which Field Marshal von Hindenburg constructed to fend Cambrai from the eastward advance of Field Marshal Haig's army.

Thousands of fresh German troops recently have been thrown into the fray around Bullecourt, but their efforts have gone for naught in endeavouring to drive out the British from the entire village. Although several times the line has been bent by the preponderance of weight of the German formations, at no time have the British been forced to evacuate, holding here and there fringes of the outskirts and keeping back the Teutons until their elements were reformed with sufficient strength to drive in effective counter-attacks and regain their lost territory.

Likewise to the east of Arras, around the village of Roeux, the battle has been waged with a viciousness scarcely ever before seen, and here also the British have been successful against the Germans.

FRENCH MADE ADVANCE.

Although the forces of the German Crown Prince have renewed with extreme violence their attacks against the French north-east of Soissons in the sectors of the Moulin-de-Laffaux and Braye-en-Laonnois—three of them against each position—they were again repulsed by the French artillery and infantry, suffering enormous casualties. To the east the French troops near Craonne delivered a successful attack, capturing German trench elements.

MASKS NEW RETREAT.

The desperate German counter-offensive that has been going on since day before yesterday in the region of Laffaux is considered in competent quarters in Paris as intended to mask a further retirement of the German first line on other parts of the front.

During the last few days the number of fires in villages behind the German front, both north and south of St. Quentin, has greatly increased. The town of St. Quentin itself, which has been gradually burning for the last few weeks, is now overhung with heavy smoke clouds. These facts are considerd indications of a retreat, being similar to those which preceded the last retirement in which the Germans left a vast area of devastation.

FIRE FIGHTING UNIT MUST BE ADEQUATE

Machine With Sufficient Pumping Capacity is Needed If the Present Standard of Efficiency is to Be Maintained

THE UNDERWRITERS

A meeting of the City Council will be held this evening. One of the matters that may be considered concerns the purchase of a motor-driven pumper for the Fire Department. There are many citizens who wonder that such an important matter should be left to the tender mercies of a body of men, many of whom are unfamiliar with the general construction and requirements of motor driven fire apparatus. A couple of nights ago at a meeting of the Committee of the Whole Council it was decided to recommend that a certain class of truck be purchased. The truck selected was one of three that the Council had to choose from. The choice of the Council fell upon the cheapest truck of the three, and, incidentally, the one with the lowest pumping capacity. Ald. Smith, who is probably more familiar with the general details of construction of such apparatus than any other member of the Council, insists that the city purchase a larger truck and one with greater capacity.

Pumping Capacity.

It is stated that should the city decide to purchase the truck recommended by the Committee of the Whole Council, the fire department will have to retain the present steam fire engine, as the pumping capacity of the motor truck which the Council proposes to purchase, is only rated at five hundred (United States) wine gallons, which is a little more than four hundred imperial gallons, whereas the capacity of the steamer now in use, is seven hundred and fifty gallons a minute. It is a well-known fact that the Fire Underwriters will view with concern any reduction in the pumpage capacity should the Council decide to purchase a motor-driven pumper. Yet there are men in the City Council who will openly declare that the Fire Underwriters can never be "satisfied and there is no use trying."

Effects the Rate.

At present the merchants, manufacturers and householders of this city pay out annually in fire insurance premiums between one hundred and seventy-five and two hundred thousand dollars. A slight increase in the key rate fixed by the Underwriters and up goes the rate. That is what happens when the efficiency of the fire department goes below a certain standard. In other words when the Fire Underwriters fail to influence the Council to provide what is needed in the way of fire protection for the city they have no other recourse but to increase the key rate which means a higher premium for the man who pays for fire insurance.

WHAT THE BRIDGE MEANS.

Peterborough needs a bridge to cross the stream that separates us from the realisation of a "Greater Peterborough." And all our interests that involve our prosperity demand that this should be a high level bridge at Hunter street.

In fact, so strong is the argument in favour of building such a bridge that the only objection that can be urged is its cost. Of course the cost is comporatively high, but cost is not always the measure of doing the right thing. Great Britain, Canada, and the Dominions, are expending multiplied millions for the establishment of a principle—for no material gain. This expenditure will mean great financial burdens on coming generations; but the object, the gain, the advantage, are worth the price. In like manner the bridges, whose building is demanded, will be worth the price, and more.

Besides, expenditure of some large kind will be absolutely necessary at an early date. The London street bridge has long been petitioned for and demanded. A new bridge at Hunter street will have to come very soon. That will involve the expenditure of several thousand dollars, and it won't meet our obligations, conduce to our prosperity, or be a medium of realising our ambitions to the extent that an overhead bridge will do.

We need these bridges to keep the city together, to make us a virtually united city as well as united in spirit, as we are united in interest.

We are in duty and in honour bound to build an overhead bridge. It is our duty to provide the conditions that will contribute to the industrial growth and prosperity of Peterborough. We are in honour bound to keep faith with the Quaker Oats Company, and if we fail in that, we shall not establish a reputation for fair dealing with, and encouragement of, industries that will attract others to the city.

Though it is not "nominated in the bond," as a matter of fact, the building of an overhead bridge, and the involved fact of its relation to the company's getting the benefit of water transportation—canal navigation—is the main condition of the company rebuilding on a far greater scale in Peterborough.

We must keep faith with the company, if for no higher reason because in so doing we benefit ourselves, and provide a necessity that will have to come very soon. We must keep faith in the interests of our reputation as a manufacturing centre, and our future as a great city of factories. If we play the Hun, fail in good faith, Peterborough will be avoided instead of being sought by the seekers of homes for new industries.

We all know what a blow the burning of the Quaker Oats buildings was to every class of citizen. The burden of this blow, apart from the destruction of property and loss of life, was the dread that the city would be deprived of this great, money-spending, employment-giving, and business-booming industry. Everybody felt the loss and also felt that no value could be placed upon the benefits the re-establishment of the works would be to Peterborough.

As good business, the company looked about for the best site for rebuilding. Other places were making big bids for capturing the Quaker Oats Industry. They were willing to spend large sums to secure it.

Peterborough got the preference on condition that an overhead bridge should be built, and this was a good proposal for several reasons: It would give the company access to the big benefits of water transportation, by automatically extending the Trent Canal to Hunter street and the basin beyond.

An overhead bridge would be in the interests of the city, give us a connecting link, facilitate street railway extension, and wipe out the terrible danger of level crossings on Hunter street, a danger that would be intensified by the greatly increased business of the company.

The city will be united by a permanent structure, and the development of all parts greatly facilitated.

The presence of a great industry will be secured; and the city will gain a reputation for keeping faith, and gain in its negotiations with future industries, the advantage of a good name being better than riches.

The cost of the bridge will be offset and compensated b the considerations sugested above: and by other considerations. The benefit to every class of the community in a large increase to our population, and an opportunity for employment at a time when, following the war and the cessation of munitions making, employment will be scarce. The pay roll of the Quaker Oats Company distributed through the city before the fire was a very important element in our commercial prosperity and, through it, in general prosperity; and these advantages will be much greater when the works are rebuilt larger and more important than ever.

We cannot expect to achieve a larger and better Peterborough unless our citizens take large views of their responsibilities and duties.

The attitude of the ratepayers towards the bridge bylaw, to be voted on Thursday, May 31st, should be taken only on mature and broad-minded consideration of all the advantages involved.

THE TRUE BOND OF EMPIRE.

The Toronto News is obsessed with the idea of imperial organisation, and declares that the graves on the many battle fronts of this war are evidence of the necessity of imperial organisation. This idea is subject to some modification. The British Empire is not a material organization, but a spiritual organism; it is, in its highest significance, an intangible entity. Lack of material or political organisation is not the cause of unpreparedness. Apart from the military unpreparedness, unpreparedness was only in Britain herself; there was no lack of preparedness in the outlying sections of the British Empire. Every part of the overseas Dominions responded to the menace of German militarism, spontaneously and automatically, by virtue of the spiritual bond; and in a way that would not have been improved by political or fiscal organisation. To argue that imperial organization involves preparedness is to argue a system of military readiness that would be tantamount to the militarism we are fighting to destroy. While imperial organisation of some effective kind may not be undesirable, this is not the time to distract our leaders and statesmen from the work of successfully waging this war—save the Empire before we organize it. Lloyd George evidently recognizes the necessity of inter-imperial rapprochment and a closing of the ranks. Yesterday's despatches told us he announced that Britain would at least once a year call a meeting of prime ministers of the Dominions and representatives of India, to discuss imperial matters and foreign politics and relations. He gives no hint of the necessity or intention of the establishment of any political or statutory form of imperial organization. Free consultation and coordinated action of the several parts seem to be the farthest object of attainment.

One Company manufacturing fire apparatus which Ald. Smith stands out for, claims to manufacture sixty-five per cent. of the fire apparatus sold in the United States and Canada. This Company, together with one other Company, manufactures nothing else but fire apparatus.

An Efficient Unit.

Purchasing the cheaper truck and reducing the pumping capacity will probably mean that the city will be compelled to retain the steamer that is at present in service. This steamer has been offered for sale at $2,500, which amount added to the $9,000 in hand for the purchase of a new motor-driven pumper, makes a total of $11,500, which is practically the price of a first-class machine having a pumping capacity of seven hundred and fifty gallons.

As one citizen remarked to-day, considerable interest is being taken in the Council's selection of an adequate fire-fighting unit and the citizens, as a whole, are not content with something that happens to fit the amount appropriated for that purpose, which in this case, amounts to about $10,000 less the price of a truck costing about $900.

Dear Mary:—

You'll just have to run over soon and see my new rugs. I'm so tickled!

I was passing Harry Zacks' window and the exquisite designs stopped me. I went straight in and bought three new rugs on their easy payment plan and told my husband about it afterwards. He certainly was pleased.

They have just got in a lot of rug "beauties." Do go and see them. You'll thank me for giving you the "tip." Your Pal—Helen

Only 8 days more

Only eight days more are left in which you can buy a set of the "Handy Volume" issue of the new

Encyclopaedia Britannica

printed on genuine India paper

SATURDAY, MAY 26th, one week from tomorrow, and possibly a day before, will end forever your opportunity of owning, in its most useful and usable form, the greatest reference work ever published. NOW—today—you can make a first payment of only $1.00 (to be followed by convenient, small monthly payments for a limited period) and the entire set of 29 volumes will be sent you—to use and profit by while you are paying for them. When the last set is sold you will NEVER have another opportunity of buying the Britannica printed on India paper. Knowledge of facts is the greatest power in the world today. It is the thing that marks the difference between the day laborer and the merchant prince, between the clerk and the general manager, between the cabin boy and the captain.

All the world's knowledge—the facts about every trade, every profession, every art, every industry, every science, is summed up and set down for your use, for the use of your wife, for the use of your boys and girls, in the 29 volumes of The Encyclopaedia Britannica. You cannot own and use these books without growing in knowledge, without increasing your ability, your earning capacity, your intellectual calibre.

Today—NOW—you can buy this wonderful opportunity for Advancement, Power, Education, Efficiency, Profit, Success, Culture and Prosperity for $1 down and as little as $3.00 a month (for the cloth binding) for a limited period. If you wait, you will NEVER be able to buy.

You haven't any time to lose. You simply must look this question squarely in the face and decide it. Will you buy the Britannica NOW and have, at your finger ends, the practical advantage—the actual, positive facts that cover all the achievements of all men from the beginning of the world; all the facts that are known about the world; all the facts about the things men make with their hands and with machines; all the facts about every product in the world, its uses, how it is made, how it is used and where it comes from, the people that produce it or manipulate it; all the facts about every country, its history, development; the biography of every notable man and woman; all the facts about the discoveries of every science—will you have these things as your tools to make success for yourself, your wife and your children, or will you let this chance slip and NEVER have another?

A WONDERFUL NEW VOLUME

THE publishers of the Encyclopaedia Britannica announce that they have made arrangements for the issue, as soon after the end of the war as possible, of a new volume, containing a full and authoritative history of the war.

The new volume will be written by scholars and experts of the same high character as those who wrote for the Britannica itself, and by many of its own contributors. It will be absolutely impartial, excluding all partisan feeling and prejudice. It will contain

1. A judicial account of the real causes of the war, the progress of the struggle, and the results all over the world; with maps, as necessary, to show changes in boundaries.
2. The lives of the new leaders, whether civil, military or naval, in the belligerent countries.
3. The results of the war outside the sphere of fighting, the progress of surgery, the prevention of contagious disease, the new scientific discoveries, etc.

The new volume will bridge the gap between the days of peace before and after the war. It will be printed and bound to match the Britannica and the publishers guarantee that, no matter how difficult and costly the supplementary volume may be from the editorial point of view, the price of it to all who purchase the Britannica during the present sale will not be more than that of a corresponding volume of the Britannica.

President

The New York Times said, "The Encyclopaedia Britannica is something more than a book—it is an institution."

We do not want even one of these last few sets to go to any one who is not positive that he will find the Britannica useful and helpful to him and his family. There will not be nearly enough sets to supply all those who do know the Britannica will be useful, and who are ordering today, tomorrow and in the next few days.

Do not order unless you know!

But, if you are almost convinced and want to make sure the Britannica will be of practical use and help to you in your business and in your home, go at once to the store named below. Here you can see the entire set of the Britannica, you can prove the value and usefulness of this work to your own needs. (If you go today you may have a choice of bindings.) Learn the prices—and the terms and number of payments it will take to pay for the books while you use them. You can leave your order there and pay cash, or $1.00 down and the complete set will be sent you as quickly as possible.

If you already know the value of the Britannica to you, or if you cannot go to the store named below but are convinced you need the Britannica, sign the "Reserve Order" form printed here, pin a one-dollar bill to it, and get it into the mail AT ONCE.

The END of the Sale is HERE!!

Decide NOW, for you will NEVER have another opportunity like this

This sale must end because we cannot get from the publishers any more sets of the "Handy Volume" issue of the Britannica, printed on genuine India paper.

The publishers cannot print any more sets because they cannot get any more genuine India paper.

This is because the war has made it impossible for the paper makers to obtain two essential raw materials for making India paper, a certain quality of flax from Belgium, Germany or Ireland and hemp from Russia. It will be impossible to secure these materials in sufficient quantities for many years after the war—therefore the Britannica can never be printed in the "Handy Volume" form again.

You Desire To Help In Continuing The Supply Of Socks?—Trench Day To-morrow Is An Appeal To You

The Canadian Kitchener League will make their Trench Day appeal to the citizens to-morrow. Soldiers' letters, acknowledging the receipt of socks and comforts, forwarded by this local patriotic society, have appeared from time to time, illustrating the extent to which the work of the Kitchener League is appreciated by the men in the trenches, and this is the approval that must commend the Kitchener League work to citizens who have contributed to it in the past and who will have an opportunity of maintaining this assistance to the soldiers by their donations to-morrow.

The money received to-morrow will be spent for socks and comforts which are sent directly to the men in the trenches. Most letters home mention the fact that socks are most acceptable, and that the supply should be continued. The Kitchener League is anxious to continue making and sending them, and they appeal to the citizens to help them in this work. Every contribution will help. Remember it goes directly to the soldiers, and will provide a comfort the soldiers welcome.

De scribed As Wonderful "The Crisis"

The Effects Produced Not Thought Possible at One Time in Photo Play

"The Crisis," a powerful American photo-war-drama, based on Winston Churchill's novel of the same name, will be shown at the Grand Opera House Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday next.

The drama reaches a powerful climax in the battle of Vicksburg, fought by land and water forces around the historic city of the Mississippi. Mr. Selig rebuilt the crude river battle boats of the period, and reconstructed the sand-bag fortifications. Veterans of both North and South, who participated in the battle, and who have seen the film pronounce the reproduction perfect in every detail.

Another striking feature of "The Crisis" is a remarkably human Lincoln, played by Sam D. Drane. Lincoln is a vital character in the plot of Mr. Churchill's story, and Mr. Selig spent more time and patience finding an actor for this difficult role than in casting all of the rest of the play put together. The result is a Lincoln who has startled persons that knew the Martyred President in life. The St. Louis slave market and the fall of Ft. Sumter are other sensational triumphs of the play.

No Decision In Regard To Conscription

Special to the Examiner:

OTTAWA, Ont., May 18.—Sir Robert Borden this afternoon told Parliament what was done at the Imperial conference, as far as could be imparted in a public session of the House.

It is understood that the Cabinet reached no decision in long meetings yesterday regarding the question of compulsory military service, or control of food question of the Dominion.

There are to be other meetings of the Cabinet to-day, when these important questions will be up again.

Liberals will hold a caucus shortly to determine the attitude on an expected government move to extend another year.

S. A. To Open Home For The War Orphans

The business of caring for the war orphans has become a very serious one indeed, and almost daily the number is increasing since very serious thought has been given to the children's affairs, and last week arrangements were completed whereby the Salvation Army will establish two homes immediately, with others likely to follow. One will be opened in Toronto and another in Ottawa.

This business will require a very considerable amount of money indeed, and part of the present self-denial effort the Army are asking for, will go to help establish this Home for Christian missionary work.

LOST HIS SOUVENIRS.

Lance-Corporal Cookman Writes From a Woolwich Hospital.

In a letter to P. C. Blade, Lance-Corp. Geo. Cookman, writing from an hospital in Woolwich, tells of the advance at Vimy in which he received minor wounds and developed trench fever. He states that Sergt. Ringer is in that hospital and is making good progress in recovery. He concludes with the following: "I had quite a few Fritz presents, but the R.A.M.C. got my kit in the first hospital I was in, and I have not only lost my souvenirs, but my own watch and chain, and the whole shooting match has gone, but a few Frits post cards and money."

TWINS BORN ON DIFFERENT DAYS

John Knox Specht and his little sister are twins, but they have different birthdays. The little girl, Minnie, was born at 11.30 o'clock p. m., April 21, and is an hour older than her brother, who was born at 12.30 o'clock a. m. April 22. Friends are now wondering whether as twins the youngsters will in a few years be able to claim four birthdays, for as twins John and Minnie will have April 21 for a birthday, because that is Minnie's day, and on the next day she should surely be entitled to share John's birthday as his twin.

The children are son and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph H. Specht, of Oxnard, Cal. The father is a native of Germany and the mother of Ireland, and they were married in Ireland just before the outbreak of the great war.

Where is this store I hear about,
Of which the people rave and shout,
Where all high prices are put to rout?
Its' Paskin's.

Where is the place where meat's so choice,
It makes a fellow's heart rejoice,
To get a pound in piece or sliced?
Its' Paskin's.

Oh tell me, where's that lovely ham

$500 A Month To Look After Peterborough Prisoners of War

That is the Amount the Peterborough Branch of the Red Cross Sends For the Care of Local Soldiers in the Hands of the Huns—Motor Show Netted $1,298.99 For the Society—Red Cross Notes.

The financial success of the Motor Show was practically attested at the Red Cross Executive meeting of May fourteenth, when a cheque for $1,298.99 was handed over to the treasurer of the Red Cross Society, with a promise of $41 more, when the tire, won by Mr. Kilsaly, who so kindly donated it to the Red Cross, should be disposed of. This substantial addition to the funds of the society, was especially gratifying at this season, when, owing to the active engagements of our armies, the stores of the Red Cross are in such urgent request.

Possibly, there are still many who fail to realise the extensive work carried on by our local society, for example, it considers it a point of honour to care for all the prisoners of war from Peterborough and the surrounding country, with the result that each month, approximately $500 is sent to the Prisoners of War Department for this purpose. When we consider the steady increase in prices of wool and materials and the immense quantities that must necessarily be purchased to supply the various workers, societies and auxiliaries, we must conclude that it is only due to the most careful and skilful planning and judicious buying that the finances of the society can be administered so as to meet the various demands. As we all know, the number of our Canadian troops, during the past few months has greatly increased, and the scale of their operations during the next few months will be of undreamed of magnitude, so that there is an undeniably urgent call to every individual to assist, as never before with money and work, that our supplies may not run short and the sufferings of the sick and wounded be thereby increased.

For the month of April, the convener of the Knitting committee reported 594 pair of socks as having been received, 282 pair being machine knit and 312, hand knit. Of the latter 158 pair were gratefully acknowledged as donations from the following auxiliaries and societies:

St. Paul's, 60 pair.
South End, 33 pair.
Murray street church, 28 pair; and Lakehurst, 37 pair.

In presenting the report of the Packing committee for April, the convener stated that the following auxiliaries and societies had sent in supplies for April:

Ashburnham, P. L., Berean Bible Class, Lakehurst, Lily Lake Red Cross, Murray street church, Otonabee Chapter, I.O.D.E., St. Paul's Church Auxiliary, Trinity Church and St. Peter's Patriotic Club.

The report of the Packing committee was as follows,

Madam President and Members of the Peterborough Red Cross,—Your Packing committee report for the month of April, 19 cases containing the following: 133 pair pajamas, 18 dressing gowns, 40 day shirts, 428 pair socks, 180 sheets, 818 towels, 133 M. T. bandages, 1 case hot water bottle covers, wash cloths and personal property bags.

Flora H. Davidson,
Convenor.

In this connection, it will be a cause for thankfulness to note that receipts have been received from St. John's N.B., stating that all shipments to that port had been received and forwarded, that the one shipment to Montreal was likewise acknowledged, and in addition that word had been received from the Canadian Commissioner, Col. Hodgetts, in London, to the effect that the January shipment of goods had arrived there, in safety.

The citizens of Peterborough, in the near future, will in all probability have the privilege of listening to Sergeant Edwards, an escaped prisoner from Germany, tell the story of his life in the prison camp and of his escape, as arrangements are being made to have him give an address here under the auspices of the Red Cross.

Crop Prospects Are Best In Years Says Senator

Senator William Sharp, who is the owner of one of the largest and one of the best farms in Western Canada, arrived in Ottawa for the remainder of the session. He reports that the crop situation as far as Manitoba is concerned is the best for years. On his own farm the wheat is up several inches.

He states that the weather conditions, contrary to general reports, have been ideal for seeding. The month of April was cold, keeping the moisture in the ground, and turned warm early in May when the farmers got on the land. The result was the best possible seed bed for rapid growth. The acreage in Manitoba, he, thought, would show a considerable increase.

Senator Sharp could only speak for his own province, but he understood that in Saskatchewan, conditions were not so good, the season having been later.

He stated that there had been no labour shortage, the farm help secured from the States having supplied the deficiency due to enlistment. Some five hundred students from American agriculture colleges also came north to assist the Canadian farmer to seed their crop.

NO LOANS TO FARMERS AT PRESENT

Hon. I. B. Lucas, attorney-general, states that until more settled financial condition existed, the act passed last session, granting government loans to farmers upon permanent improvements, would not be proclaimed in effect. "The government cannot at the present time," said Mr. Lucas, "borrow money at a rate which will induce farmers to seek loans. The farmer can really borrow money cheaper than the government at present." This condition, he hoped, would not be permanent, and that with improvement it would be possible to proclaim the act.

Statist Favourably Impressed By C.P.R.

In discussing the recent Canadian Pacific report, the London Statist, which is one of the most conservative financial publications in England, has a two-page article headed Canadian Pacific Economies, which says that though the volume of traffic was all that could be desired, 1916 was one of the most difficult years ever experienced. Enormous business had to be handled with a serious shortage of cars, while the cost of material was rising by leaps and bounds; fuel and wages were increasing, and labour was scarce and less efficient. Had not the road been vastly improved in recent years and the capacity greatly increased, serious congestion must have occurred, making proper control over expenditure impossible.

The Statist alludes further to the great improvement in train and car-load statistics and to the increased economy shown by the conducting transportation ratio. It thinks that notwithstanding the advancing costs, the net earnings and profits for 1917 will compare favourably with those for 1916, and that there is every likelihood that the growth of the company's activities will prove as wonderful in the future as in the past.

FEARS DEATH WILL ROB HER OF $100,000

Miss Honora May O'Brien, through her counsel, Stephen C. Baldwin, asked Justice Aspinall in the Supreme Court, Long Island City, to order the immediate trial of her action against John Bernard Manning, financier, of No. 2 Wall street and No. 81 Riverside Drive, New York, for $100,000 for alleged breach of promise to wed.

Miss O'Brien, citing the fact that Mr. Manning is eighty-five years old, stated that he was "a broken down and worn out old man, in a feeble condition, with only a few years to live at best," and expressed the fear that he may die before her case comes to trial.

Martin W. Littleton, representing Mr. Manning, protested and said he was in good health. Decision was reserved. Miss O'Brien, twenty-seven years old, was Mr. Manning's secretary.

The expenditure will be spread over a term of years.

DESERTER STRIPPED CIVILIAN

MONTREAL, May 8—The military authorities are looking for a meanest deserter that ever placed a soldier's uniform in disgrace. They are looking for a man who stripped a civilian of his clothes at 3 o'clock in the morning put the stolen clothes on his own back and compelled his pilfered friend of a few hours to don the uniform or go naked. During the next three days in fear of the police and military authorities the "soldier was dined and feted by returned soldiers who took him for one of their own.

Protestations on his part were regarded as excessive modesty and he lived high until yesterday when he reported to the military authorities. The man looked the part he was believed to have earned on the battlefield as the left sleeve of his coat hung empty at his side. He was a railwayman and lost his arm in a railroad accident.

He told a straight story of what happened to him. He met his soldier friend fraternizing with him for three days. Last Sunday night they had several drinks—between them a bottle of liquor. The soldier's choice of a place for the celebration was a shed in the neighborhood of the mountain. His friend is a stranger and doesn't remember the place. From the shed they went to Fletcher's Field where they consumed the remainder of the liquor and then fell asleep.

LOST HIS CLOTHES.

At 3 o'clock Monday morning the civilian awoke to find himself naked. Beside him lay the uniform. The soldier was gone; likewise the civilian's clothes. It was cold so he got into the uniform. During the way he met other soldiers who treated and made friends with the stranger who came from Ottawa.

All that day and the next he met other soldiers to whom he told the story of how he came by the uniform. He was not believed. The more he explained the more he was treated with kindness, until he began to see the danger he was running. He was afraid of the police and the military authorities. He was wearing a uniform he had no right to, and knew it was an offence. In the midst of feasting at a soldiers' meeting place he decided to report the matter and went to the Drill Hall, Craig street. From there he was told to report at military head quarters and was informed that he would have to submit to arrest.

He was taken to the court house where a complaint was lodged against him, but was later withdrawn. Wearing an overseas' uniform, with the left sleeve of his coat tossing loosely about the one armed brakeman was finally turned to L'Assistance Publique. At that institution efforts were made to get a suit of clothes that would fit. They succeeded in doing so and with the information he has given the authorities, the military authorities expect to gather in the mean est deserter of the year. He got away from the military authorities, got the civilian's clothes, and his $12.

SAW CRUISER FIGHT INVISIBLE ENEMY PASSENGERS SAY

BRITISH MAN OF WAR, THREE DAYS OUT FROM ENGLAND, WAS BETWEEN STEAMSHIP AND TARGET.

NEW YORK. — What appeared to be a battle between a British cruiser and an enemy invisible to the passengers on board of a passing steamship was reported when the latter arried at an American port. According to the passengers, the cruiser was seen firing rapidly at an object in a direction opposite to that occupied by the passenger vessel; that is to say, the cruiser was between the passenger vessel and the object aimed at.

"This took place when we were about three days out from England," sail one of the passengers. "Whether it was a submarine or a raider which was the cruiser a target we could not see. It must have been a great distance away even from the cruiser, as no portion of it was visible to us, although the horizon was carefully scanned through powerful glasses. The cruiser was at least four miles away from us, and of course it would have been impossible to hear any return firing. Nevertheless some of the passengers declared they thought they were able to distinguish a rumbling sound as of distant thunder, distinct from the louder reports which came from the cruiser. We did not wait to see the outcome of the battle."

One of the passengers was Lieutenant H. A. Coons, of the Royal Naval Flying Corps, who fell 6,000 feet in an aeroplane within the British lines in France. He is returning to his home in Kingston, Ont., which he left about a year and a half ago. During almost the entire time abroad he was engaged in seaplane service over the North Sea. Early this year, however, he was sent to France, and on March 15 he ascended alone to reconnoitre during a heavy gale. When he had reached an altitude of 6,000 feet the wind was blowing a hurricane. Lieutenant Coon had been up in the air for ten consecutive hours, and was now completely exhausted. He says he lost consciousness and when he recovered he found himself in a base hospital, one of his legs crushed, but otherwise without injury.

Lieutenant Colonel Alexander Horn of Australia, who was in command of a field ambulance unit in France, was another passenger. He said that the task of the French and British armies now is comparatively easy. "But, although the Boches will be beaten, the Allies still will have some hard fighting to do," he said.

MR. BONAR LAW'S SON MISSING AT THE FRONT

Lieut. C. J. Shaw of the King's Own Scottish Borderers, son of Mr. Bonar Law, is officially reported wounded in the Palestine operations, and is missing. The Chancellor of the Exchequer's eldest son, James, was wounded some time ago. Lieut. Law is nineteen years of age. He was at Eton, and, like his brother, joined the army soon after war broke out, being gazetted a year ago to the Scottish Borderers. He is the second son of Mr. Bonar Law's four sons. Their mother, a Glasgow lady, died in 1909. His elder brother, Captain J. K. Law, belongs to the 7th Reserve Battalion, the Royal Fusil- Bonar Law, is officially reported is attached to the Military Wing of the Royal Flying Corps. Ministers and ex-Ministers, as a body, have suffered heavily in the war, Mr. Asquith, Mr. Arthur Henderson, Lord Cowdray, Mr. George Barnes, Sir Gordon Hewart, and Sir Charles F. Cawley being among those who have lost sons at the front.

1,000 DRESSMAKERS STRIKE.

PARIS, May 17.—There was an unusual spectacle in the boulevards this morning when more than 1,000 striking dressmakers paraded the streets leading to the labour headquarters. The strikers were composed of employees of three principal dressmaking concerns which had sought to impose upon them a Saturday half-holiday without pay. The strikers refused to accept the change and demanded an increase in pay of 1 franc a day on account of the high cost of living.

A strike committee was appointed to induce dressmakers of other concerns to unite in a general movement.

Gemmell Company Suffer By Fire

Charlotte Street Whitewear Factory Was Gutted by Fire Early This Morning

Early this morning the premises at 208 and 210 Charlotte street, occupied by Gemmell and Company, whitewear manufacturers, was gutted by fire. The damage is estimated at two thousand dollars. The fire was first discovered by a porter at the Snowden House shortly after four o'clock. He summoned the fire department. Two lines of hose were laid into the building, and after about two hours' hard work the fire was extinguished.

The Cause.

The fire was caused by an electric pressing iron that had been left with the current turned off at the socket, but the plug was not pulled out at the base of the iron. It is claimed that there is often considerable leakage of current at the socket even after the switch is turned off, and when connected with an heating element such as an iron, will cause the element to heat up in the course of several hours.

Car of Potatoes Selling At $3.75

The car of potatoes the city almost bought is at the C.P.R. station, and is being sold by Messrs. Crough and Conway, at $3.75 to citizens. The Henry Hope Company took fifty bags of Irish Cobblers for their employees' seeding activities. The city has never owned these potatoes, but is calling the attention of citizens to this opportunity of buying at cost price. Purchasers have to pay for cartage. To-day's demand was quite active and it is expected that the car will be disposed of in a few days.

NO INSTRUCTIONS YET ON CHEESE SITUATION

Commission Has No Word From England—No Sales on Brockville Board.

BROCKVILLE, Ont., May 17.—Another week has passed and still no cheese sales. At the board meeting today salesmen found no change and went home prepared to keep their cheese another week or send them along to Montreal and take chances on later developments. Three weeks have now passed and no goods sold. Offerings were 2,385 white and 1,528 coloured.

The attendance was large, as it was expected one of the recently-appointed commissioners would have been present. A letter, however, was received by Secretary-Treasurer Wilson from Prof. J. A. Ruddick, one of the new commissioners, saying that unless the Commission had some definite instructions from England there did not seem to be much object in meeting the members of the board. The Commission, he said, is not in a position to give any information or to discuss the situation until it has instructions to work on, and no better place could be selected for the purpose of making an announcement than Brockville.

TYPHOID FEVER AT ORILLIA

One Hundred and Forty Cases in Three Weeks and Two Deaths now —Traced to Source of Milk Supply.

TORONTO, May 16.—An outbreak of typhoid fever from which in three weeks there have been 140 cases and 2 deaths in Orillia, Ontario, has been traced by the Provincial Board of Health to milk supplied from a farm where several people had typhoid fever.

This morning Dr. J. W. S. McCullough of the Provincial Board, stated that the outbreak had been investigated by his department. "Orillia has a good water supply and they have a pressure filtration installed there for the past few years," said Dr. McCullough to The Telegram. "The water commissioners have been careful to have repeated examinations made of water and there is no question that the infection came from that source.

"Some ten days ago we sent a representative up there when there were 130 cases in two weeks, and these were proved to have been caused by milk supplied from a farm where several people had typhoid fever.

Advised to Pasteurize Milk.

"At the beginning of the present year the board sent up to all municipalities that had not a milk by-law a copy of a model by-law, and suggesting that these be established, and further suggested the pasteurization of milk. If this had been done in Orillia, there would have been no typhoid fever there from a cause such as milk, as pasteurization destroys the germs.

"Now the board has ordered the Council of that place to establish pasteurization without delay, and other municipalities will do well to follow in this line."

Miss Helen Burns, of St. Catharine's, is visiting Miss Beatrice Picard.

Mr. Euclid Picard, of St. Catharines, is visiting at his home here.

ORDER TO SELL DUERER

BERLIN, May 17.—Count zu Reventlow's Deutsche Tages-zeitung contains the following advertisement:

"Here is a possibility to make from four to five million marks—a genuine Duerer painting of Christ's head—a generation in the possession of an old noble family. For this picture six million marks were offered in America, where it was on exhibition. The present owner wishes to mortgage it for 600,000 marks, and pledges himself to sell the picture after the war in America and divide the profits with the person advancing the above-named loan. The selling price to-day is 1,000,000 marks."

The German Society of Arts, which, as reported recently, is agitating for a law prohibiting the export of articles of art and antiquity to foreign countries especially America, immediately took up the case, with the result that the dealer intrusted with the negotiations declares the offer has been withdrawn and declines any information about this Duerer picture, which ought to be well known in America.

COAL FAMINE DENIED

It is authoritatively stated that there is no definite reason for any hasty purchasing of coal at this season of the year, also that there is an adequate supply on hand at the United States mines, and, providing the consumers can be persuaded to hold off the market for a while, the conditions will right themselves. The United States Federal Trade Commission, which has been investigating the matter, in a preliminary report, states that the Commission warns consumers against buying larger quantities of coal than usual this summer, saying there are symptoms now of such a buying panic as that which enabled speculators last winter to force prices above normal. No good reason exists, says the report, why May prices should not be subject to the usual summer discount, but "if the public is again so deceived as to indulge in a scramble for coal, the favourable situation may be nullified."

The Commission is keeping in close touch with the anthracite situation, and promises to "expose any unscrupulous wholesales, jobber or retailer who seeks to mislead the public into a belief that exorbitant prices are justifiable, or that there is any necessity to join in a frenzied bidding to secure immediate delivery for far future needs.

The United Mine Workers' new wage scale, which went into effect last week, increases production cost between 24 and 30 cents a ton, and "is a beneficial and steadying factor in the industry," says the Commission. Leading operators' prices at the mine for May provide for this wage increase, and "there is no justification for a larger increase to be passed on to the consumer."

Prices for May at the mines are quoted at $3.61 a net ton for egg, $3.84 for stove, and $3.93 for chestnut coal.

The local situation is declared to be absolutely dependent upon the railroads, and the congestion there is used as an argument for local prices. Increased freight rates are also pointed out as a cause for abnormal prices. It is possible that the difficulty with the railroads will be solved by importing large quantities of water-borne coal. If this is done to any appreciable extent, it is stated that prices will develop a downward tendency.—Globe.

Young Woman Routs Armed Burglar And Joins in Pursuit and Capture

NEW YORK. — Burglars who wish a long life and a merry one will do well to read this story, and govern themselves accordingly.

It was noon when the telephone rang in the apartment of Mrs. Gustave Morris, on the fourth floor of No. 634 West 141st street. Mr. Morris, who is connected with the Birkow Chemical Company of Butler, N. J., was out and so was the maid. Mrs. Morris answered the telephone, and when she was asked if her husband was in replied in the negative.

Fifteen minutes later the door bell rang and she opened the door to meet a man with a revolver in one hand and in the other a piece of cloth saturated with ether.

Mrs. Morris sprang at the man and finally pushed him out of the apartment.

The man ran down the stairs and in the lower hall he was joined by a second man. Both fled across the street, pursued by men and women attracted by Mrs. Morris' screams.

Policemen Fleischer and Coogan, of the West 152nd street station, arrested one man, and James Beagle, superintendent of the house at No. 619 arrested another. They denied any guilt. Arraigned before Magistrate Fuchs in Washington Heights Court, they were held without bail for examination.

Mrs. Morris, who is twenty-eight years old, exhibited little nervousness after her experiences.

"I've never handled a gun in my life," she told a reporter, "but I fought to keep that man out, and as I got getting the better of him my strength redoubled. I didn't want to hurt the man, but I can't afford to have my apartment robbed."

TENNIS

The tennis club of St. Andrew's church held an enthusiastic meeting on Tuesday evening in the lecture hall and the following officers were elected for the coming season.

Hon. Pres.—Mr. G. W. Green.
Hon. Vice Pres.—Mr. Geo. Gillespie, M.L.A.
President—Miss E. A. Rae.
Vice President—Miss Helen McLaren.
Sec. Treas.—Miss Helen Henry.
Tournament Committee—Misses M. Evans, M. Rae and Mr. Geo. Green.
Social Committee—Misses G. Evans, E. Langford and Mr. Harry Tudhope.

It was decided to hold our informal tea on Saturday evening at the lecture hall in order to rally all the members. All the young people of St. Andrew's interested in tennis are requested to be present to-morrow (Saturday) and bring light refreshments. They are requested to meet at the bowling green in the afternoon and then proceed to the lecture hall later for tea.

STOPS ZEPPELIN MAKING

Employees at Friedrichshaven Plant Ordered to Join the Army.

GENEVA, May 17.—It is reported from Romanshorn, on Lake Constance, that since the death of Count Zeppelin, who was always supported by the Kaiser in his aerial plans, several employes in the Zeppelin factory at Friedrichshaven have been dismissed and ordered to join the army.

The framework of a large airship, which would have been finished in six weeks, according to ordinary work during the war, will not be completed for several months owing to lack of workmen. The general opinion at Friedrichshaven is that the German military authorities will construct no more Zeppelins. No further orders for building have been received.

Voice of The People

Correspondence under this heading containing or involving attacks on individuals or violent or extreme statements must to secure insertion be signed with writer's real name, the owner of which does assume the responsibility.

Editor, Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Will you allow me a little space in your valuable paper?

To the people of the City of Peterborough:

Does the City of Peterborough look for an increase or a decrease in population? It is my opinion they do not like to see strangers coming into this city to settle, as we arrived here a short while ago and tried to find a house to rent, but it has been in vain to get one; have been to see a dozen of agents who advertised houses to rent, but when you get there you are told, "I just rented it fifteen minutes ago. Now wouldn't you like to buy one?" But this isn't the worst. You are here three or four weeks and they hand you a bill for Poll Tax ($5.00), and ten days in which to pay it. I would like to know if this is the way to encourage strangers into a town. Why, it is simply shameful. Go to any other town and they give you at least three months before handing you any tax bill. You go to Montreal or Quebec. They never bother you until you are a resident for a year, and then it is $2.00, not $5.00. And then you can enjoy yourself on Sunday, after working all week, as here you cannot even take a car ride. I know Sunday is a day of rest and they certainly rest here. It is just driving people out of this place. Take a man with wife and family, paying $16.00 to $25.00 a week for board, and $2.00 per week for washing, or a married man alone, pays $6.00 per week for board, $1.00 for washing, 50c for mending; then his smoking and other expenses. What has he got out of $18.00 a week, about $6.50 to send home. Now, why can't your city wait until a person is here three months and then charge taxes? Another horrible affair happened a couple of days ago: A poor French fellow who never read the newspaper, or at least, the English paper, not knowing it was wrong to get under the influence of liquor going through the Ontario towns happened to step into a hotel, waiting on a train to bring him to another town, where he was getting a good position, was looked up to serve time, which will be the cause of losing a good position. It is pretty dear payment for a single mistake, when he could have been locked up for the day and given a lecture and sent on to his destination. A good turn is always remembered.

People of Peterborough, give a welcome hand to those who are trying to settle here and help them. Do not be trying to kill the hen that laid the golden egg, always.

Thanking you, I remain,

ERIH.

WOODSTOCK, May 17.—The local bowling club will do their part in the movement for greater production. SHE GAINED 16 POUNDS.

Mrs. George Bradshaw, Harlowe, Ont., writes: "I was troubled for many years with weak watery blood and dreary, tired nerves, headaches, dizziness and sinking spells, and was in fact, a complete wreck. Doctors told me my heart and kidneys were diseased and gave me up but by using 10 boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I have been cured of many of my old complaint and gained 16 pounds in weight."

PICTURE FRAMING COMPANY HAD BARN FULL OF PICTURES

A test case under the Transient Traders' by-law was heard by Magistrate Dumble, this afternoon, in Chief Thompson's charge against Louis Decker of the United Art Company of Toronto. The evidence revealed the fact that the Company had rolled up a big business in picture enlarging and framing. Detective Mugher stated that Fontaine's livery barn was full of the completed pictures awaiting delivery.

The specific charge claimed that Decker should have had a city license as a transient trader.

Mrs. Hazel Ferguson testified that she had signed an order to have three photographs enlarged and framed. She made a deposit of 50 cents on each picture, paying $1.50 for the three of them. She was satisfied with the proofs and ordered three pictures, paying another deposit of $6.95 on them.

When Decker called recently, he said he had the finished pictures but demanded the balance due on them before he would deliver them. Witness said she didn't have the money that day, and she didn't get the pictures.

Mrs. Gertrude McIlwain further established the fact of the Art Company's local business here. She admitted signing an order for enlargement and framing, at a total of $5.88 for one picture, but she though the selection of the frame would be optional when the completed picture was presented.

Heavy Shipments of Grain

The extent of the grain movement over the G. T. R. from Midland through Peterborough has been increasing rapidly this week. Freights are moving west with empty cars, and returning east loaded with wheat. On Thursday, eight trains averaging twenty cars each, passed through the city from Midland, and five trains of empties also registered at the local station. This was a total of thirteen trains both ways in twenty-four hours. Up to six o'clock last night five grain trains had gone east and five of "empties" west. Thus during forty-two hours twenty-three trains engaged in hauling wheat from Midland, passed through Peterborough. This is exceptionally heavy traffic, and indicates the efforts of the G.T.R. to handle the grain.

Artillery Now Equal In Importance To Infantry Captain Reilly Declares

United States Army and National Guard Are Sadly Lacking in That Vital Branch of the Service, He Says, Citing the Example of France and England at Beginning of War.

HOW ROUMANIA SUFFERED

(By Captain Henry J. Reilly.)

WASHINGTON, May 19.— During the present war artillery has changed from a mere auxiliary, which aided the infantry, more or less, and too frequently according to the infantry, less than more, to an arm of equal importance with the infantry, which cannot advance except as the result of a proper artillery preparation prior to, and a proper supporting artillery fire throughout, the advance. It cannot hold its own even in an intrenched position against an attacking enemy without artillery support. Its successful advance is limited to the distance to which the friendly artillery can fire.

This enormous amount of artillery fire throughout an action entails a tremendous consumption of ammunition. Even with numerous artillery, plentifully supplied with ammunition, the proper support cannot be given the infantry unless the artillery has smashed all of its targets. This means that the artillery must be so efficiently handled that it can hit.

French Guns Outranged.

The French started the war with a smaller number of light field guns than had the Germans. However, these guns were better mechanically and were handled more expertly. The result was that the enemy infantry and light field artillery would have had a very hard time of it had it not been that the Germans brought into the field a considerable number of heavy field guns which outranged the French light ones. The French army in the field was practically unsupplied with heavy field guns. Such heavy field guns as existed in the country were mostly of an old type. Need for heavy field artillery was so great that these guns, even though not of the most modern design, had to be sent to the front.

It was admitted a short while ago in the French Chamber of Deputies that the advantage which the Germans had gained by starting with a numerous heavy field artillery was so great that in spite of the efforts of the French in this direction, the percentage of modern guns in the German heavy field artillery was several times as great as that which obtains in the French heavy field artillery.

British Were Poorly Equipped.

The British started poorly equipped as to the total number of guns, with the result that for some time the infantry had to be subjected to terrible artillery fire which their own artillery was unable to cope with. In other words, until the truth of the matter was forced home on the civilians controlling the government, until the many necessary guns could be built; the large quantity of ammunition made and the large number of officers and soldiers to handle the new artillery trained, the British infantry had to pay in many thousands of lives and in many thousands of wounded for the lack of artillery.

Lloyd George in a recent speech has brought out in a striking fashion the saving of human life and suffering which has resulted from the increased number and efficiency of the British artillery now being used in France by comparison with artillery conditions as they obtained during the Battle of the Somme last year and in the fights prior to that battle.

How Roumania Suffered.

In the Roumanian campaign last year the Roumanian army had 12,000 infantry and twenty-four guns per division. The Germans had from 8,000 to 9,000 infantry, and it is said, though as yet unverified, 177 guns per division. It is an open secret that losses of the German infantry in the Roumanian campaign were not very large and were far less than those of the Roumanian infantry. General Iliescu, the Roumanian Chief of Staff, in the interview which he gave to the New York Herald stated that the German artillery fire was so overwhelming that the Roumanian artillery and the Roumanian infantry trenches were soon smothered by it, with the result that the German infantry was able to advance with comparative ease.

The only nation that entered the war supplied with trench mortars, or as they are now generally called trench artillery, was Germany. These mortars, because of the large charge of high explosive which they throw and the high angle fire which enables their projectiles to drop into the bottom of trenches, are the bane of the existence of the infantry soldier.

The Allies' Heavy Loss.

Both the French and British infantry had to pay a heavy cost in life and suffering while waiting for their governments to furnish them with similar weapons. In general it may be said that when the war started the prevalent idea as to field artillery was to have a certain number of light field guns, as a rule from 120 to 144, with a few batteries of heavy field guns attached to each army corps of about 24,000 infantry. At present the total number of guns of all kinds, including trench mortars, belonging to an army corps is almost double what it was.

The amount of field artillery which we have for our regular army is just about that which France and Germany had for the same number of troops prior to the war. The proportion of artillery to the National Guard infantry is considerably below this figure. This means that we are deficient in light field artillery for the regular army and the National Guard. We have so little heavy field artillery for these forces that it could almost be said we have none. We have no trench artillery whatsoever. We have no artillery of any kind for the new national army which is to be raised as soon as Congress passes the Conscription bill.

While our industrial resources are great, and therefore it is only a question of time until we can produce guns and the ammunition, all this material will be of no value unless we have the men and officers to handle them efficiently. This means to hit the targets aimed at. That can only come as the result of long and hard training.

WOMEN'S AILMENTS

Come From Heart and Nerves

Young girls budding into womanhood, who suffer from pains and headaches, and whose face is pale and blood watery, will find Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills build them up.

Women, between the ages of 40 and 50, who are nervous, subject to hot flushes, feeling of pins and needles, smothering feeling, shortness of the breath, palpitation of the heart, etc., are tided over this trying time of their lives by the use of this remedy.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have a wonderful effect on a woman's system, making pains and aches vanish, bringing color to the pale cheek, and sparkle to the eye.

The old, worn out, tired out, languid feelings give place to strength and vitality, and life again seems like living.

Mrs. Alfred Winter, Castor, Alta., writes: "I should like every woman who is suffering from nerves or heart trouble to know how much Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have helped me. For two years I kept a hired girl and was doctoring all the time. After having taken four boxes of your pills I am able to do all my own work. I would especially recommend them to women between 40 and 50, as at that time they are more liable to be far from well. One of my neighbors knows how they helped me, and she is now using them."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c., or three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

ARTIST ENDS LIFE WITH "GAS MASK"

Rubber Shoe Used by John De Yongh in Suicide at His Home in New Rochelle.

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y., May 19. —John De Yongh, portrait painter, converted a rubber shoe into a gas mask by inserting a tube through a hole in the sole and placing the open port over his face. He turned on the gas, stretched himself out on his bed, without any clothes on, and was dead when found by his sister-in-law, Mrs. S. B. De Yongh, in his home at No. 42 Leland avenue.

Mr. De Yongh, who was sixty-one years old, was not married. He painted pirtraits in oil, one being that of William H. Taft, which was reproduced extensively in his first Presidential campaign.

He had been associated with a brother in the importing business in New York, but the war greatly interfered with the business and caused him to worry.

BORDEN TELLS HOUSE ABOUT WAR COUNCIL

Says That Time Did Not Hang Heavy on His Hands—Sir Edward Kemp Thinks Bruce Report May Be at Sea Bottom.

NEW ISSUES ARISE

OTTAWA, May 19.—Before the orders of the day were called yesterday Hon. Frank Oliver asked the Minister of Militia whether the report of Dr. Bruce, in reply to the Baptie report had been received. Sir Edward Kemp said he had not received it and declared that he didn't know where Dr. Bruce was.

"He is in France," said Sir Robert Borden. Sir Edward stated that the report might have been on one of the vessels sunk by a submarine.

Sir Robert Borden was applauded when he rose to make his announcement regarding the results of the conferences held in England. The proposed gathering was designated the Imperial War Cabinet, where the Dominion and Imperial members might take Council.

"WITH LIGHTS OUT."

The Parliament was summoned at an earlier date than at first proposed but owing to delay in the arrival of representatives of South Africa and India, it was postponed until later. The departure of the Canadian members was made at a time when a ruthless submarine campaign had been launched and the ship put forth through fog and mist with lights out, a course which in peace time would have been dangerous and even criminal.

The Australian representative had not been able to arrive, and under the circumstances the Ministry was acquainted from day to day with the proceedings of the conference.

The Canadian representative did not find time heavy on their hands. Hospitals had been visited and troops in France and deliverations had been carried on with regard to war work generally.

After the Imperial War Cabinet had been launched it was decided that there were other matters not so directly connected with the war which could be discussed at conference.

CANADA'S REASON.

The Imperial War Cabinet had its genesis out of the war and the position which the self-governing Dominions bore in the war having no say in matters of peace or war, but engaged with Great Britain in the war.

"We were connected with this war," said Sir Robert, "because we knew that the case was one which transcended any other cause on which med had ever gone to war. The overseas Dominions of its empire realizing that they were vitally concerned, had summoned to this war more than a million men. Therefore it was thought desirable that the Dominions must have a say in the question of peace, and also in that co-operation. Hence the first Imperial Cabinet, which the flexibility of the British constitution made it possible to create."

NOT A TIME FOR PRECEDENT.

In taking the course taken, Lloyd George had absolutely disregarded precedent, but as he had said himself this was not a time to regard too rigidly precedent and custom. This war made it absolutely necessary that the Dominions should have a voice, and that being so an Imperial Council was necessary.

Sir Robert then gave some developments of the conference and council. The Imperial War Cabinet differentiated from the British War Cabinet, so that for the first time in London there were two Cabinets advising the Crown. The idea now had so impressed itself on the Imperial authorities and people that a definite offer had been made that this system should develop into usage, and that annually at least there should gather a Cabinet which should deal with matters Imperial in distinction to those matters more directly relating to British affairs.

The future of the proposal would be a Cabinet of Governments and not of Ministers. That proposal would carry many advantages to the overseas Dominions, because it was not proposed that the Imperial authorities should act first and consult the Dominions after. In any matter affecting the Empire the Dominions would first be consulted (applause). The representatives of the overseas Dominions in the Cabinet would be their Prime Ministers. "It is idle to have an Imperial Cabinet unless those sitting round the Council Board are on the responsible postion of being able to carry out that proposed."

"It seems to me," said the Premier, "that many of the difficulties in connection with Imperial relations may be removed by the proposal of Lloyd George, which do not sacrifice in the slightest degree the autonomy of self-government enjoyed by the overseas Dominions. The representatives attend for co-operation, but no action can be taken excepting through the Parliament of the Dominions."

THE MARKETS FOR THE WEEK

The following comment on the market situation as regards food stuffs, appeared in Canadian Grocer this week:

Flour is again the commodity in which the heaviest advances have taken place during the week, the increase amounting to $1.50 per barrel and creating a record price that a few months back would have been thought unbelievable. Rolled oats and corn products have been in higher market as a result of high prices prevailing for the grains. Sugar is holding in steady market with more favourable reports of production on the Island of Cuba continuing to come forward.

Meat Holds Steady.

Meats of all kinds held in a steady position, and there was a tendency toward lower prices in butter. Eggs were firmer in price during the week, owing to the eagerness on the part of dealers to place them in storage. In Ontario the prices at producing points reached such levels that it became cheaper to bring eggs in from Chicago and pay the duty. Several cars of these eggs arrived during the week. The cheese market is uncertain, with the expectancy in certain quarters that lower prices will prevail.

There have been numerous advances in lines carried by grocers, included in the number being evaporated milk, baking powder, soaps, vinegar, cocoas, jams, soups, canned salmon, canned peas, cream of tartar, rice, tapioca, bread, beans. Declines have been recorded in whitefish and trout, due to the greater quantities arriving from the upper lakes. Pineapples were also lower in price during the week, as the season for heavy arrivals is now on. Business in grocery lines has been good, the greatest difficulty being to get sufficient stocks to meet the requirements of the trade.

CURIOUS SITUATION

An interesting and curious situation has arisen with reference to some of the men of the Royal Naval Division interned in Holland since the fall of Antwerp. Naturally, these include many footballers, some of whom are men of experience and repute. They are encamped at Groningen. The Netherlands Football Association, ever keen on the game, had an idea that interned players might be engaged as trainers to Dutch clubs and paid for their services without losing their rank as amateurs. At least so we are informed on unquestioned authority.

The Netherlands F. A. have received a letter from the Football Association saying that such a departure could not be made without violating their rules. Besides, the Army and Navy Football Association would have to be consulted, and that was not possible under present circumstances. To accede to such a request, even under the extraordinary conditions, would be playing fast and loose with the definition of an amateur.

Bathe Internally And Keep Well!

Nature has mightily equipped us all, old and young, to resist disease—but she requires that we give her a chance.

We give her no chance if we permit the Lower Intestines to be more or less clogged with accumulated waste. Yet that is a universal condition to-day, as is proven by the number of laxative drugs that are consumed.

You can help Nature in Nature's most effectual way by Internal Bathing, and in an easy, non-habit-forming way keep the Intestines as sweet and clean as Nature demands it to be for perfect health and super defence against contagion. Over half a million keen, brainy, healthy people testify to its results.

Mrs. C. G. M. (name on request) of Shrathroy, Ont., writes:

"I am pleased to have this opportunity of testifying to the merits of the J. B. L. Cascade. I have been using it now for a year with satisfactory results. I am an old woman, but my health is so improved that I have a renewed lease of life. You are at liberty to give my address to anyone privately who may desire to write to me regarding the Cascade."

Just call at Warne Drug Co., Peterborough and request free booklet, "Why Men of To-day Is Only 50 Per Cent. Efficient." The most effective device for Internal Bathing, The "J. B. L. Cascade" will also be shown and explained to you if you so desire. If you prefer, write for Booklet to Dr. Chas A. Tyrrell, 163 College street, Toronto.

Don't Despise The Peanut, But Try Some of These Recipes

More Nutrition in One Pound of Peanuts Than Two Pounds of Beefsteak Says Physician

New housekeepers realize how much nutrition is contained in the peanut, so generally known, but so seldom found on the table. A prominent physician is credited with saying that one pound of peanuts is more nutritious than two pounds of beefsteak and half a pound of butter. While this may be an exaggeration, it is true that many dainty and appetising dish es can be made with them, as people are just begnning to realise. The results will be found pleasing if following recipes are carefully followed.

PEANUT BISCUIT

Peanut Biscuit—One quart of flour, one quarter cupful of melted butter, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful of salt, one-half cupful of chopped nuts, sweet milk enough to wet up so as to roll out soft. Stir salt, nuts and baking powder into flour dry, then add part of the milk, stirring well with a knife; then all the butter, and then the rest of the milk. Roll out with as little kneading as possible, and bake immediately in a hot oven.

Peanut Buns—One cupful of milk one-half cupful of yeast, flour enough to make a batter; set warm at night. In the morning mix one cupful of sugar, one teaspoonful of melted butter, one of lard, two eggs, and add to the batter. Let it rise until quite light, then add flour to roll out to the thickness of a finger; spread on one cupful of currants, and one-half cupful of peanuts; moisten with the slightly beaten white of an egg; roll up, and cut off an inch in thickness. Put in pans to rise before baking in slow oven.

Would not be Without Zutoo Tablets At Any Cost

Such is the statement of Mr. A. O. Norton, of Boston, the largest Jack Manufacturer in the world. His voluntary testimonial regarding ZUTOO follows:

286 Congress St., Boston, Mass.

"I have been a sufferer from Headache since childhood and have used all, or nearly all the so-called 'cures' on the market. Some months since my attention was called to Zutoo Tablets and I have been using them ever since with the most gratifying results. I find they cure a 'sick' or 'nervous' headache in a few minutes and leave no bad effects. My family use them whenever needed with equally good results. I have frequently given them to friends who were suffering from Headache and they never failed to give quick relief. I always carry Zutoo Tablets in my grip on the road and WOULD NOT BE WITHOUT THEM AT ANY COST."

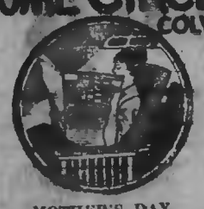
The HOME CIRCLE COLUMN



MOTHER'S DAY.

Sunday, May 13th, was "Mother's Day" in the United States and Canada. From ocean to ocean it was fittingly celebrated. As a matter of fact every day in the year should be "Mother's Day." Every day in the year we should show our mothers every mark of honour possible. These mothers have sacrificed much for us and given us their love and best thoughts. The debt we owe to them can never be repaid.

Abraham Lincoln's mother died when he was ten years old. His father then married a widow. This step-mother and not his father recognised the natural ability of her stepson. Borrowed books for him to read and bought others out of her hard-earned pennies. Every child has heard of Abraham Lincoln, but how few could tell the name of his step-mother, and yet only for the loving kindness of his step-mother Lincoln would probably never have been known outside of the county in which he lived. Her name was Mrs. Sally Johnston, nee Bush.

Edison was educated at his mother's knee. A few years at a country school completed his education. Cæsar was educated by his mother, Aurelia. The mother of Cardinal Gibbons was left in early life a widow, penniless and with six children to care for. Napoleon's father was a lazy Italian farmer. His Corsican mother made him the conqueror of Europe. Henry Ford's father wanted him to be a farmer, but his loving mother detected his ability in mending broken tools and her influence made him a machinist. It is hard to find a man of any note whose success cannot be traced to his mother and yet these mothers are seldom mentioned by the public press. One wiser than we has said: "Show me a great man and I will show you a great mother."

* * *

The years roll on, mother dearest, that brings me nearer to you, but you have never seemed very far away.

The wheels of time have left their tracks on all about us, but your dear face has remained just the same.

What you said to us and the memories of what you did for us come back to your children in the silent seasons of the night and the busy hours of the day, and never is there a sickness, nor a trial, nor a joy that you are not present in some form.

More than a thousand times since you have journeyed on we have said if only Mother were here as of old that we might say the word and do the thing we postponed or forgot.

JOHN WANNAMAKER.

I cannot name any time, day or place when I was converted. It was my mother's steady and constant influence that led me gradually along, and I grew into a religious life under her potent training and by the power of the Holy Spirit working through her agency. I feel now that the happy fifty-six years that I spent in the glorious ministry of the gospel of redemption is the direct outcome of that beloved's mother's prayers, teaching, example and holy influence.

My mother! It was she who put her arms around us when father died. It was she who made it possible for us to have even the small comforts of life, and when we were so poor that we scarcely had food to eat or fire to warm us, it was she who protected us. All that is good in my life, I think, has come from her; and I have never come near Northfield that I have not found myself walking nervously up and down the aisle of the car, anxious to reach home, that I might see my mother.

ONE WOMAN'S VIEWS IN FAVOUR OF DIVORCE

MISS KATHLEEN ELIZABETH STEACY, PROMINENT WRITER, HAS PLANS FOR NEW NATIONAL SYSTEM.

"It is impossible to consider, intelligently and adequately, the procedure under which divorce may be obtained unless we understand the conditions under which marriage may be contracted.

"Were all unions happy, and between persons fit and fitted for marriage and suited to each other, there would be no reason for a Court of Divorce and no cause for separation."

With the above introduction, Miss Kathleen Elizabeth Steacy brings forth strong arguments under the head, "Why we must Have Wider Divorce Laws," in "Everywoman's World's" section set apart every month as a "Woman's Parliament," for the purpose of giving the women of Canada a chance to voice their opinions of the important questions of the day.

Miss Steacy goes into detail, defining clearly the legal age of marriage, the conditions to be fulfilled, before the ceremony can be performed, the procedure of divorce, the causes, in her opinion, for the same, and the remedies. She then says:

"Here is the position of the problem of increasing [illegible] nation after the ravages of war—Conserve the home, the child, the family.

"How?"

"The Federal Government should sweep away all the present marriage laws and enact a simple, uniform and adequate law for all Canada. But this though it were done at once, affords no relief for those already married. Therefore other measures are needed—and drastic.

"Abolish the Courts of Divorce and ignore the Acts of Parliament; to apply to either carries a stigma with it—they both have a bad name.

"Lawyers should not be permitted to plead—for or against—in divorce suits. Naturally they desire to win for their client—who pays; and often the case becomes merely a duel of wit and learning between opposing counsel.

"Establish a Court of Domestic Adjustment in each province, composed of men and women, some of whom are medical. Give this court power to hear all cases between a man and his wife, and to grant divorce for serious and sufficient cause; adultery, desertion, cruelty, habitual drunkenness, non-support, venereal disease, insanity and incompatability, when no reconstruction of the home is possible. In a mixed court, the man's cause of complaint, the woman's, and the interest of the child would be considered. Does court or parliament consider the child now? The cost of this court must be borne by each province; its members should be appointed by and under the control of the Department of Education, and the department should endeavor to educate the child in the school, the youth in the college, the man and woman in the home, in knowledge which will aid them to a better understanding of marriage, a greater appreciation of the home, and a more loyal and patriotic citizenship."

Knit to "Nature's" Last

Ordinary hosiery is stretched into shape over a form while the hosiery is damp. It loses this shape when washed.

Mercury Hosiery retains its shape, because it is knitted to "Nature's Last" on new machines.

DID it ever occur to you that all teas are not "just tea?" In reality, there is as much difference in teas as there is in silks.

There are many varieties of tea: Indian teas, Ceylon teas, Java teas, China teas, etc.—Indians and Ceylons being the choicest of all.

These teas are all just ordinary garden teas, while Red Rose Tea is a blend of teas selected from as many as sixteen different gardens, using largely Assam-Indian teas skilfully blended with Ceylons. The result is that rich strength and smooth flavor that has made Red Rose Tea so popular.

One level teaspoonful of Red Rose Tea goes as far as a heaping teaspoonful of ordinary tea—that proves the true quality and economy of Red Rose.

VEGETABLE TURKEY.

Boil one pound of lentils thoroughly in a cloth with a little salt. Grease a baking dish and line the sides and bottom with the lentils. Make a stuffing with breadcrumbs, parsley, egg, etc., same as for turkey. Fill the dish with the stuffing and cover it with the rest of the lentils. Put a few bits of butter on the top and bake it forty minutes in the oven.—From the Gentlewoman, London.

CORNSTARCH PUDDING.

One cupful of milk, one cupful of water, five tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, one-half cupful of sugar, one teaspoonful of vanilla, one egg. Moisten the starch with the water and add to the milk. Bring to a boil and cook until clear, usually about five minutes. Take from the fire and add sugar, vanilla and yolk of egg. Pour into custard cups that have been previously rinsed in cold water. Set aside to mould. Serve with fruit sauce. In making the sauce use the white of the egg left over from the pudding, one cup of any kind of fruit pulp drained from the most of the juice, and sugar to sweeten. Place in a bowl and beat until light and frothy.

FINNAN HADDIE SCALLOP

Put finnan haddie in the kettle, skin side up, and cover with cold water. When it comes to a boil draw to back of stove and let simmer ten minutes. Remove from the fire and pick free from skin and bones. Into a baking dish put alternate layers cold boiled sliced potatoes an finnan haddie. Season with salt and pepper and dot over with bits of butter. Over all pour a white sauce and bake thirty minutes.

BEEF TIDBITS.

Cut with a pair of kitchen scissors bits of leftover beef or veal; cover them with cold water and put on the fire to simmer slowly for ten minutes. Mix a tablespoonful of flour with the same amount of shortening, add to the meat, let come to the boiling point and pour over triangles of well browned toast.

Newbro's Herpicide

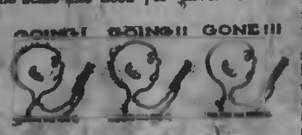
Aids Nature and Keeps the Scalp Clean From Dandruff

Reasonable care and effort are all that are required to enable almost any woman to have good hair. When the hair falls out and is stringy, unkempt, dry, brittle and generally unhealthy, the condition is nearly always due to dandruff.

Where the hair will grow naturally and luxuriantly, the scale-like accumulation must be removed and the dandruff eradicated. That is what Newbro's Herpicide does. It is an aid to nature. Herpicide keeps the scalp clean, adds a softness and lustre to the hair which indicates health. It not only prevents the hair from falling out but causes it to become one of woman's greatest charms.

Beautiful hair and lots of it may be the reward of every woman willing to devote a little personal effort to the use of the First and Original Germ-Remedy for Dandruff. Herpicide stops itching of the scalp. It has an exquisite odor.

You can obtain a trial size bottle and booklet telling all about the hair by sending ten cents in postage or silver to The Herpicide Co., Dept. S, Detroit, Mich.



Your dealer sells Herpicide in two sizes, 50 cents, and $1.00, and guarantees satisfactory results or money refunded. Insist upon having genuine Herpicide and not some "off brand" said to be "just as good" preparation. The substitute costs you just as much as the real article. Why take chances?

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER

Our Daily Bread: Ten years ago the following article was written by me, and was published in the Inter-Ocean of Chicago, the Toronto Globe, and the Svenska Amerikanska Posten, of Minneapolis. I was termed a crank then. How about it now?

"The Bible tells us about a certain lot of people who were adopting radical and progressive measures for bettering their condition but the food ran short and they got hungry and, as most people do under such circumstances they kicked up a row and blamed it all on the leaders of the party in power. Moses and Aaron were the men, and the committee told them that a vote of no confidence had been taken, and the people all told them that they would rather go back to the old regime of bondage where the fleshpots were full, and they could daily eat all they wanted. The leaders of the party, however, would not admit that they were to blame, but accused the man higher up.

"In order to prove that the plan mapped out for them was for the best good of them and their posterity, meat was supplied each evening and bread each morning, but they could have only in sufficient quantity for a day's supply, except than on the sixth day a double portion was allowed so that there would be enough to last over Sunday. Well, you all know the story—ought to know it anyway.

"The application of the daily annual supply has continued down to the present, but we of this western continent had never noticed it until the steamship, railroads, telegraph and telephone woke us up to the fact that humanity is one family and all should have their due proportion of the eatables. Did you ever stop to figure it out as to how many mouths there are to feed on the surface of this earth and then divide that number by the number of bushels of cereals of all kinds grown each year? If you do, you will find that in case the supply did not grow for a single year a majority of the people would perish.

"Yes, of course I know that wheat harvest is going on in some part of the world all the time. Each month in the year brings its supply but the total yield of all the cereals grown upon the face of the earth between January 1st and December 1st of any year would not feed the people for 18 months and leave seed for replanting. Knowledge of this fact is what enables the speculators to get a corner on the market. The people must have food or die. Pay my price, and live, says the speculator.

"Isn't it time for the people of the world to wake up to the fact that a universal police system, under one federation or general government, would work for the betterment of all mankind, and would increase the numbers of producers of daily bread? The best specimens of physical manhood all nations are now required for standing or lying around, loafing armies. Instead of producing, these strong, healthy men, eat the food produced by the rest, and they are also clothed and sheltered. These same men could produce sufficient for not only their own needs, but for the sustenance of many thousands of others as well and lose none of their efficiency as defenders of their homes.

"By disbanding all armies and establishing a universal police system, requiring every male person to devote a certain time between the age of 16 to 20 years to physical training and drill in the national guards or federation police service, all of the tremendous force, now worse than wasted in the loafing, destructive armies of the world could be turned into the production of daily bread.

"When I say that the amount of cereals grown would not last over 18 months, I am speaking of the entire world, not of the United States, but if the energy of the men now idly consuming daily bread were properly directed into an industrial army and should devote the average of five hours daily to the production of needful things, the whole world would be the richer and better. There is another idle army much smaller indeed, but handled in a much less intelligent manner and that is the army of lawbreakers.

"If a common laborer gets drunk, and commits a crime we punish him by placing him in a jail building that has cost the decent people many thousands of dollars, we supply cooks and waiters and janitors to wait on him, serve his meals in time, keep him warm and comfortable, while his wife who needed his daily wages must go out to earn bread for his children. Every prison for every offence should be an industrial enterprise and every person who sins against society should be placed at work as soon as confined therein, and the result of that labor should after deducting the exact exact cost of his keep, should be placed to his credit and if he has any one dependent upon him for support, the the money should be used for that purpose, and he should be charged with the amount so spent.

"The plan of allowing the state to keep the profits earned by prisoners in penitentiaries and allowing county jail prisoners to do nothing, is not just to the innocent family of the criminal, while a knowledge of the fact that he was earning the daily bread for his family would be a great factor in changing the attitude of the prisoner to his labor.

"The men of the army, if it must be maintained, should be taught trades, professions, arts, and crafts so that when the term of their enlistment is over they are not helpless but are competent to at once engage in useful work that will earn their daily bread."

I will gladly answer all inquiries for information on health subjects from readers of this publication if the same are addressed to Home Health Club, 5030 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago, Ill. Send full name and address with 4 cents in postage.

Dear Doctor: I take the liberty to address you for I wish to ask two or three questions, and I know of no one so competent as you to answer them. I have often seen it stated that sour milk was a great stomach corrective and conducive to longer life. Do you believe anything in it, and how long should the milk be kept before using it? What kind of a crock kept in? How often used, and how much in quantity each time

L. H.

(Answer). Sour milk, thick or clabbered, is a great stomach corrective, and one or two glassfuls can be taken to advantage at meal time. Milk should always be taken, either sweet or clabbered, never when turned enough to taste sour, but is still thin liquid; neither should it be taken when so sour that it becomes watery. Buttermilk is also a most excellent article of food and like sour milk, contains a good deal of nourishment. The buttermilk should be taken sweet however and not drank after it is 24 hours old, especially in warm weather. If it is to be used as a cure for Obesity and Rheumatism a pint should be taken every 2 hours and absolutely no food taken for several days and weeks if possible. If used as a food only 1 or 2 tumblerfuls at each meal is sufficient. Milk should always be kept in new tin or earthern crocks.

Fine Ginghams Combined With Silks in Summer Suits

Draperies in Afternoon Frocks

NEW YORK, May 19.— To keep pace with Fashion, one must be ever on the alert in these days when there is constantly something new appearing. We do not look for any change in the silhouette, for that has been finally settled, at least for the coming season, but there are countless important minor details always turning up which make the game of keeping up with the mode a very interesting one. Almost each day something new is brought to the attention; a certain material suddenly rises into prominence, a new way of draping a skirt is devised, and sundry novel accessories appear upon the scenes and are quickly taken up with enthusiasm.

Draped Styles Are Again in Vogue.

In opposition to the frocks that are absolutely straight in line, there are many ways of draping skirts to give that slight puffiness about the hips which is now one of the accepted modes in the dressier type of frock for afternoon and evening wear. One of the latest ways is by gathering the straight lower section of a skirt to a yoke, and leaving the sides free to form looped draperies which fall very gracefully into position when the soft pliable materials are used. An illustration of this charming style is shown in the sketch. The dress is of pongee trimmed with narrow bands of ribbon. The waist of this costume is made with kimono sleeves of the loose, baggy type, the kind that were in fashion some time ago. The unusual V-shaped collar and flaring cuffs add the note of distinction which all such simple styles require.

Sometimes long, straight tunics or apron effects take the place of draperies in frocks of silk, chiffon or Georgette. A beautiful dress of white satin for a bride was made with a long pleated apron of fine white net edged with white glass beads. The transparent glass beads are now being used for the best work, which is strongly in evidence.

Ginghams for Summer Suits and Dresses.

Bright, colourful ginghams in very fine qualities have risen into prominence and are used in fashioning not only separate blouses and skirts, but also entire summer dresses and suits. In making suits, the latest fad has been to combine gingham with pongee and other sports silks. A skirt of gingham is used with a silk coat which has the collar and cuffs, and sometimes, pockets, of gingham. A surprising combination, but distinctly effective when one gets used to the idea! In other instances, plaid and plain ginghams are used to make the popular middy dresses with slip-over blouses and pleated skirts. With the plaid used for the skirt and to trim the [illegible] a plain kind is used, usually attractive for summer wear. Ginghams are cool and may always be kept looking fresh.

The separate skirt of plaid or checked gingham, to wear with white voile and batiste waists, is also a pleasing novelty for summer. The skirts are sometimes made with belts of silk in some bright colour matching one of the colours in the plaid or stripes as the case may be. Smart gingham blouses are trimmed with white piqué collars and cuffs, and buttonholed round with the piqué.

A PAGE OF SPECIAL INTEREST TO EVERY WOMAN

DID it ever occur to you that all teas are not "just tea?" In reality, there is as much difference in teas as there is in silks.

There are many varieties of tea: Indian teas, Ceylon teas, Java teas, China teas, etc.—Indians and Ceylons being the choicest of all.

These teas are all just ordinary garden teas, while Red Rose Tea is a blend of teas selected from as many as sixteen different gardens, using largely Assam-Indian teas skilfully blended with Ceylons. The result is that rich strength and smooth flavor that has made Red Rose Tea so popular.

One level teaspoonful of Red Rose Tea goes as far as a heaping teaspoonful of ordinary tea—that proves the true quality and economy of Red Rose.

VEGETABLE TURKEY.

Boil one pound of lentils thoroughly in a cloth with a little salt. Grease a baking dish and line the sides and bottom with the lentils. Make a stuffing with breadcrumbs, parsley, egg, etc., same as for turkey. Fill the dish with the stuffing and cover it with the rest of the lentils. Put a few bits of butter on the top and bake it forty minutes in the oven.—From the Gentlewoman, London.

CORNSTARCH PUDDING.

One cupful of milk, one cupful of water, five tablespoonfuls of cornstarch, one-half cupful of sugar, one teaspoonful of vanilla, one egg. Moisten the starch with the water and add to the milk. Bring to a boil and cook until clear, usually about five minutes. Take from the fire and add sugar, vanilla and yolk of egg. Pour into custard cups that have been previously rinsed in cold water. Set aside to mould. Serve with fruit sauce. In making the sauce use the white of the egg left over from the pudding, one cup of any kind of fruit pulp drained from the most of the juice, and sugar to sweeten. Place in a bowl and beat until light and frothy.

FINNAN HADDIE SCALLOP

Put finnan haddie in the kettle, skin side up, and cover with cold water. When it comes to a boil draw to back of stove and let simmer ten minutes. Remove from the fire and pick free from skin and bones. Into a baking dish put alternate layers cold boiled sliced potatoes an finnan haddie. Season with salt and pepper and dot over with bits of butter. Over all pour a white sauce and bake thirty minutes.

BEEF TIDBITS.

Cut with a pair of kitchen scissors bits of leftover, beef or veal; cover them with cold water and put on the fire to simmer slowly for ten minutes. Mix a tablespoonful of flour with the same amount of shortening, add to the meat, let come to the boiling point and pour over triangles of well browned toast.

Newbro's Herpicide

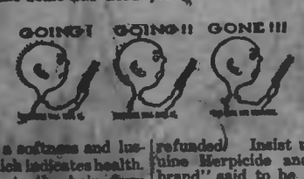
Aids Nature and Keeps the Scalp Clean From Dandruff

Reasonable care and effort are all that are required to enable almost any woman to have good hair. When the hair falls out and is stringy, uneven, dry, brittle and generally unsightly, the condition is nearly always due to dandruff.

Where the hair will grow naturally and luxuriantly, the scale-like accumulation must be removed and the cause of dandruff eradicated. That is what Newbro's Herpicide does. It is an aid to nature. Herpicide keeps the scalp clean, adds a softness and lustre to the hair which indicates health. It not only prevents the hair from falling out but causes it to become one of woman's greatest charms.

Beautiful hair and lots of it may be the reward of every woman willing to devote a little personal effort to the use of the First and Original Germ-Remedy for Dandruff. Herpicide stops itching of the scalp. It has an exquisite odor.

You can obtain a trial size bottle and booklet telling all about the hair by sending ten cents in postage or silver to The Herpicide Co., Dept. 8, Detroit, Mich.



Your dealer sells Herpicide in two sizes, 50 cents and $1.00, and guarantees satisfactory results or money refunded. Insist upon having genuine Herpicide and not some "off brand" said to be "just as good" preparation. The substitute costs you just as much as the real article. Why take chances?

HOME HEALTH CLUB

By DR. DAVID H. REEDER

Our Daily Bread: Ten years ago the following article was written by me, and was published in the Inter-Ocean of Chicago, the Toronto Globe, and the Svenska Amerikanska Posten, of Minneapolis. I was termed a crank then. How about it now?

"The Bible tells about a certain lot of people who were adopting radical and progressive measures for bettering their condition but the food ran short and they got hungry and, as most people do under such circumstances they kicked up a row and blamed it all on the leaders of the party in power. Moses and Aaron were the men, and the committee told them that a vote of no confidence had been taken, and the people all told them that they would rather go back to the old regime of bondage where the fleshpots were full, and they could daily eat all they wanted. The leaders of the party, however, would not admit that they were to blame, but accused the man higher up.

"In order to prove that the plan mapped out for them was for the best good of them and their posterity, meat was supplied each evening and bread each morning, but they could have only in sufficient quantity for a day's supply, except than on the sixth day a double portion was allowed so that there would be enough to last over Sunday. Well, you all know the story—ought to know it anyway.

"The application of the daily annual supply has continued down to the present, but we of this western continent had never noticed it until the steamship, railroads, telegraph and telephone woke us up to the fact that humanity is one family and all should have their due proportion of the eatables. Did you ever stop to figure it out as to how many mouths there are to feed on the surface of this earth and then divide that number by the number of bushels of cereals of all kinds grown each year? If you do you will find that in case the supply did not grow for a single year a majority of the people would perish.

"Yea, of course I know that wheat harvest is going on in some part of the world all the time. Each month in the year brings its supply but the total yield of all the cereals grown upon the face of the earth between January 1st and December 1st of any year would not feed the people for 18 months and leave seed for replanting. Knowledge of this fact is what enables the speculators to get a corner on the market. The people must have food or die. Pay my price, and live, says the speculator.

"Isn't it time for the people of the world to wake up to the fact that a universal police system, under one federation or general government would work for the betterment of all mankind, and would increase the numbers of producers of daily bread? The best specimens of physical manhood all nations are now required for standing or lying around, loafing armies. Instead of producing, these strong, healthy men, eat the food produced by the rest, and they are also clothed and sheltered. These same men could produce sufficient for not only their own needs, but for the sustenance of many thousands of others as well and lose none of their efficiency as defenders of their homes.

"By disbanding all armies and establishing a universal police system, requiring every male person to devote a certain time between the age of 16 to 20 years to physical training and drill in the national guards or federation police service, all of the tremendous force, now worse than wasted in the loafing, destructive armies of the world could be turned into the production of daily bread.

"When I say that the amount of cereals grown would not last over 18 months, I am speaking of the entire world, not of the United States, but if the energy of the men now idly consuming daily bread were properly directed into an industrial army and should devote the average of five hours daily to the production of needful things, the whole world would be the richer and better. There is another idle army much smaller indeed, but handled in a much less intelligent manner and that is the army of lawbreakers.

"If a common laborer gets drunk, and commits a crime we punish him by placing him in a jail building that has cost the decent people many thousands of dollars, we supply cooks and waiters and janitors to wait on him, serve his meals in time, keep him warm and comfortable, while his wife who needed his daily wages must go out to earn bread for his children. Every prison for every offence should be an industrial enterprise and every person who sins against society should be placed at work as soon as confined therein, and the result of that labor should after deducting the exact exact cost of his keep, should be placed to his credit and if he has any one dependent upon him for support, the the money should be used for that purpose, and he should be charged with the amount so spent.

"The plan of allowing the state to keep the profits earned by prisoners in penitentiaries and allowing county jail prisoners to do nothing, is not just to the innocent family of the criminal, while a knowledge of the fact that he was earning the daily bread for his family would be a great factor in changing the attitude of the prisoner to his labor.

"The men of the army, if it must be maintained, should be taught trades, professions, arts, and crafts so that when the term of their enlistment is over they are not helpless but are competent to at once engage in useful work that will earn their daily bread."

BOY TRIES TO BURN SCHOOL

HOPING TO EVADE CLASS WORK HE CONFESSES TO SETTING FIRE THREE TIMES.

Richard Hippe, 13 years old, of 203 West 115th street, New York, confessed that he had attempted four times to burn down Public School No. 10, during the past three weeks, because he thought that the destruction of the building would enable him to escape his school work. He worked out the plan, he said, while lying in bed, and finally induced his brothers Frederick, 11 years old, and Karl, 3 years old, to aid him in acting as lookouts.

The fires were started in the hallways at times when the pupils had finished their class work and were waiting to be dismissed, and the boys used the contents of the waste-paper baskets for fuel. All of the fires were put out before they proved a serious menace to the building. John Elliott the superintendent, who has been watching for the incendiary, caught the boys. Richard and Frederick were turned over to the Children's Society and Karl was sent home.

Sunday Sermon For Those Who Do Not Go To Church

(By JAMES SUTHERLAND)

ZACCHEUS, THE CHIEF PUBLICAN.

The name of Zaccheus speaks him a Jew. He was rich. Christ had shown him how hard it is for rich people to enter into the kingdom of God, yet presently produces an instance of one as found recorded in the 19th chapter of St. Luke's gospel, which we have chosen to base our remarks upon.

Zaccheus had a great desire to see Jesus. To get his curiosity gratified in this matter, because he was small in stature, and when he heard that Jesus and his disciples were coming that way, he ran ahead and climbed up into a sycamore tree. Those who sincerely desire to see Christ, will break through difficulty and opposition, and be willing to take pains to see him.

His getting into the tree made him conspicuous. Had he not been so low of stature he would not have done so. Even the imperfections of our persons may become subservient to the grace of God in our eternal salvation. Christ invited himself to Zaccheus' house; wherever Christ comes he opens the heart and inclines it to receive him. See how Christ went before him with the blessings of his goodness and outdid his expectations. He that has a mind to know Christ shall be known of him. Our Lord bid him make haste and come down. Those whom Christ calls must come down; must humble themselves and make haste and come down; they must not hesitate; the call needs no consideration whether he should welcome such a guest. Zaccheus was overjoyed to have such honour. His receiving of Jesus into his house was an indication and token of his receiving him into his heart. We may well receive him joyfully who brings all good along with him, and when he takes possession of the soul opens springs of joy there which shall flow to eternity.

The censorious Jews murmured saying that he was gone to be a guest with a sinful man. Was it not Christ's errand into the world to seek and to save men that are sinners? Whither should the physician go but to the sick? Commentators in general rightly refer our Lord's knowledge of the name and the circumstances of Zaccheus to his divine omniscience. Zaccheus gave proofs publicly that he was now a true convert. Verse 8. He does not expect to be justified by his works, as the Pharisee, but by his good works he will by the grace of God evidence the sincerity of his faith and repentance. He stood; — which denotes his saying it deliberately and with solemnity, in the nature of a vow, to God. He addressed himself to Christ in it; not to the people. What we do that is good, we must do as unto him. He makes it appear that there is a change in his heart, and that it is true repentance, for there is a change in his way.

Zaccheus had a good estate, and whereas he had hitherto been laying up treasure for himself, and thus doing hurt to himself, he resolves that for the future he will do good to others. Not, I will give it by my will when I die, but I do give it now, even the half of my goods. This he mentions here as a fruit of his repentance, for there is a change in his way. It well becomes converts to God to be charitable to the poor. Zaccheus was conscious that he had gotten some wealth by indirect and unlawful means, and of what he had gotten by such means he promises to make restitution, to restore four fold. This was the restitution a thief gave. Exodus 22:1.

True penitents will not only own themselves in general guilty before God but will particularly reflect upon that which has been their own iniquity and which by reason of their business and employment in the world, has most easily beset them. He had done wrong by false accusation; this was the temptation of the publicans of which John the Baptist had given them warning when he addressed the publicans and the soldiers.. They had influence with the government which gave them opportunity. He does not say, If I be sued and compelled to it, I will make restitution; (some are honest when they cannot help it); but he will do it voluntarily. Observe that he does not think that his giving half of his estate to the poor will atone for the wrong which he hath done. God hates robbery for burnt-offerings, and we must firstly do justice, and then love mercy, and we are not to reckon that our own which we have not come honestly by. We may suppose he did not give half to the poor till restitution was made. This declaration clears his character from the aspersions of the multitude. He, who after giving half of his goods to the poor and restoring fourfold for the injuries he had committed, would have property left, could not have been guilty of many deliberate acts of injustice.

Zaccheus is declared to be a happy man now he is turned from sin to God. Now that he is saved from his sins, from the guilt of them, from the power of them, all the benefits of salvation are his. He is a new creature in Christ Jesus—old things are passed away and all things are become new; he has been translated from the kingdom of darkness into the kingdom of God's dear Son, and is in the narrow way that leads to life eternal.

Christ not only saved Zaccheus, but is come to his house bringing his salvation with him. He came not to call the righteous but sinners to repentance—to seek and to save the lost. He is and will be the Author of Eternal Salvation to all that own him. Zaccheus being a publican was deemed a heathen, but being a true penitent he is as good a son of Abraham as if he had never been a publican. When we see fruits meet for repentance we may conclude that salvation is come to the sinner; that he is become a Son of Abraham by faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, and may hope that mercy will also be extended to his family also.

What Christ has done to make Zaccheus happy was the great design of his coming into the world. The world was in a lost condition by the fall of man. He came to redeem and to save all who will accept his salvation. He came from heaven to earth to seek that which was lost. He had to pass through Jericho, just as he must needs pass through Samaria. Footsore, tired and weary he trod the weary wayside of this world seeking out the lost, bringing salvation to the poor outcasts of society. Sitting down by Jacob's well he gives us the most sublime discourse on the living water that ever fell from his lips.

When the Jews had heard these things spoken by Christ and heard Zaccheus they all murmured and said that he is gone to lodge with a man that is a sinner (revised version). Then Jesus added and spake a parable because he was night to Jerusalem and because that they supposed that the kingdom of God was to immediately appear. He said, therefore a certain nobleman went into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom, and to return. This parable is based on actual facts which we have not space here to explain. It is well for us to study the Redeemer's kingdom, our present, and future expectations regarding it. . The Jews expected an earthly king who would deliver them from under the Roman yoke, so Christ to remove these errors spake this parable. The nobleman signifies Christ himself ascending to heaven to sit on his throne as mediator till his second coming. The servants denote his professed disciples. The pound given to each to trade with represents something entrusted to each, in the proper use of which they may glorify their Lord, and prove themselves faithful servants during their abode on earth.

Those that are called to business for Christ he furnishes with the necessary gifts. On the other hand, from those to whom he gives power he expects service . The manifestation of the spirit is given to every man to profit withal. I Cor. 12:7. And as everyone has received the gift so let him minister the same. We must continue to mind our business till the Master comes, whatever opposition we may meet with. For only those who endure to the end shall be saved.

Yours sincerely,
James Sutherland.

ST. VITUS DANCE

Even the Most Severe Cases Can Be Cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

Is your child fidgety, restless, or irritable? Are the hands shaky or the arms jerky? Does the face twitch? Do the legs tremble or Dance, a nervous disease which is Dance, a nervous disease wihch is confined chiefly to young children, but which often affects highly-strung women, and sometimes men. St. Vitus Dance is caused by disordered nerves, due to poor blood, and is always cured by the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills which fill the veins with new, rich red blood, strengthening the nerves, and thus drawing out the disease. Here is proof:—Mrs. John A. Cumming, Lower Caledonia, N. S. says:—"When my daughter Myrtle was about nine years of age she became afflicted with St. Vitus Dance. The trouble ultimately became so bad that she could not hold anything in her hands, and had to be fed like a child. She could not even walk across the floor without help. She was treated for some time by a physician, but did not show any improvement. One day a neighbor said she had read of a case of St. Vitus Dance cured by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and we decided to give this medicine a trial. By the time the third box was used there was some improvement in her condition, and we continued giving her the pills for about a month longer when she was entirely cured, and has not since had the least return of the trouble.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills can be obtained from any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

JOFFRE PUNTS UPON WAITING FOR 'NEXT' IN BARBER SHOP.

CHICAGO, May 10. — A barber at the Chicago club to-day is telling a story to illustrate the democracy of Marshal Joffre. Two men were awaiting their turn to be shaved when the door to the shop swung open and the smiling face beneath the Marshal's cap appeared. The barbers and the men who were waiting begged the great Frenchman to climb immediately into a chair.

"But," said the barber, "do you think he would move in out of his turn? Not he! He just sat down, and insisted on waiting until he was 'next.'"

And Mrs. M. Ronan, the manicure, is pointing triumphantly to the hand that "Papa Joffre" squeezed as he left the shop.

ECZEMA AND SORE EYES.

"My boy, Frank, contract took chested and took a very severe cold," writes Mrs. D. Sherman, Minto, Man. "The many medicines used did not seem to benefit him, until we tried Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and found it to be exactly what was wanted to cure him." No treatment is so thorough and effective as a copy for sores and bronchitis.

HOUSECLEANING TIME.

Spring cleaning days are upon us. After the cleaning is over summer draperies are usually put up, summer rugs laid down and summer covering draped over the upholstered furniture.

House cleaning means a period of discomfort and inconvenience for the men, and worse still a time of exhaustion, both physical and nervous, for the women of the house. Of course, the woman who has plenty of servants to do her cleaning for her does not have to worry much about this problem of housecleaning. Almost all others, however, look forward with dread to this tiring time of general upheaval.

Any suggestions at all which serve to simplify this complex task are as a rule gratefully received by these housewives, who must do their own spring cleaning, but with the aid of a man, perhaps, to take up and beat rugs, etc. Every suggestion is worth trying once. At least, most women think so.

In the first place, though you may not realize it, the most tiring part of the cleaning is the stooping over to pick up rugs and to remove dust, etc., and stretching up to take down pictures, curtains, etc.

No wonder much fatigue follows, for both stooping over and stretching up bring into play muscles in the body which the average woman does not use from one spring cleaning to another.

Is it surprising then, after almost constant use for several days of unused muscles that the house cleaner should feel lame and exhausted all over?

To minimize the after effects of tiredness and sore muscles you must eliminate as far as possible the stooping and stretching. There are long handled mops, long handled brushes and brooms, which should save you most of the stooping.

Use your stepladder! Buy a small, light one which can be easily moved, and then use it for everything while you are cleaning.

Do not try to stretch up for anything, but climb upon your ladder, then move it and climb up again. Do away with all the reaching up that you can avoid.

Another suggestion for weary house cleaners is this: Leave all the windows wide open in the room where you are working and breathe deep every time you think of it.

Just as basketball players have their games divided into quarters, with a few minutes for relaxation in between, you housekeepers should give yourselves time every half hour or so to catch a few deep breaths, with your body in absolute repose. Even two or three minutes snatched from your work in this way will serve to rest and refresh you if you relax mentally and physically.

Very often an evening dress of transparent material will have a bodice contrasting in colour with the skirt.

AUTOINTOXICATION OR SELF-POISONING

The Dangerous Condition Which Produces Many Well Known Diseases.

HOW TO GUARD AGAINST THIS TROUBLE

"FRUIT-A-TIVES" — The Wonderful Fruit Medicine — will Protect You

Autointoxication means self-poisoning, caused by continuous or partial constipation, or insufficient action of the bowels.

Instead of the refuse matter passing daily from the body, it is absorbed by the blood. As a result, the Kidneys and Skin are overworked, in their efforts to rid the blood of this poisoning.

Poisoning of the blood in this way often causes Indigestion, Loss of Appetite and Disturbed Stomach. It may produce Headaches and Sleeplessness. It may irritate the Kidneys and bring on Pain in the Back, Rheumatism, Gout, and Rheumatic Pains. It is the chief cause of Eczema—and keeps the whole system unhealthy by the constant absorption into the blood of this refuse matter.

"Fruit-a-tives" will always cure Autointoxication or self-poisoning—as "Fruit-a-tives" acts gently on bowels, kidneys, and skin, strengthens the bowels and tones up the nervous system.

TIMMY FLYNN'S WATCH.

At last Timmy Flynn's desire to possess a watch was gratified. Upon his initial visit to the city he made the plunge and bought the massive nickled time-piece which the jeweler guaranteed to keep perfect time for one year. Long before the year had expired, however, Timmy returned to the shop, and with him took his cherished treasure, looking very tired and very sorry for itself.

The jeweler examined the watch and then shrugged his shoulders. "But you must have had an accident with it," he said.

"A small one to be sure, sir," reluctantly admitted Timmy. "About a month ago I was feedin' the pig and the watch fell into the trough."

"Then," snapped the jeweler, "you should have brought it back to me before."

"Sure, sir," replied Timmy, "I brought it as soon as I could. We only killed the pig yesterday."—Harper's Magazine.

YES! MAGICALLY! CORNS LIFT OUT WITH FINGERS

You simply say to the drug store man, "Give me a quarter of an ounce of freezone." This will cost very little but is sufficient to remove every hard or soft corn from one's feet.

A few drops of this new ether compound applied directly upon a tender or aching corn should relieve the soreness instantly, and soon the entire corn, root and all, dries up and can be lifted out with the fingers.

This new way to rid one's feet of corns was introduced by a Cincinnati man, who says that while freezone is sticky, it dries in a moment, and simply shrivels up the corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin.

Don't let father die of infection or lockjaw from whittling at his corns, but clip this out and make him try it.

LONDONERS MISS SINGING CANADIANS

Rise too Late to See Cheerful Outgoing Units—Hotel Guests do the Cheering

The movement of troops through London has become such a commonplace event that the man in the street hardly noticed the passing of a company or battalion. One thoroughfare which connects two of London's greatest railway terminals is used more extensively than any other for troop movements. As a rule the biggest detachments pass down this avenue in the early hours of the morning while the scrubwomen are polishing the door handles and the wheel traffic is just beginning its daily rumble.

Owing to the fact that Londoners as a rule are late risers they miss these early morning troop movements, but there are many residents of hotels along the line of march who never fail to turn out no matter what the hour and watch the columns of men until they disappear in the distance. The men begin a song the minute they get out of the trains and keep it up until they break ranks for the outgoing trains.

Cockeure Airmen

The heavy tramp, tramp of the service boots can be heard far up the street. Windows go up with a bang and curtains are pulled aside as the voices of the men precede them, the rhythm of the song punctuated by the clump of the boots. A company of Royal Flying Corps mechanics, youthful looking, clear eyed boys, is the first to pass. They carry a lighter kit than the other branches of the service and march with a quicker stride, and their little caps, smaller even than the Scotch bonnets, give them a cockeure air.

Canadians Join in Song

Following them comes a battery of Canadian artillerymen, apparently veterans going out for another go at the Huns. A sonorous bass voice that rises above the rest can be heard leading the singing of a song that was popular in Canada when the troops left in 1915. It is a peculiar fact, but the troops usually stick to the songs that were popular when they joined up. This Canadian unit was singing "Way Down in Tennessee" with as much enthusiasm as when the ballad first became a hit.

CANADIAN FISH PLEASES

Tommy in Trenches Likes Staple from the Pacific

The success of the Canadian fish rations recently issued to the home troops in England is a proof, if any were needed, of the salutary effect of such a diet, says the London Daily Mirror. This fish, cleaned and dressed and frozen within a few minutes of leaving the water, was sent over in steamers specially fitted with refrigerators. This scheme for the troops was first instituted by Sir Sam Hughes, and has been cordially adopted by our own authorities. Our "Tommies," whose hard work in the open air makes them capital trenchermen, heartily welcome fresh fish every Friday and cured haddock occasionally instead of bacon. Difficulties of getting freightage for the practically inexhaustible supplies of cod, hake, halibut, haddock and salmon from Canada and, further, the lack of cold storage in this country prevent such imports for the civil population. But these difficulties may be overcome. Then it would be possible, even though the freight be many times higher than the normal rate, to sell fresh Canadian halibut in London at 6d. per pound.

DANGERS OF WIRING

One of the Thrilling Jobs of the Advance

An officer writes: Mostly it is silent work. In the old days, when one had to drive a stake into the ground with heavy hammer blows, it must have been nerve-racking work. But now your stake is just a giant screw nail. You can make it wind its way into the earth with less noise even than a corkscrew in a bottle. Putting on the first coil might be regarded as easy. But when it comes to fastening on the sixth row, so that at every step you are enclosed waist high in long-pronged barbed wire, it becomes a feat at which the inexpert can only gape. The vicious barbs pass through their gloved hands like cloth; they twist it to its picket-like string; they step through the lines in their way as if they were lines of light. And all this on the frozen ground and in the difficult twilight of a veiled moon. Not a bleeding finger; not a tunic torn.

SAVED SERB. REGIMENT

Doctor from Overseas had Unexpected Chance to Serve

Captain Lionel Corkins, of Oklahoma City, had an interesting career in the Serbian service. Captain Corkins, who is a physician, at the outbreak of the war went to France, and hoped to obtain a commission in the Medical Corps there. His knowledge of the language was not sufficient, however, so he went to Serbia, where he received a commission. From that time he saw continuous service with the Serbian troops. During the retreat of the remnants of the Serbian army to the Grecian border, Captain Corkins said, his regiment, the Twenty-fourth, lost all its line officers and he took command. He took three hundred survivors of the regiment safely back.

Often Mistaken for V.C.

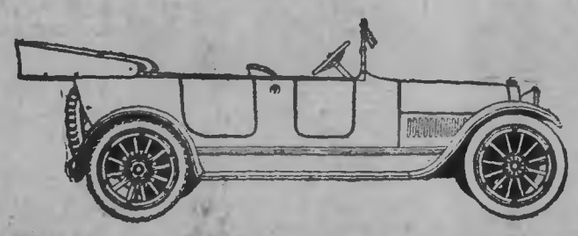
It is the custom of men discharged from the Army to wear their regimental badge on their coat lapel. Some of these badges, notably the Queen's Westminster Rifles and the King's Royal Rifles, consist of a cross with a piece of red cloth as background, and it is odd how many people when passing a discharged soldier wearing one of them, will remark: "Did you notice that fellow? He's got the Victoria Cross!"

There is no use in worrying, but what a difference does that make?

Every cheerful thought points the way to another.

Studebaker

Established 1852



Road-Conquering Power

Power—and plenty of reserve power—is absolutely necessary in the car built for Canadian service. Not merely "claimed" horse-power—but actual, usable road horse-power.

In the Studebaker FOUR at $1375 the owner is sure of full forty horse-power, and in the SIX at $1685 full fifty horse-power—reserve power for all the exigencies of crowded traffic, steep hills and rough, heavy roads.

In ratio of power to weight the Studebaker is probably the most powerful car on the market.

Because of the perfect balance of the chassis it is a common occurrence for owners to get from 8,000 to 10,000 miles from a single set of tires.

Come in and see the new Series 18 Studebaker cars. Examine them carefully—ride in them—drive them. Let us convince you that to equal the Studebaker in power—or any other essential of good motor car construction—you have to pay hundreds of dollars more.

CATTLE TRADE WAS SLOWER THIS WEEK

There was not the keen edge to the market this week that characterized the buying of the previous week. Choice handy-weight butcher steers held fairly steady at good prices throughout the week but there was a decided drag on the heavier stuff. Prices in the latter class gradually shaded off, and by the end of the week were a good 25 cents lower than the same class of cattle the week before. The market for good stockers and feeders was moderately active, but good grass cows at the more attractive prices were the most in demand.

All small stock—calves, sheep and yearling lambs — were practically steady through the week.

Spring lambs were the exception, prices dropping several dollars. This was due to a very commendable move on the part of the large packers, several of whom came to an understanding not to kill any spring lambs until July. It was hoped that all buyers would agree to fall in with the plan, the object being to conserve the present very limited supplies. It is contended, and rightly so, that the practice of killing off all our very young lambs of not more than 20 to 23 pounds weight, is ill-advised and extremely wasteful of the country's resources at the present time. By keeping the lambs until July their weight will be increased to 40 to 50 pounds, thus adding to general productive resources to that extent. Some go further, and strongly advocate Government regulation with a view to preventing the wasteful slaughter of lambs and calves entirely for the space of a year or two.

Hogs again passed all former records and reached up to $17.40 to $17.50 on the fed and watered basis.

Cattle Receipts.

Union Stock Yards.—Total receipts for the week—631 cars, with 5,627 cattle, 1,670 calves, 11,159 hogs, 374 sheep and lambs and 2,091 horses.

Cash Wheats.

Flour prices are coming down as fast as they went up, though there is plenty of room at the bottom yet. Ninety cents was chipped off the $1.10 advance of two days ago, and though there was a little reaction to higher levels in the wheat market yesterday the probabilities are that flour may continue the strategic retreat so auspiciously begun. Cash wheats are still strong, and prices unchanged, but a little short covering in the options market sent prices up 1 1-4c on the October option at Winnipeg, and 9c up on the July option at Winnipeg. Cash corn is 2c higher. Oats steady.

POTATOES MAY BE CHEAP.

Growers Doubt if Price Will Be More Than $1.50 a Bushel.

RIVERHEAD, L. I., May 17.— According to dealers here there will be so many potatoes next Fall that they doubt if $1.50 a bushel can be obtained for them. This statement was meant to counteract rumors that speculators were going to get control of the supply in this country, already estimated at 4,000,000 bushels, and that they were trying to contract for them at $2 a bushel.

The dealers believing, they say, that potatoes are going to be much cheaper next fall add that they would be extremely foolish to make contracts way above what they think the market price will be.

Engineers' Strike

WORK IS RESUMED IN MANCHESTER AND IN SOUTHERN LANCASHIRE.

LONDON, May 16. — The strike of engineers which has been in progress in various parts of England for some time, has collapsed at many places in the northern counties, where the king and queen arrived for a week's tour. Work has been resumed generally in Manchester and southern Lancashire. In Coventry an overwhelming majority of members of the trades unions denounced the strikes.

In many other centres men returned to work yesterday. This was particularly true in London, Barrow, Derby and Altringham, where the shops are being operated as usual today. In other places, such as Liverpool, the men decided to remain out, in order to compel the government to withdraw a bill designed to obtain younger workingmen for the army, to which the strikers take exception. On account of the opposition of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers to the strike little enthusiasm for it is shown in most places.

Blood Thin and Watery And Circulation Bad

Nerves Become Starved and Depleted—But Dr. Chase's Nerve Food Enriched the Blood and Restored the Strength

PETERBOROUGH, March 14.—The nervous system requires an abundance of rich, red blood in order to replace the daily waste and generate the energy consumed in the activities of life. When you fail to obtain the necessary nourishment from your food you eat you must seek such assistance as is afforded by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

By going directly to the formation of rich, red blood this great food cure brings strength and vigor to persons who are weak and run down. Here is the evidence:

Mrs. W. Grieves, 610½ Bethune street, Peterboro', Ont., writes: "Last fall my system was in a run-down condition, and I suffered from nervous debility and sleeplessness. At times I was troubled with dizzy headaches. My blood was weak and watery, and consequently I suffered from cold hands and feet. Many times at night I would waken up from sleep with a start, and then it would be a long time before I could quiet down and go to sleep again. Finally I became so bad that I could not do my own housework. I tried different remedies and preparations, as well as taking doctors' medicine, without any good results. Knowing Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to be good and very reliable, I decided to give it a trial. As they began to help me, I continued the treatment until I was [illegible] a great deal. Now I can eat and sleep well at night, and am able to go about and do my own work. I also found good results from using the Kidney-Liver Pills in connection with the Nerve Food. I might also mention that I have used Dr. Chase's Ointment for a rash on my baby, and found it very beneficial. We always find Dr. Chase's medicines good, and are pleased to be able to recommend them."

Two Ways To Acquire An Estate

1—By saving, stinting, sacrificing; fighting the world at every turn, battling the blows of business competition; running the risk of fire, theft, embezzlement and misfortune; skimping your family [illegible], may be; and standing only one chance in twenty of reaching Old Age without being dependent upon others for support.

2—By securing a Life Insurance Policy—A Policy which guarantees to pay your Beneficiary at your death, either a definite lump sum or an income every month as long as she lives—an income that is fixed, certain, regular, inalienable, unassailable, untaxable, and which cannot be lost, sold, dissipated, squandered, or mortgaged.

Which is the EASIER and MORE SENSIBLE Way to Acquire an Estate?

Two Ways To Bequeath An Estate

1—By Testamentary Document: Requires an Executor. Must go through legal red tape of Court. Requires Court costs. May require months or years to settle. This kind of Will can be broken or set aside. Property is subject to attachment for debts of the Deceased.

2—By Life Insurance (when the Beneficiary is named): Requires no executor or administrator — you are your own executor, your own administrator. No need of Court proceedings—no expense of Court costs. Does not require time to settle. This is a Will direct which no lawyer can break nor Court set aside. Policy is not subject to attachment for debts of the Deceased.

Which is the SAFER and BETTER Way to Bequeath an Estate?

Fairy Tales Of A Munition Worker

A strange case of deception was related at the Old Bailey in London concerning William Day, a munition worker, sentenced to five years penal servitude for obtaining money by false pretences and for bigamously marrying Dorothy Eugenia Bailey, a young girl of 17.

The police said that Day had undergone two sentences of three years' penal strvitude for false pretences. In 1910 he lived in great style at Evesham and posed as a great millionaire. He kept male and female servants, told the people that he had untold wealth in South Africa, and said he was about to purchase several large estates in the district.

In this way he obtained large sums of money to invest for people and in some cases a person's whole life savings. He induced a man to part with a pearl necklace valued at £3,000, which he pawned in London. He was able to borrow money right and left on the strength of his statements, one of which was that he was the illegitimate son of Sir J. B. Robinson.

As a fact he was a discharged soldier without money, and the son of well to do parents belonging to Tilehurst, Berkshire.

HEAVY DRINKING DENIED

Hon. J. D. Hazen Contradicts Stories Regarding Canadians.

OTTAWA, May 16.—Hon. J. D. Hazen, Minister of Marine and Fisheries, made a special inquiry into the charges of excessive drinking in the Canadian camps and among the soldiers.

"I can say that the stories of heavy drinking are absolutely incorrect," said Mr. Hazen. "Sir Edward Henry, chief of the London police, told that nightly there were in the London police area from 300,000 to 400,000 soldiers, and the average number of arrests for drunkenness did not exceed sixteen. The statements degrading excessive drinking in Canadian camps I found untrue, and I secured first-hand information from the commandants of all the camps. The men are exceedingly well behaved.

"As for the cheerfulness of the men I found it wonderful. The nearer you got to the front the more cheerful they seemed to be. I found an excellent spirit everywhere and the men had no complaints to make as to treatment or food, the hospitals are splendidly managed and I could find no justification for the charges against the hospitals."

As Minister of Marine and Fisheries, Mr. Hazen took a particular interest in shipping and fishing questions. He was a member of a subcommittee of the Imperial War Cabinet which discussed the tonnage question. Mr. Hazen succeeded by personal interviews in securing modifications of the British restrictions on imports of apples, canned salmon and lobsters. They will now permit the import of 25,000 hundredweight of lobsters, and if there is available tonnage even larger quantities.

FOUND FRITZ WELL FED.

Lots of Food in Dugouts Which Canadians Occupied.

LONDON, May 17.—Gunner Joseph Morin, Emigration Department, Ottawa, writing to Colonel Obed Smith, gives a graphic description of recent experiences, saying: "We hear there is a shortage of food in the Fatherland, but I assure you there was no evidence of famine when we took Fritz's dwellings here, for we found bread, sausage, canned meat, coffee, beer, cognac, butter. The butter might have been coarse fat for all we know, but we ate it just the same; a hungry man has no conscience. I feel sure our men would go over the top ten times rather than hold the front line. There is nothing to do on the front line, except to sit tight and watch shells throw columns of earth, like a geyser spouting water." Morin has been recommended for a commission.

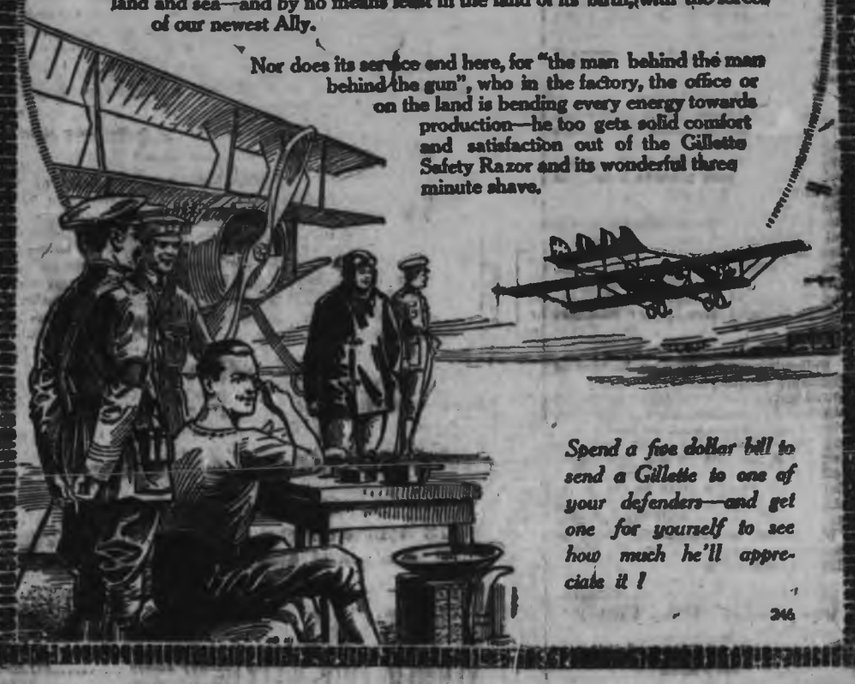
A day a-wing over enemy lines—scouting, observing, fighting, dodging shells and machine-gun bullets—is a nervous strain that has no precedent and probably no equal. When our airmen alight at last, after flights an eagle might envy, they certainly do enjoy the refreshing relaxation of a cool, smooth Gillette shave.

Nor is this appreciation of the Gillette Safety Razor limited to our airmen, or even to our own British armies. Every service has its own tense moments, hours or days, with its welcome intervals of relaxation when the Gillette is a friend indeed. Keen, compact, always ready for actic., the Gillette Safety Razor is treasured in tens of thousands of kits on every fighting line on land and sea—and by no means least in the land of its birth, with the forces of our newest Ally.

Nor does its service end here, for "the man behind the man behind the gun", who in the factory, the office or on the land is bending every energy towards production—he too gets solid comfort and satisfaction out of the Gillette Safety Razor and its wonderful three minute shave.



Spend a five dollar bill to send a Gillette to one of your defenders—and get one for yourself to see how much he'll appreciate it!

PEOPLE HUNGER FOR THE GOSPEL

Declaring he believed in the miracles of Jesus, Billy Sunday preached in his New York Tabernacle on "Feeding the Five Thousand."

"Take the miracles out of the life of Christ," said the evangelist, "and the historical fabric will fall to pieces."

Big delegations from Long Island and Brooklyn attended the meetings. "Old Pop" Anson, "the greatest ball player of them all," occupied a prominent place on the platform. "Pop" is the man who pulled Billy out of the Bush League, and was the first to congratulate him on his embracing Christianity, saying: "Go to it Bill, we're all with you."

The old hero of the diamond doesn't look like the "old sport" he has been. He more resembles a distinguished-looking merchant of finance.

Sunday's text was from Matthew, xiv., 16: "They need not depart; give ye them to eat."

"Every attempt to explain the miracles by natural law gets the explainer into greater difficulty than the acceptance of what the Word of God says! I want to draw some practical lessons from this world:

"First—The world is hungry, Jesus when on earth, stood face to face with the problem of physical hunger, for we read that He was hungered and He walked through the corn field and plucked long ears of corn and ate. As we face the modern world, we also face the problem of hunger, as has and will every generation—not ony physical hunger, but spiritual hunger!

"If one were to believe all the magazine articles in current and religious literature, you would think that the modern world is disgusted and indifferent to the religion of Jesus. I believe exactly the opposite is true!

"In no century since the morning stars sang together has there been more real, true hunger for genuine religion than this! The world is not disgusted with religion, but it is disgusted with empty formalism and the rituals and the non-essentials in which we have lost religion.

"Sometimes a so-called religious observance may become a natural hindrance to religion itself.

"There are thousands who forget religion, and allow the forms of religion to take the place of religion! And the forms must be destroyed before religion will perfume your life.

"Second—The church is the only institution divinely authorized to feed the spiritual hunger for Him.

"You will notice that Jesus did not feed the multitudes. He created the food, and asked the disciples to distribute the waiter—at this banquet! Jesus not the waiter—at this banquet! Jesus created salvation in His death on the cross. That is the food that will feed the spiritual hunger of the world! But the task of distributing it is in the hands of His human followers.

"Thirdly—Is the church drawing the hungry world to its tables?

"There is no blinking or dodging the fact that in drawing the masses to its doors, the church is facing a crisis. That there is a breach between the masses, there is no doubt. You take a walk down Fifth avenue, New York. In the districts of wealth and refinement the church spires are aplenty. But as you walk eastward toward the river, they grow less and less.

"As the population becomes more dense and poor, the church buildings grow less; and the downtown church is a passing proposition. Gradually the older members move to the suburbs and with the withdrawal of financial support, the support of the downtown church becomes more difficult. In board and trustee meetings of such churches you hear talk like this: 'Cut your clothes to fit your cloth—cut down expenses to tally with receipts.'

"Great God. Is this a cause and a time for retrenchment of advancement? Does a wise general reduce his force in the presence of the enemy?

"Fourth—Need the church turn to other tables than those of the church?

"I answer: 'They need not go away; give ye them to eat. The church has the power to feed the hungry world. It can feed the hungry world by doing what Jesus did when He fed the five thousand—by a wise use of what it has on hand with the blessing and the power of God upon it!

"When a war is over, heroes have scars to show, and they are proud of them. When this conflict is over, will we have wounds to show for Jesus?

"Christ has scars on His hands, and scars on His feet! He will pull aside His robe of royalty and show the scar on His side!"

RACING TO BE BANNED UNTIL AFTER THE WAR

OTTAWA, May 17.— The delay in the appointment of the committee on horse racing is now explained by the fact that the whole racing situation is receiving the attention of the Government, and those in close touch with the situation are of the opinion that racing as a business is doomed till after the war at least. Whether the matter will be handled by an order-in-Council or come down in the House as Government legislation is not yet decided, but it is clear that the Government will handle the matter itself. That means that the matter will come before the House, and means, further, that the spring meetings will be the last till after the peace treaty has been signed.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

RUNAWAY ON THE A. AND B.

By JAMES EDMUND DUNNS.....

The G. P. A. put his head into the general superintendent's doorway and said:

"Old Tympan's out there again, I see, Palmer."

"No use," replied the general superintendent. "His name came in two hours ago. I told him to report here next time he got drunk. This finishes him."

Five minutes later old Tympan, after forty years of service for the A. and B., went tumbling down the stairs because he was drunk at the Hancock street switch the day the directors went up the line. Palmer had given him a pass home, eighty miles up the road, and then fired him with ten of the words Palmer wasn't accustomed to using on ordinary jobs.

Train No. 8 pulled in while Tympan fumbled the pass on the platform, and he climbed in and found a double seat in the smoker. He knew only that he was out of a job, with a full pint in his coat and Palmer's transportation to take him up home, where he could camp down for the winter with the boys. He had threatened that many times. They deserved it for letting him work for a living.

"Taking vacation, Tympan?" asked Hennessy of No. 8 when he came through for tickets. Tympan admitted he was off for a bit of time up the road.

"Guess you ain't coming back right off," taunted Hennessy. "The return check on your pass don't seem to be in sight. Long lay off, eh, Tympan!"

Tympan sat up, pulling his hat over his eyes.

"Dick Hennessy," he said, "you go slow on yer kiddin' 'r I'll roast you one o' these days f'r bein' so smart. They've fired me, you c'n bet—yes, they have; fired me good, but I'm next to Palmer yet. An' I heard what Palmer told the G. P. A. this mornin' about your runnin' over orders twice last week. I know somethin', an' don't you kid me no more!"

Train No. 8's conductor ignored the challenge, partly because he dared do no more. He knew the whole operating department had been knocking everybody in sight because old Tympan, invariably drunk and disorderly, held his job while better and younger and sober men were overhauled in Palmer's office for nothing more than leaving stations half a minute ahead of orders or failing to wipe the annual of some of the spying directors who went up and down. R. H. Palmer got a master tongue lashing those days from the rank and file, and now that the dismissal had really come Hennessy was no more skeptical than any of the others concerning the general superintendent's honest intention of keeping Tympan out of service.

Hennessy tried to conciliate Tympan on his next trip through, but the old man lay with his hat over his face, steaming with rage, too angry even to curse. No. 8 was making beautiful work, and Hennessy felt better than usual. He had eight cars with a big load of women and kids and wanted to be on time anyway because it was his lay off that Saturday and there was an all night game in the "club" at home.

At Inchburg Hennessy got his usual orders, everything all straight, and left on time. The rear brakeman found him just afterward and said:

"Hear about the wild freight went up ahead of us? She's a big one, and it wouldn't surprise me if she got stuck on the Long Misery and held us at Lyshon."

Hennessy knew his man was right. Lyshon station is at the foot of a thirteen mile grade known for good reasons as "the Long Misery." If a freight got hung there ahead of No. 8, it meant everything balled up, for the A. and B. is a single line, and the directors won't stand for a siding between Lyshon and Oldtown, the station at the crest of the Long Misery.

"Wild freight?" echoed the telegrapher. "Yes, went up an hour ago. Big train? Yes, big train, but she's got a good rail, and I don't believe she'll hold you a minute."

Hennessy went out and looked in the book by the station door. He found where the wild freight had reported and saw with satisfaction that she was in charge of Bitters, one of the ring and sure to do his best to get that heavy train out of the way long before Hennessy came along.

Lyshon was on the card for only thirty seconds, but Hennessy risked a trifling delay and went back to the operator:

"Can't you ask Oldtown, just for a chance, if that freight's showed up yet?" he asked.

* * * * * * *

Wild freight 543 started over the Long Misery in good order that Saturday and made excellent time for eight miles or more. Then she was stopped by a shaky injector in the mogul. Bitters left his caboose and ran up ahead in time to see his redheaded engineer grab up the wrenches and start from his seat.

"Go ahead lively as you can, Mike," he shouted.

Mike gave the mogul sand and steam. She strained for a moment while her drivers raced and then shot ahead so hard that Mike bounced out of his seat. The train had broken apart seven cars down, leaving thirty-three detached before the mogul could gather herself to back up and catch the breakaway the fugitive section was slowly moving off, very slowly, down the head end of the Long Misery.

"You can't do it!" yelled a breathless brakeman who came up from the rear, "because the gear's just completely out o' the head o' that section and there wouldn't be nothin' to make a couplin' to if you caught 'em, which it ain't likely you'll do anyway."

Bitters was thinking of Hennessy and No. 8. If No. 8 were on time, she was just leaving Lyshon. Chances were she was late. He knew Hennessy. It was for him to reach Oldtown in time to stop No. 8 at Lyshon. Bitters sickened at the thought of the Saturday night rush of women and children which had given Hennessy's train the name of the "nursery express."

They worked quickly then. In thirty seconds Bitters was in the cab, and his Irish engineer was giving the mogul steam enough and some to carry. Bitters figured it was four miles to the goal, and the way they paced it off made it impossible for him to say he was disappointed when he jumped off at Oldtown.

"No. 8, hold her at Lyshon. My freight's bu'sted, an' thirty-three of 'em are on the grade, goin' to beat thunder!"

"No. 8!" The dispatcher's face was pie crust. "She left Lyshon six minutes ago, late." He went back to his instrument and sent "Seventeen," the clear out signal, to warn the road south of him, but as he did so he knew that No. 8 was coming up Long Misery ten minutes late, straight into the teeth of the worst runaway the A. and B. had known.

* * * * * * *

Hennessy was fuming at Lyshon, for he couldn't afford another second, yet Oldtown had seen nothing of the wild freight.

"Better wait for another report from Oldtown," said the operator. But Hennessy was six minutes late then and resolved to go on up the grade. He signaled his engineer and jumped on the rear. The brakeman was there and grinned when the conductor cursed his luck.

Hennessy, half way through the door, wheeled. There, away back by the station platform, only a fading bit of dismal detail in the familiar view, was old Tympan standing in the middle of the track and waving crossed arms.

Hennessy spoke eloquently, looking at his watch. The time frightened him. "I'll not go back for him," he cried. "I can't be"—

There was that in the rear brakeman's eyes which stopped Hennessy. Suppose he should leave Tympan at Lyshon over Sunday, with no trains either way, and suppose the old man's pull with R. H. P. were still working, and suppose the young husband of her who was Nell Tympan, he who worked in the G. P. A.'s office, should—

And there was old Tympan himself standing in the middle of the track and signaling, "Back up, back up, back up." Could he afford to ignore the old fellow? Though it hurt him to do it, he said:

"No, I believe I'll go back for the old guy, Bill."

The rear brakeman pulled the cord, and Hennessy went in to reckon just how much over thirty minutes late he would be into Oldtown.

There was no denying that old Tympan was exceeding drunk. Hennessy smothered his wrath with difficulty as No. 8 backed into Lyshon, for he hadn't relished what he had heard going through the day coaches. He leaned out toward the dirty figure reeling across the platform and heard Tympan's idiotic laugh as he boasted of having called back the biggest train on the road. "I jus' went out there—I' out there—and signaled, 'Back up,' and yer backed up, didn' yer? I tell yuze guysts, there ain't er man o' the road darst ter dis-disobey my orders."

There was a scramble on the platform behind them, and the dispatcher came shrieking like a plow train at a blind crossing.

"Back up, Hennessy, for all you're worth!" he shouted. "Runaway freight—thirty something cars off the wild train coming down the grade—be here in less than a minute. Oldtown wired. Oh, Hennessy, look up the line!"

It was a cloud of sand and dust at the first curve in the Long Misery, three miles away.

Hennessy's knees wavered. The dispatcher struck him with his fist between the shoulders, crying: "Quick, man! Run her back into the siding and let the freight go by."

The passengers knew only enough to complain that they were horribly shaken up that afternoon near Lyshon. It was Hennessy himself who switched No. 8 into the siding and who thanked heaven with all sincerity that it was just long enough to take his train and leave the main line open. As he threw the switch his head went dizzy with the whirl of the freight. When the threatening thirty-three banged past, Hennessy gave not one look after, but gesticulated over the lever and hung like a uniformed scarecrow until they gathered him up.

His Great Opportunity.

"Ah, me!" sighed the nervous author as he trimmed the midnight lamp. "I've just been reading an article which says the sun's light will be extinguished in a million years from now. Ain't that terrible to contemplate?"

"It certainly is," replied the wife. "But you won't take my advice."

"What do you mean?"

"About saving money. Now is the time to lay by with a view to taking stock in the gas companies."—Atlanta Constitution.

Two boys, one a Jew and the other Irish, both received a dollar bill for Christmas.

They started out the next day together and little Mike spent some of his dollar in the first store they came to.

Levi, however, simply asked to have his dollar changed into nickels and dimes.

Going to another store, Levi had a clerk change his money back into a dollar bill.

"What makes you keep changing your money, Levi?" asked Mike.

"Sooner or later some vun is goin' to make a mistake," replied Levi, "un it ain't going to be me."

Who Pays the Penalty?

Last April two of our representatives solicited applications for life assurance from a prominent Toronto wholesale merchant and his son.

They succeeded in selling to the father a policy for a considerable amount, but the son could not be induced to protect his dependents in this way against the financial loss which would result from his early death.

Less than two months afterwards the daily newspapers recorded the tragic story of the younger man's accidental death. His failure to act when action was possible deprives his family of the insurance money which he could have secured to them so easily.

Have you made any provision for your wife and little ones in case you should die suddenly? An Imperial Home Protection Policy will do it. Write for particulars to-day; to-morrow may be too late.

Wax Beans are the only Variety that Can be grown Successfully in Ontario

Pole Beans do not Thrive Owing to the Climate. Ways and Means of Growing Beans, Beets, Cabbage and Various Other Vegetables. Cabbage Respond Readily to Cultivation.

BEANS.

Wax beans are of easy culture and should be found in all kitchen gardens. It is doubtful if they rank very high as a money maker for the vegetable grower, because they require considerable time in harvesting. Wax beans are the only kind that can be grown successfully in Ontario. Pole beans do not thrive owing to the climate.

Planting.—The crop is usually planted by hand in rows of 30 inches apart. The easiest and safest method is to open a furrow one and one-half inches deep with the corner of a hand hoe, plant the beans three inches apart and cover lightly with soil. Too much soil holds back the germination. Some growers follow the plan of placing three or four beans in hills 12 to 18 by 30 inches apart. These openings can be made with an ordinary hoe and should be shallow.

Cultivation.—Cultivate sufficient to keep down the weeds with hand and wheel scuffler or hoe.

Harvesting and Marketing.—Pull beans by hand. They are usually sold in bulk or in 11-quart baskets.

BEETS.

Beets are one of the easiest vegetables to grow. They should be found in all farmers' gardens as well as in the majority of city gardens. This crop is usually grown from seed planted on the level in the garden by means of an ordinary seed drill. It is not advisable to ridge up the soil to grow this crop successfully. The rows should be from 14 to 18 inches apart.

Soil.—Beets do well on almost any garden soil, but thrive best in sandy loam. They may be fairly well grown on heavy soil. The best soil for growth of this crop should contain an abundance of vegetable matter.

Manure.—It is not advisable to use fresh manure on beet soil. Much better is the practice of giving abundant applications of well rotted manure. Fresh manure may be applied in the fall and plowed in, thus requiring only disking in the spring.

Planting.—Plant with ordinary seed drill in rows 14 to 18 inches apart as soon as possible in the spring. For a late crop the seed can be planted as late as the end of July.

Cultivation.—Beets are usually cultivated with the wheel hoe and hand hoe. This should be done immediately after the young plants show through the ground. The beets should be thinned to four or five inches apart for early, and one and one-half for late.

Harvesting. — Beets for early market should be pulled when one and one-half to two inches in diameter. They should be washed clean and all dead or withered leaves removed and tied in bunches of three to five.

For winter use they should be pulled before danger of severe fall frosts. The tops should be twisted off instead of being cut off with a knife, as this will cause bleeding and decay is liable to set in.

Marketing.—For the early local market beets are sold with the tops on in bunches of three.

Storing for Winter.—This crop can be kept satisfactorily in any cool cellar well into the winter. They should be placed in bushel boxes and stored in a comparatively cool part of the cellar, and the windows should be darkened. If cellar room is not available beets can be pitted very well and will keep until spring in many cases as well as potatoes.

Transplanting.—Market gardeners make a practice of starting some early beets in the greenhouse or hot-bed. Transplant them in flats and secure a plant three to five inches long for transplanting early in the spring. Many beets are grown direct in the hot bed and are transplanted from these to the field. They are planted out of doors in rows 15 to 18 inches apart and from four to six inches allowed between the plants. These usually are ready for market a week or ten days earlier than those grown from seed.

Started—February 15th to March 1st.

Planted in flat—six to eight weeks later—one to one and a half inches apart.

Transplanted—as early as the season opens.

BROCCOLI.

Broccoli is a practically unknown crop in Ontario. It is very similar to cauliflower, though the heads are more open. The same general directions as for cauliflower are advised. This crop is of no economic importance as yet in Ontario.

BRUSSELS SPROUTS.

Brussels sprouts grow from the same family as cabbages and are somewhat similar to cabbage in flavor. They differ from the cabbage in that the sprouts grow from the stalk, which sometimes reaches a height of 18 inches to 2 feet. The sprouts, or small cabbages come out at intervals on the stem on all sides. This crop is handled in practically the same way as the cabbage crop, and can be grown on the same soil.

Sowing the Seed.—The seed of Brussels sprouts should be sown in April in spent hotbeds or cold frames. Rows should be two and a half inches apart and the seed should be sown thin enough so that transplanting will be unnecessary. They should be treated in a similar manner to cabbage and cauliflower. They should be planted out of doors as early in the season as possible, two to three feet apart.

Cultivation.—Sprouts should be cultivated with a horse scuffler as long as foliage will permit. Like cabbage and cauliflower they respond to frequent and thorough cultivation.

Harvesting.—The sprouts when ready for use are from an inch to an inch and a half in diameter and should then be broken off by hand or cut with a sharp knife. This can be done in the field, but usually in the late fall the whole plant is carried into a shed and the sprouts are then cut off more conveniently.

Marketing.—The demand for Brussels sprouts is not as large in the Ontario cities as in some of the cities of the States and yet the crop is easily grown and the sprouts have a more delicate flavour when cooked than cabbage. Sprouts are usually sold in quart baskets or berry boxes.

Storing.—Brussels sprouts should be stored for winter use as directed for cabbage. Some growers make a pile 18 inches high and about 2 feet long and cover with soil. They will commence to decay if stored in larger piles. A cool cellar or shed is an excellent storage for this vegetable.

General Hints.—Brussels sprouts should be grown in every kitchen garden because of their eating qualities. The demand is increasing on the markets of Ontario, particularly in Toronto, during the last five years.

EGG PLANT.

The Egg Plant is a sub-tropical plant, very sensitve to frost and one that requires more careful attention during its growth than many other vegetables. It can be grown in Ontario in few sections where the danger of late and early frosts are not common and should be grown only to a limited extent as the demand is not large in this province, and it is not advisable to compete against the Southern growers who have better conditions for growing this crop.

Starting Plants.—The seed should be sown in flats in the greenhouse or hot bed about Feb. 15th, and as soon as the rough leaves appear they should be transplanted to 4 or 6 inch pots. The soil and the atmosphere should be warm and watering and ventilating should be very carefully attended to. Any extreme of temperature or wattering during the germinating period will usually prove disastrous.

Transplanting to Field. — The plants should not be transplanted in the field until all danger of frost is over and only when the soil and atmosphere are continually warm. They should then be planted in rows 30 to 36 inches between the rows, allowing 18 to 24 inches between the plants.

Cultivation.—This vegetable should have the same general cultivation as tomatoes. This should be done with a horse cultivator and a hand hoe. All cultivation should cease when the fruits reach any size.

Harvesting.—The fruit is cut off so as to leave a portion of the stem and the leaves at the top of the fruit on it.

Marketing.—On the local markets this crop is usually handled in baskets or bushel boxes. For shipping, crates similar to those used for shipping melons are used. The Egg Plant stands shipping well, and stands up well on the market.

Tremendous German Attacks On Soissons-Rheims Front Fail

For Three Days Germans Have Striven Vainly Around the Braye and Craonne Sectors to Force a Relinquishment By the French of Ground Gained by Nivelle--Italian Drive Against Austrians is Gaining Much Territory and Inflicting Many Casualties on Enemy.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

Special to the Examiner:

PARIS (French Official), May 19.—A renewal of Germany's concerted counter-offensive in a formidable drive northwest of Braye, was announced by the French official statement to-day. The attack was over a wide front. It was smashed by the French artillery except at one point to the west, where a few German groups succeeded in gaining French advanced positions. The Braye attack was one of two assaults in force which the Germans flung against the French along the Soissons-Rheims front. The other was northwest of Rheims. There the enemy utilized liquid fire and preceded the attack by a tremendous storm of artillery. For three days now the Germans have striven vainly around the Braye and Craonne sectors to force relinquishment by the French of some of the ground gained by General Nivelle's offensive. Their losses have been tremendous in these struggles.

LONDON, May 19.—The British offensive was apparently deadlocked again to-day with Hindenburg's massed reserve forces. Field Marshal Haig reported merely a number of raiding encounters and no actions of major importance. "Northeast of Gouzeaucourt we carried out a successful raid last night and brought back prisoners and a machine gun," the statement said. "East of Loos, northwest of Armentieres, and east of Ypres hostile raids were repulsed."

ROME, May 19.—The Austrian casualties up to Tuesday in General Cadorna's great offensive drive were reliably estimated to-day at twelve thousand dead, wounded and missing. Since that day sweeping further successes have probably inflicted almost as great casualties on the enemy.

Rome is afire with enthusiasm over the victorious progress of the Italian troops. Front despatches to-day related an almost unceasing battle along the entire front, attack and counter attacks from the enemy melting into a gigantic conflict.

Much of the fighting is hand-to-hand. Gorizia is suffering severely from Austrian bombardment. The Austrian official statement to-day admits the loss of much territory.

MADRID, May 19.—Immediate satisfaction for the sinking of the Spanish steamer Patriotic and guarantees for future exemption of Spanish shipping from U-boats, are demanded in a note despatched to Berlin by the Spanish Government to-day.

PETROGRAD, May 19.—Issuance of a powerful appeal to the army and navy to stand firm against the enemy, was the first official act of the new Minister of War and Marine, A. F. Kerensky, to-day. "The country is endangered," he declared. "Each must help avert that danger. The Minister of War and marine will refuse any request to resign based on a desire to escape responsibility at such a grave time." Deserters are enjoined to return to the army and the fleet by May 28, after which they will be severely punished for infractions. All generals and troop commanders who have been in Petrograd returned to their forces to-day.

LONDON, May 19.—Plans for Herbert C. Hoover to become international food director have the approval of the British Cabinet, Lord Devonport, British Food Controller, asserted to-day to the United Press. "I have suggested and obtained the Cabinet's approval of this plan," he said. "The Allies are depending on the United States and Canada for their food supplies. There is need for 2½ million tons of wheat at once.

NEW ENROLLMENT WILL BE MADE

Chief Recruiting Officer For Canada Says This May Be the First Step Under Conscription—May Not Be Confined Only to Single Men—"It Cannot Be Worked Out Equitably on a Single Man Basis," Says Col. Williams.

TORONTO, May 19.—A new enrollment for all Canada will probably be the first step by the Dominion Government, in carrying out conscription proposals, according to Colonel C. H. Williams, Chief Recruiting Officer for Canada, who is here to-day. Colonel Williams said that national registration lists would not do. The Dominion Government would probably ask municipalities to make an entirely new enrollment of manhood for selective draft purposes. After the enrollment made, Colonel Williams said, the selection should be made entirely on industrial and social value, and not on marital basis. "It cannot be worked out equitably on a single man basis," said Colonel Williams, "because the age at which men marry in one province is different materially from others." Col. Williams said credit would be given various localities for the men already sent. According to this arrangement the quotas to be still supplied various eastern military districts are as follows:. No. 1 London, 8,800; No. 2 Toronto 17,200; No. 3 Kingston, 10,600; No. 5 and 6 Montreal and Quebec, 27,300. Colonel Williams said no distinction should be made between single men and men who have married since the war began. There might be some consideration in regard to the number in a family.

GREATER PETERBOROUGH ASSOCIATION WILL MEET ON MONDAY EVENING

There will be a meeting of the Greater Peterborough Association at the Board of Trade Chamber on Monday evening next at 8 o'clock sharp, for the purpose of receiving the reports of the different committees.

Much important work has been taken up by the different committees and it is essential that all members be present to take part in the discussion.

Each and every member who has pledged himself to support the organization is urgently requested to be present as well as all those who feel that they would like to assist in a Greater Peterough.

The Quebec Canal By-Law will also be taken up and this will provide a first-class opportunity for the citizens to assist the Greater Peterborough movement.—Jos. J. Duffin, President.

NEW PROPOSALS WERE DEAD BEFORE THEY WERE BORN

Irish Affairs Must Be Worse Before They Are Better Says T. P. O'Connor Discussing Lloyd George's Letter to Redmond

THE POSITION OF ULSTER

(From Central News.)

(By T. P. O'Connor, M.P.)

LONDON, May 19.—I am not in despair of the future of Ireland, nor of the ultimate success of the home rule for which Irishmen have fought for generations, but I am in despair of the intelligence of some leaders in Great Britain who seem to be unable to grasp the significance of the Irish attitude, or the importance to England of a settlement of the difficulty which they themselves have made.

But of one thing I am convinced: Irish affairs must be worse before they are better. I can say no more. The week end proposals of the Government were dead before they were born. What do they offer? Take them one by one. First, there is suggested the immediate establishment of an Irish parliament in Dublin. Second, they would exclude six Ulster counties by a clean cut act. Third, they would form a grand council consisting in equal proportions of members of the proposed Dublin parliament and Ulster members of the Imperial parliament, to transact all common business between the common area and the rest of Ireland, and to have power to direct, if it should be so inclined that the Dublin parliament shall apply all its enactments to the excluded area. By this plan the government thinks it has avoided partition and that the essential unity of Ireland is preserved. This would create nothing but a grand council, which, they hope will pave the way for a full and intimate union which no Irishman ever expects to be accomplished in this manner.

SEEMS TO BE IMPRESSED.

The government seems to be impressed by two conditions which I quite fundamental. One of these seems to be that it is impossible to move Ulster from its present position. The other is, that it is impossible to carry through Parliament, while the war is the absorbing topic, measures that it would excite controversy. The contention of those who are unfavourable to home rule in Ireland is that this is neither the time nor the place to consider what they term "contentious business."

The speech of the Premier in Parliament last Wednesday can have no more fitting term, according to the ideas of the opponents to home rule than that "it is a funeral oration." It is yet to be seen whether or not these are the words spoken over the dead bodies of Ireland's opponents or of the corpses of the adherents of Irish home rule.

It is not futile to say that we have a very large hope in America. That will be done in that country to our cause we cannot at this moment tell, but we are assured that the per-

NEW LEADER FOR RUSSIANS

Kerensky, Minister of War and Marine Promises to Be the Lloyd George of the New Nation

TWO ELOQUENT APPEALS

(By William G. Shepherd.)
Special to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, May 19.—It appeared to-day that the "Lloyd George of Russia," had been found. He is A. F. Kerensky, Minister of War and Marine under the new coalition cabinet, which is uniting all factions into a harmonious administration. On the first day in his new post, Kerensky's energy was manifest by two forceful appeals to the people to fight the right fight. Orders to the troops and the sailors indicated the new war head would exact implicit discipline. A speech which he delivered to members of the peasants' congress was an eloquent plea for a "last heroic effort." "Let us show the world," he urged, "that we not only know how to destroy, but to create." To the soldiers' delegates present he said: "I call on you to make a last heroic effort to help me show the world that the Russian army has not demolished the temple. The restoration of discipline is essential, I propose to make it like iron. I am sure we will succeed." Kerensky also announced to-day he would shortly go to the front to address the soldiers and spur them to renewed activity. On Kerensky's shoulders will fall not only the super task of revising Russia's army, of refitting it in mind, soul and body, but of organizing adequate transport service throughout the new nation. He is by far the most popular member of the ministry and the most youthful. Moreover, he is a radical Socialist. A meeting of Duma members yesterday adopted resolutions warning the new government it was essential there should be "absolute, unshaken loyalty to our allies, for interests vital to the honour of the country are vitally bound up with this loyalty."

Parliament to Be Asked to Authorize the Raising of Reinforcements For Canadian Forces by Means of the Selective Draft.

IN WAR TO THE END

OTTAWA, May 18. — Conscription is coming! After nearly three years of war Sir Robert Borden announced in the Commons this afternoon that the voluntary system had been exhausted and that the government had decided to bring down a measure providing for "compulsory military enlistment on a selective basis." Conscription will apply to the reinforcements needed at the front in order to keep up Canada's present army of four divisions, and the number set by the Premier for the first call is at least 50,000, and it will probably be 100,000.

The announcement was made at the end of a speech of over two hours' duration, dealing with the results of the Premier's two months in the old land. It was received by cheers, in which members on both sides of the House participated. Sir Wilfred Laurier, who rose at once, when the Premier concluded, declared that the measure when brought down would be considered from the attitude the Opposition had taken from the outset of the war. "We are determined," he said, "to do our full duty to the best of our judgment, and in such a way as to insure that the best methods are adopted to bring about that victory for which we are all longing, and which we all hope will come certainly, whether it comes early or late. To the government's proposals, when made known in detail, we promise due and fair consideration."

The conscription measure will be brought down to the House almost immediately, and it is understood that it will be based on the plan just adopted in the United States.

The Premier's Statement.

Speaking in the House of Commons this afternoon, Sir Robert Borden, after relating some of the results of the Imperial War Conference, said:

"Now as to our efforts in this war—and here I approach a subject of great gravity and seriousness, and, I hope, with a full sense of the responsibility that devolves upon myself and my colleagues, and upon the members of this Parliament and the people of the country. We have four Canadian divisions at the front. For the immediate future there are sufficient reinforcements. But four divisions cannot be maintained without thorough provision for future requirements. If these reinforcements are not supplied, what will be the consequence? The consequence will be that the four divisions will dwindle to three, the three to two, and Canada's effort, so splendid in this war up to this time, will not be maintained as we desire it to be maintained.

"I think that no true Canadian, realizing all that is at stake in this war, can bring himself to consider with toleration or seriousness any suggestion for the relaxation of our efforts. The months immediately before us may be decisive. They may be decisive even if the war should not end this year. Germany is bringing into play during the present season the last ounce of her manhood.

Abandons Voluntary System.

"What have we done in this war? We have sent 300,000 men overseas in the Canadian Expeditionary Forces. Including reservists in British and allied armies and men enlisted for naval defence, 350,000 men have left the shores of Canada. It is a great effort, but greater still is needed. Hitherto we have depended on voluntary enlistment. I myself stated to Parliament that nothing but voluntary enlistment was proposed by the Government. But I returned to Canada impressed at once with the extreme gravity of the situation, and with a sense of responsibility for our further effort at the most critical period of the war. It is apparent to me that the voluntary system will not yield further substantial results. I hoped that it would. The Government has made every effort within its power, so far as I can judge.

"If any effort to stimulate voluntary recruiting still remains to be made, I would like to know what it is. The people have cooperated with the Government in a most splendid manner along the line of voluntary enlistment. Men and [illegible] interested themselves in recruiting [illegible] ranks of regiments [illegible] organized. Everything has been done, I

CONSCRIPTION.

Yesterday, in Parliament Sir Robert Borden declared for selective conscription; and the fact that Sir Wilfrid Laurier, for the Opposition, accepts the principle, makes it certain that legislation authorizing conscription, will enable Canada to do her duty, in which she has failed, in this regard, for several months past. We shall then have equality of service, as we have equality of duty and equality of benefit for the victory to which every Canadian in some way is in duty bound to contribute.

PENNY WISE, POUND FOOLISH.

Our city councillors do many wise things and some otherwise. It does not, however, seem a wise thing to consider the purchasing of an ineffective, and, for all purposes, an inferior truck, because it is a little cheaper. As a rule an article is worth what we pay for it, and prices being normal, if we pay the low price, we do not get the value, and that is what should rule us in buying. Of the three trucks on which prices have been obtained, the one favoured by the committee is not in the class with the others, either for reputation, for mechanical unity, or for capacity. The Mayor and Alderman Dobbin in their long tour of investigation into the question of fire apparatus, did not see anywhere, in action or in any fire station, a single one of the kind of truck favoured by the commitee, for no other reason than that it was a little cheaper; but many of the other, two makes were found, with the statement that they gave satisfactory service. This in itself shows that cheapness, plus inefficiency, does not appeal to the great majority of corporations. Apart from the probable defects of the favoured truck, with its several parts manufactured in separate factories, the chief, and the essential defect, is its lack of capacity, which comes far short of the requirements of the Underwriters' Association. The aldermen may pooh pooh the idea of meeting the demands of the Association, but they must be met, and in default, Peterborough will have a higher key rate of insurance; and in one year the people who insure—our tax-paying citizens—will be forced to pay many times over the difference in cost between an effective machine that will do the work required and one that falls between one half and one-third below the standard of pumping capacity.

It seems the problem is too large for the aldermen to solve. At last night's meeting the matter of improved fire protection apparently was started in a new direction. Although the new idea neutralizes the lessons of a long journey of investigation, it might prove to be a good departure if it is handled with a higher idea of securing efficiency, than that shown by the committee in deciding upon the cheaper truck that would not do the work required. It is to be hoped in any event, that the aldermen will learn to known their own minds and not put the matter over a few more ling months.

THE SWISS OF CANADA.

Sir Rodolphe Lemieux, in the course of a speech at North Bay, a few nights ago, said he had had a conversation with the election literature of the Conservative party, and it raised the racial cry. If Mr. Lemieux is right, then the Conservative party is wrong. The raising and employment of such a cry, and the results of so doing, is one of the greatest, if not the greatest, evil, that could be inflicted upon the country. It foments and keeps up a spirit of, and fact of, irritation that breeds discord and kills cooperation in the attainment of national ambitions. We expect rabid sectarians, whose organized existence is founded upon narrow-minded bigotry, and whose cohesive force is, to employ a paradox, the principle of segregation, disunity and discord, to play their ignoble part. More harm to national unity, more harm to national cooperation for national purposes has been done by the unreasonable activities of the Francophobes of this province and the Anglophobes of a sister province, than many decades will heal. We expect these things of these classes, but we think that one of the great national party divisions of the country should be superior to encouraging and keeping alive such peace-destroying elements for the comparatively petty object of party gain. The Conservative party should be above using these respective factions and playing one against the other for the purpose of keeping office, whose gain to the country if, by a wild stretch of imagination gain is conceded, is disastrously neutralized by the calamity of retarding national progress by the perpetual and virtual maintenance of national discord and the diversion of united national ambition and energy to cross purposes. There are two organizations in Ontario and Quebec respectively that exist for ulterior purposes, both nominally antagonistic in principle, but effectively identical harmonous and at one in submitting to be used for the support of a party.

Nearly 400,000 Canadians are fighting, getting wounded and dying to win for Canada peace and harmony. If Mr. Lemieux is correct in his assertion, that the Conservative election literature raises the racial cry, the present government is preparing to destroy what our Canadian soldiers are fighting for and dying for. Already the government has enough to answer for. By encouraging Nationalism in Quebec officially by the party it represents and officially as a government, the government has killed recruiting in Quebec overtly, as it has by indifference killed it in Ontario. It is the appeal to the racial spirit in both provinces that, destroying national unity and harmony, has worked such an evil that prominent members of all parties in both provinces are seeking by promotion of the bonne entente to repair the damages to commercial and other material interests that have been and are being injured by the racial cry employed in party politics; and playing virtual treason to the highest national interests, as a pawn in the game of party politics.

LET ROOSEVELT LOOSE.

Constituted authority is very jealous of its prerogatives. Ex-president Col. Roosevelt is spoiling for a fight, and it seems that President Wilson and the authorities have fought shy of giving him a chance. Colonel Roosevelt is something like our assertive Sir Sam Hughes; they are alike in other respects than a good conceit of themselves. They are men that do things and are not anxious to do them by slow process of routine. They go direct to the point. Sir Sam's direct aggressive way of doing things did not go with the slow, standstill methods of the Circumlocution Office, and he was pushed out. Col. Roosevelt has offered to raise a division of 40,000 men and take them at once to the battle front. President Wilson need not have hesitated to second him, for Roosevelt has shown his power to implement his proposal—he has already succeeded in enrolling 187,000 men, who are willing to follow his lead. This potential force is composed of good men, and if Colonel Roosevelt can get them into the fighting ranks in France, in Heaven's name give him a chance. Don't let red tape and official formality stand in the way of doing something. We know by sad experience in Canada, how a government can mark time, instead of going forward. It is hoped that Woodrow will give Teddy a chance.

Conscription May Include Resources Other Than Men

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, May 19.—Premier Borden's announcement of conscription has been seriously taken in the corridors of Parliament.

It is probably significant of the general feeling, however, that the first speech delivered after the two leaders had finished, voiced a demand for the extension of the principle of conscription in other directions, and expressed some doubt as to the practicability of proper enforcement of the system without reconstruction within the government.

ENROLL ALL MALES.

The Premier's statement leaves much to speculation. What system the Government has in view if any, is not revealed. There will need to be as foundation for a selective draft, a roll of all males in Canada from which to start. That is not in existence. The voters' lists do not provide it, nor does the National Service enrollment.

In the meantime a great deal of interest will centre in the way Quebec will take it. It is reported from the French Canadian province to-day that Col. Blondin's campaign to raise a battalion in Quebec has been suspended, if not cancelled entirely.

National registration was almost a complete failure in Quebec province, and in Ontario and elsewhere whole sections were untabulated, according to Col. C. H. Williams, chief recruiting officer.

An Appreciation Of Mr. Spence's Work As Children's Agent

Mr. C. A. G. Spence, who recently resigned as Agent of the Children's Aid Society, and is now employed as a Government Shell Inspector at the Metal Products Company, has received a letter from the head office of the Society, that will be of interest to his friends, in part, as follows:

"In conversation with Mr. Kelso I learned that your resignation, which I hoped was only to be used as a means to improve matters, to which you objected, has become permanent, and I write you this note to say how greatly I regret that I find it desirable to take this action.

I consider that as a new man coming into an involved and intricate business such as this, particularly where the Society records have not been kept in good condition, you made a remarkably fine showing, and I had trusted that we were to see the beginning of a brighter day and prolonged service in Peterborough in the work of saving children. My disappointment in this matter is keen, but under the existing circumstances I cannot reasonably be optimistic as to the future of the Peterborough Society."

City Council Decide To Secure Tenders on a Motor Driven Combination Chemical and Hose Waggon.

At a special meeting of the City Council held last evening the matter of purchasing a motor driven pumper for the Fire Department came up for discussion. Alderman Stratton, who was absent at the previous meeting, voiced his objection to the purchase of a White pumper, claiming that the Council's choice should fall upon one of the three companies who manufacture nothing but fire apparatus. Alderman Smith also recorded his opposition to purchasing anything but a first-class unit. After some considerable discussion it was decided to reject the Committee's recommendation to purchase a pumper and instead secure tenders for a motor-driven combination chemical and hose waggon.

The general recommendation of the delegation comprising Mayor Duffus and Alderman Dobbin, who journeyed over a large section of the American Continent, visiting such cities as New York, Boston, Buffalo, etc., was that a pumper be purchased. This recommendation loses its effect in the latest decision of the Council to secure tenders on another class of fire-fighting apparatus.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

PREMIER BORDEN ANNOUNCES THE COMING OF COMPULSORY SERVICE

seems to me, along the line of voluntary enlistment.

Canada's Liberty Defended.

"All citizens are liable to military service for the defence of their country, and I conceive that the battle for Canadian liberty and autonomy is being fought to-day on the plains of France and Belgium. There are other places besides the soil of a country itself where the battle for its liberty can be fought, and I venture to think that, if this war should end in defeat Canada in all the years to come would be under the shadow of military domination. That is the very lowest at which we can put it. I believe that that fact cannot be gainsaid.

Invoke State's Authority.

"Now the question arises as to what is our duty. I repat once more, a great responsibility rests upon those who are entrusted with the administration of public affairs. But they are not fit to be entrusted with that administration if they shrink from any responsibility which the occasion calls for. If the cause for which we fight is what we believe it to be; if the issues involved are those which have been repeatedly declared by all our public men, and in all the press of Canada, I believe that the time has come when the authority of the State should be invoked to provide the reinforcements necessary to sustain the gallant men at the front who have held the lines for months, and who have proved themselves more than a match for the best troops that the enemy could send against them, and who are fighting in France and Belgium that Canada may live in the future.

Cannot Realize Conditions.

"No one who has not seen the positions which our men have taken, whether at Vimy Ridge, Courcelette, or elsewhere, can realize the magnitude of the task that is before them, or the splendid resourcefulness which its accomplishment demanded. Nor can anyone realize the conditions under which war is being carried on. I have been somewhat in the midst of things at the front, yet I know I cannot realize what the life of the trenches means; still I can realize it better than those who have not been as near the front as I have been.

A Message for Help.

"I bring back to the people of Canada from these men a message that they need our help, that they need to be supported, that they need to be sustained, that reinforcements must be sent them. Thousands of them have made the supreme sacrifice for our liberty and preservation. Common gratitude, apart from all other considerations should bring the whole force of this nation behind them. I have promised, in so far as I am concerned, that that help will be given. I should feel myself unworthy of the responsibility devolving upon me if I did not fulfill that pledge.

"I bring a message from them, yes, a message from the men in the hospitals, who have come back from the very valley of the shadow of death, many of them maimed for life. But is there not some other message? Is there not a call to us from those who have passed from the shadow into the light of perfect day, from those who have fallen in France and Belgium, from those who have died that Canada may live—is there not a call to us that their sacrifice shall not be in vain?

"I have had to take these matters into consideration, and I have given them my consideration. I realize that the responsibility is a serious one, but I do not shrink from it. Therefore it is my duty to announce to the House that early proposals will be made on the part of the government to provide by compulsory military enlistment on a selective basis such reinforcements as may be necessary to maintain the Canadian army to-day on the field as one of the finest fighting units of the Empire. The number of men required will not be less than 50,000, and will probably be 100,000.

"These proposals have been formulated in part, and they will be presented to the House with the greatest expedition that circumstances will permit. I hope that when they are submitted all the members of the House will receive them with a full sense of the greatness of the issue involved in this war, with a deep realisation of the sacrifices that we have already made, of the purpose for which they have been made, and with a firm determination that, on our part, we will do our duty in this great struggle to the very end, whatever it may be."

Prospect of a Long War.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier referred as follows in his speech following Sir Robert Borden to the Premier's announcement of conscription:

"My Right Hon. friend concluded his observations by stating that we are certainly very far from the end of the struggle. I am afraid that his words are only too true. Events in Russia have brought into the war a new feature upon which we had not calculated. We had calculated that the new offensive which was to be undertaken by our armies this year was to have brought ourselves to the Rhine, but events in Russia have enabled the German Government to bring over to France perhaps nearly a million men, if not more. Under such circumstances it goes without saying that the war must last a long time.

Will Stay in War to End.

"As to the methods which Canada must take with regard to the prosecution of the war, I have only this to say: that Canada intends to remain in the war to the end, until victory has been won. As to the methods which we are to adopt in order to bring our men to the front, and fulfill to the end the duty that we are all determined to fulfill, a good deal of consideration is to be given before the traditional policy followed by this country shall be set aside. I make at present no observation. The Government tells us that they have a new policy to offer us, and I have only this to say:

Will Give Fair Consideration.

"That whenever that policy is made known to us we shall receive and consider it in the same spirit that we have determined since the outbreak of the war to assume towards all the proposals of the Government, that is, to give them due and fair consideration, reserving to ourselves the liberty of free British subjects to discharge our duties in the way we consider they ought to be discharged. I am not going to say we should adopt this or adopt that; that we should reject this or reject that. The only thing I say, and as to which I pledge the word and judgment of those who sit beside me, is that we have no intention other than to remain in the war to the end, and we are determined that we shall do our duty to the best of our judgment, and in such a way as to insure that the best methods are adopted to bring about that victory for which we are all longing, and which we all hope will certainly come, whether it comes early or late."

May Require Reconstruction.

Mr. W. F. Maclean, who followed Sir Wilfrid, while congratulating the Government on the adoption of compulsory military service, said: "It took a long time to do it, and it may take some reconstruction in the Government to carry it out." He urged a "ginger policy" along other lines as well, such as food control, regulation of prices of the necessaries of life, a national nickel policy, and selective conscription for all kinds of war work.

Steer Clear of Favouritism.

Hon. Dr. Pugsley hoped that in adopting a policy of "selective conscription" the Government would be careful to steer clear of any political favouritism. Until the details of the proposal were brought down, he said, the members must withhold comment. He deplored the fact that the Premier was still silent on the question of a national shipbuilding policy.

THE WEATHER

To-day at noon the thermometer was up to 72 degrees in the shade—the highest to date. The nights, however, keep quite cool, and the minimum figure is usually not far above the freezing point. Swallows, and other warm weather birds are around so summer must be here. A little rain is needed, and by appearances it is not very far away.

ple of the great republic of the Western atmosphere wish for us the measure of autonomy which they themselves enjoy.

A FRIENDLY ARRANGEMENT.

There is no doubt that in England those who are opposed to the measure that would give us home rule and those who have worked for it are fully cognisant of the fact that the hesitation and delay that the government has displayed in dealing with the entire problem has not in the least bettered the conditions. Indeed all whom I have heard express an opinion on the subject, and I have talked to those who are favourable and those who are opposed agree that at least for the moment all probabilities have been destroyed that might lead to a friendly arrangement. The attitude of the government is one of the courses that produced the Longford result, and this conclusion, accompanied by a continuance of the foulest and worst campaigns ever conducted by astute politicians has made it doubtful if in the present emergency any possible settlement of the Irish question can be accepted by the enemies to the Irish party, short of an Irish Republic.

An Irish Republic may be something to dream of. It is nothing more. Every sane Irishman knows, if he will study the political history of the world, that to make Ireland an independent nation, a republic, is as near in point of time and in possibility as that the great United States shall become a monarchy. It is impossible. We have something else to strive for.

END OF THE CONTROVERSY.

Of course, the leaders of the Irish party rejected, as they were expected to reject, the latest proposals of Lloyd George. It was not to be thought for a moment that they would accept them, nor that they would believe that they constituted an ultimatum on the part of the British government. We know, every body knows, that Lloyd George will either mend his hand by making different proposals, or that he will try to drop all further attempts at dealing with Ireland until the war is over. The first course certainly is not full of promise, especially as the fetters which the Orangemen have thrown about him preclude him from offering a united Ireland, and a unitary parliament without giving a chance to the Orangemen to vote themselves out of the whole scheme. On the other hand, it is doubtful if he will find himself able to follow the latter course, for the thinking forces of the world and parliamentary and public opinion in England is that while the interests of the British Empire call it unequivocal terms for a vigorous prosecution of the war, they also imperatively demand that there shall be a reconciliation with Ireland. It is recognised on all sides that the entrance of America into the war makes such an enormous addition to the world forces that are opposed to Germany, that the end of the controversy can certainly be forecast. And yet there are many who say that the entrance of the United States is perilous to England, itself. Of this I may have more to say later.

A General Election.

I do not, then, look for an immediate and successful settlement, nor for a complete abandonment of all attempts at a settlement. Events must decide. In the meantime the Irish party has no intention of abandoning the task for which it was formed and which is not only its chief, but its only object. It will stick to its task until it has been accomplished. This means that there will be a delicate equipoise between the parties in the House of Commons. It just as certainly means an awakening that may mean the defeat of the Government. It is something more than probable that it will result in a general election, the consequence of which no man at this moment is able to forecast.

As I look over the situation, all I can say is that it has grown darker, and more complicated, that the end is further away than it appeared before, and that it is more uncertain than ever. There is, however, this unchangeable fact: The Irish question must be settled, and it must be settled soon. How, or by whom I cannot at this juncture say, but sometime, by somebody, it will be definitely concluded and you and I shall live to see the final day upon which Ireland shall be free.

GREATER PRODUCTION WAS THE SUBJECT OF MEETING HELD LAST EVENING

Speaker Advocates the Necessity of Raising Poultry in Order to Augment the Food Supply---Meeting Was Opened By Mayor Duffus.

At the present crisis a few timely hints on greater production in the matter of raising poultry, given by Mrs. Weelard, shoud prove a help to those anxious to do their bit in Canada. A meeting for this purpose was held last evening in the City Council Chamber.

Mayor Duffus who opened the meeting, said that we are facing what will probably be the greatest food shortage the world has ever known. He said that the work of the farmers is most commendable in the greater crops they have sown; also the small land holders, with their little gardens, for each little bit helps. Poultry, however, is what is going to simplify the meat problem, and is a thing any one can raise, and in keeping hens, have no waste from one's table. He hoped those who would help would become an organized body to work in conjunction with the Poultry Association.

Mr. J. J. Hartley, who was in the chair, said that his experience with poultry of years' standing, during which he found hens to pay well.

Mrs. Weelard.

Mrs. Weelard said that her object, in giving the address was to interest the people in the great asset poultry could be in he famine we are facing. She said we all naturally have the interest of the country at heart, and it was up to us to do our bit in however small a way. She would like every one to take perhaps, twenty chicks, as an experiment; raise them, and in this way help conserve the food supply.

Eggs for Shipping.

Mrs. Weelard pointed out that since the war $2,000,000 worth of eggs have been shipped to England from Canada. Before this England had obtained eggs from foreign countries. This revenue meant something to Canada and could be perpetuated if the supply will meet the demand. If not after the war the trade will fall off. Canada imports $2,000,000 worth of eggs and $2,000,000 worth of butter fro mthe United States, yearly. This she could raise herself.

Mrs. Weelard's Experience.

Mrs. Williard sarted out with fifty dollars. With this she purchased an incubator, which, in her opinion, is the only way to raise chickens. She, during the season, hatched 575 chickens, and after paying all her expenses, found a balance of $200 in the bank. The pullets she kept whilst the cockerels were fed and killed for pot pie.

Feeding the Chicks.

During incubation the eggs are better turned by hand and cooled slightly. Many eggs are lost through too little moisture in the incubaor. When he chicks are finally hatched no food is advisable for 36 hours; then a small amount of dry food, bread crumbs and oatmeal, very best, followed by a little green food. Pure, clean water is absolutely essential for the chickens. This is best given in home-made fountain, made from an inverted flower pot in a saucer.

Brooders Not Successful.

Brooders, she said, in her experience have not been successful, better results being obtained by utilising hens. Home-made brooders, however can be satisfactorily made from small boxes with a jug of hot water placed in the box to keep an even heat.

Keeping the hens busy.

To obtain the best results with laying hens a mixed diet is necessary; buckwheat is splendid food for the winter. Wheat slightly boiled is excellent. Next to the feed, the secret lies in keeping the hens busy scratching for their food. The hen that scratches lays the most eggs. Throw the grain amongst straw, leaves, etc., and she will do the rest.

Two reasons.

Mr. Wearing said he was glad to speak, for two reasons: First, as Secretary of the local branch of the Organization of Resources Committee, he was interested in every endeavour to further production and he pointed out the seriousness of the food situation, which was likely to arise next winter, together with the help which every householder could give to relieve the food shortage. Then, too, he was glad to speak as a householder, himself, who was endeavouring to produce as much as a business man in the city could, and who had tried the experiment of keeping a few hens. Last fall he purchased five hens and kept them in a box all winter. They began laying the end of January, three months after he procured them. The cost of feed, etc., up to the present had been exactly $5.66, and the number of eggs laid had been twenty-six dozen and a half, which, at the prevailing prices, amounted to $10.15. So that although he fed the hens three months without receiving any revenue, he already had a profit of $4.49, or nearly 100 per cent. Till Wednesday of this week his hens had laid seventy eggs in May, or an average of over four per day, for the five hens, and during this time two of these had wanted to sit.

Mr. Wearing then pointed out that at the very least there were five thousand householders in the city who could have kept since last fall the same number of hens that he has and that if they had done so, it would have meant that this city would have produced one hundred and ten thousand dozen eggs more than it has done since the end of January, at a profit of $20,000. The speaker suggested that the Poultry Association of Peterborough become a sub-committee of the Organization Committee and arrange to persuade citizens to keep a few fowl, and also arrange facilities for providing chickens to those wishing to make a start.

Baby Chicks for Sale.

All those who wish to assist in lessening the great famine which experts frankly says faces the country, may secure baby chicks by leaving word with Mr. Brault, 180 Simcoe street.

It was suggested by Mr. Wearing that the Poultry Association become a sub-committee of the Organization of Resources Committee.

A hearty vote of thanks to Mrs. Weelard, Mr. Wearing and Mr. Hartley was moved by Mr. Brown, seconded by Mr. Brault.

Busy Times On The Great Lakes

Navigation on the Great Lakes is now open, and the familiar sound of steamboat whistles is indeed a welcome one to many, for not only do the steamers afford relief from the freight congestion but also furnish a most comfortable mode of travel for passengers.

Officials of the C. & B. Lines which operate the Great Ship "Seeandbee" and Steamers "City of Buffalo" and "City of Erie" daily between Cleveland and Buffalo, predict that this season will surpass all others in volume of passenger and freight traffic. Never has business started with such a rush which surely reflects the general prosperous condition of the country.

Vacation trips which afford change from the every day scenes are regarded as essential by the American people, and thousands are now turning to the Great Lakes for the alluring trips by water.

Awaiting the Lincoln-Douglas Debate, a scene in the gigantic production of "THE CRISIS," which will be presented at "The Grand" Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, May 21, 22, 23 ,Matinee Tuesday and Wednesday only.

Big Production Of "Greek Slave"

Peterboro' Operatic and Dramatic Society Promise a Treat For Victoria Day

Next Thursday (Victoria Day) there will be given in the Grand Opera House two performances of "A Greek Slave," one at 2.30 Matinee, and one at night, on Friday, May 25th, there will be a performance at 8.15. The presentation of Sydney Jones' famous work calls for enthusiastic commendation of the amateur organization known as the Peterborough Operatic and Dramatic Society, who this time have essayed a work of a calibre never before attempted by amateurs in this city, nor as far as can be learned anywhere in the Dominion of Canada. The story is woven round the Ville of Heliodorus, a wealthy necromancer, whose oracle is resorted to by high and low in Rome. Antonia, a Roman Princess, visits the wizard to learn why she cannot love, and the Persian's daughter, "Maia," proclaims that Antonia is loved by the God of Love, himself, and pretends to bring a statue of Eros, God of Love, to life, for which her lover, Diomed, a Greek slave, has been the model. Heliodorus does not wish his daughter to marry the slave, and sends the real slave, instead of the statue, to Antonia, whose ardent love-making to the slave is of no avail, as he remains true to Maia. Marcus Prefect of Rome, who aspires to the hand of Antonia, threatens the soothsayer with horrible penalties, unless his oracle causes Antonia to accept him as her fate, which she finally does on learning how she has been tricked, and forgives "Maia" and Diomed as well as the wizard for the cruel trick they played upon her.

The opera abounds with lovely musical numbers, the invocation scene in which the statue comes to life and sings is one of the most beautiful concerted numbers ever composed; a trio for two sopranos and baritone being accompanied by full chorus.

A Saturnalia occurs in the second act, when all the slaves run riot, and abuse their Roman masters and mistresses and a "Tarantella" is danced by sixteen of the slaves.

There are no less than seven dancing numbers. This presentation will be dressed and staged splendidly. The scenery was designed by Mr. W. H. Barry, and made and decorated here. The dresses and costumes, entirely Roman and Greek, are exactly like those used in the Daly production in London, England. Indeed the whole presentation is rich in lovely music, scenery, and costumes. The Opera has been taught and staged under the sole direction of Mr. R. J. Devey, the talented organist and choirmaster of St. John's and the success of former musical works given under this direction, leaves no doubt as to the richness of the treat in store for theatre goers next Thursday and Friday. Ticket holders may change their tickets for seats on Monday next, at the Box Office, the regular sale opening on Tuesday.

The proceeds are for the splendid work of the Kitchener League for trench comforts for our gallant soldiers.

THE LARGEST CUSTOM TAILORS IN CANADA

Not Generally Known That the Semi-ready Company Make Individual Suits to Measure For Their Customers

The Semi-Ready Company have a Special Order Department, which has grown to truly wonderful proportions. As many as 200 orders come to their tailoring shops in a single day from all parts of Canada for individual suits to be made to custom measure. These orders are taken at the various stores the particular style of pattern for customers who cannot find in the stores the particular style od pattern which pleases them, but who do like some cloth pattern which they see in another garment.

These "Special Order" suits, as they were christened by the Semi-Ready Company twenty years ago, are made to measure as truly as though one went to a retail custom tailor shop. They cost very little more than a suit selected from stock by reason of the efficiency methods which can be introduced into a great wholesale system. Right at the start a saving of from $3 to $5 is made in the cost of the cloth as compared with the same cost to a retail establishment. Then the team system of tailoring, only possible in a large organization effects other savings.

Suits are made to special order within five days. They go through the shop on a schedule time just as an express train travels across the continent. A suit can be had to measure for $18, made from imported British woollens, whilst a customer may prefer more expensive woollens at $21 or $23 or $26. Finer worsteds, from Botany and Saxony wools, are shown in charming patterns at $30, $35 and $40. The selection is more varied in both price and pattern than even a wholesale woollen warehouse can show. This department has grown to such proportions that the English Semi-Ready Company in Bradford devote much time to buying special cloths for the Special Order tailoring.

The Fashion portfolio published by the Semi-Ready Company shows in minute detail the lines of over 30 different styles in suits and overcoats. There are business suits in 20 different styles, 6 styles in outing pinch-back and Norfolk suits, 3 styles in morning coats and frock coats, four styles in dress suits, Tuxedos and clerical coats, and four spring overcoat styles besides the plates showing ten vest styles, three trouser styles and various shaped coat backs.

Each measure for a custom-made suit is taken on a physique type chart which gives the cutter a physique photograph of his customer, just as clearly as though he stood before him.

Wonderful Skin and Wrinkle Removers

The method of removing bad complexions by absorption seems to have come into general use in this country. Ordinary mercolised wax, applied nightly like cold cream and erased mornings with warm water gradually absorbs the coarse, faded or discolored outer skin skin in almost invisible particles. Soon there's a brand new complexion, formed by the younger, healthier under-skin. No cosmetic or artificial treatment can possibly produce a complexion of such radiant, youthful loveliness. Druggists all have mercolised wax; it is seldom that more than one ounce is necessary.

Thousands have also reported great success with the famous saxolite wrinkle-removing formula. One ounce of pure powdered saxolite is dissolved in a half pint witch hasel and the solution used as a face wash. The effect is almost magical. The deepest wrinkles and crow's feet, as well as the finest lines—whether due to age, illness, weather or worry—are immediately affected. No one need hesitate to try this simple lotion, as it won't harm any skin.

HOLIDAY TRIPS TO STONEY LAKE

The Stoney Lake Navigation Company make their first official announcement of the season in connection with the 24th of May service. Parties interested will note the time table for these dates; and cottagers, especially, will appreciate the opportunities afforded them of visiting their summer homes on the lakes. It will also be seen that notice is given that a change in the terms and system of book tickets is to take effect with the beginning of the regular season.

MAGNIFICENT WORK OF THE Y. M. C. A. AT VIMY

Right on the heels of the dashing Canadian soldiers at Vimy Ridge the Y.M.C.A. men were serving out biscuits and chocolate free to the tired men. Brigadier-General Odlum, 11th Canadian Infantry Brigade, bestowed high praise on them in the following letter to Captain J. Wallace, Senior Y.M.C.A. officer in France:

"My Dear Wallace:

"I want to let you know how much I was impressed with the work done by the Y.M.C.A. during the recent operations. It was simply magnificent. Almost before the place was consolidated, your representative had a distributing centre at the top of Hill 145—the crest of Vimy Ridge—and was serving biscuits and chocolate to the men. All ranks are enthusiastic. I have taken the liberty of recommending one of your officers for a Military Cross, and I sincerely hope it goes through.

"The Y.M.C.A. has endeared itself to the soldiers in France as no other institution has.

"Very sincerely,

(Signed) "Victor Odlum,
"Brig. Gen."

SPECIAL MEETING OF CITY COUNCIL

The Road Oil Has Not Arrived—The Garbage Collection

The matter of oiling the streets of the city found a place in the discussion that took place last evening at a special meeting of the City Council. The road oil ordered some time ago has yet to arrive and in the meantime the citizens will have to tolerate the dust nuisance unless the watering carts are pressed into service. Ald Worth would like the Monaghan Road between Weller street and Charlotte street treated to an application of oil. The request was turned over to the Chairman of the Board of Works.

GARBAGE COLLECTION.

It was reported that Mr. E. K. Graham, contractor for the collection of garbage has only four teams employed in the removal of garbage and refuse. Ald Worth failed to see how the contractor could overcome the peak load caused by the temporary suspension of the work unless more teams were employed as four teams are said to be required under normal conditions. Sanitary Inspector Stapleton will be authorized to announce through the local press the days upon which garbage will be collected in the various districts.

RAILWAY CROSSINGS

An effort will be made to have the railway crossings at Charlotte street, Simcoe and Hunter streets permanently repaired. A request to this effect will be sent to the railway authorities. Ald. Duncan suggested that brick be used in connection with the work. Mayor Duffus endorsed the suggestion.

Quaker Oats Agreement.

An agreement between the city and the Quaker Oats Company respecting the reconstruction of the Company's plant was read in the absence of Ald. McIntyre, chairman of the Manufacturers' committee.

More Light.

The Peterborough Utilities Commission will be requested to place a Tungsten lamp on the Monaghan road about half way between Chamberlen street and the factory of Henry Hope and Sons.

Permission was granted to the William Hamilton Company to place a bicycle rack at their building on the west side of Reid street. The rack is to be moved at any time when directed by the authorities.

CANADIANS ARE RAIDING LENS

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, May 19.—Stewart Lyon, Canadian Press correspondent, cabling from France, reports further raids by Canadians on the suburbs of Lens. They were merely small raids, but casualties were inflicted on the enemy, who evidently expected and were prepared for attack in force at that point. Valuable information was gained by the Canadians on these trips.

OVERSEAS COMPANY ARE SPLENDID ENTERTAINERS

The Overseas Amusement Company, which appeared at the Grand Opera House last night, proved a splendid body of entertainers, whose work was thoroughly enjoyed. The Company will be seen again at the Grand to-night and a big audience should be on hand, especially as all the proceeds are to be used for the benefit of Canada's Overseas soldiers.

Some of the cleverest juvenile entertainers ever seen in Peterborough are with the Overseas Company. The Oswin sisters not only sang splendidly but their Russian, Irish, and other dances were decidedly clever. Little Mina Henderson proved a wonderful elocutionist, her recitations being splendidly given, while she demonstrated her versatility by giving a clever jockey dance. Little Miss Tait sang "The End of a Perfect Day" and other songs with fine expression and in splendid voice. Several most enjoyable musical skits were given by Vera Walton, Evelyn MacKee and Mr. Haines, in which a number of new songs were admirably presented. Among them was the patriotic song "Hats Off to the Flag and the King." All three have good voices and know how to use them, with the result that their act gets over nicely. Altogether the programme is most enjoyable and to-night's programme should be greeted by a crowded house.

Don't Forget the "Crisis" On Monday Next

The Grand Is Staging a Most Wonderful Film Production—One of the Greatest Yet Produced

"In 'The Crisis'," remarked Thomas A. Edison, the wizard of electricity, who has done more than any other man to perfect the new art of the motion picture, "we have the titanic figure of Lincoln, his actions, his characteristics preserved for posterity in moving pictures in a manner so true to life that it recalls to my mind the great Emancipator as I knew him."

"P. J. Cowan, who was a neighbour friend of Gen. Grant when both were boys in Illinois, and who was personally acquainted with Lincoln as well, wrote: "Lincoln, as represented by Mr. Drane, in looks and actions is as natural as life. I was present at the debate between Lincoln and Douglas at Freeport, Ill., and when that scene came upon the screen, Lincoln and others looked so life-like, I for an instant forgot my years and went back to my youth, and was ready to throw my hat in the air and shout with the crowd."

"The representation of Mr. Lincoln has never before been equalled," wrote A. T. Ankeny, "during the war I was a clerk in the office of the Quartermaster-General, at Washington, and met and saw Mr. Lincoln hundreds of times. In his personal appearance and his usual actions, the play truly represents him."

"I want to congratulate you," wrote C. H. Mero, a wide-awake veteran, whose business card bears the slogan, "still on the firing line," and whose memory is as clear as a bell," on having found a character so nearly like Mr. Lincoln, which I know must have been a very hard thing to do. Mr. Lincoln, as I knew him in 1864, was a very tall, broad-shouldered, angular and homely man except when he smiled. Then there was something that nobody could ever forget. I think you have done exceedingly well in getting a man to represent him so nearly."

"I have seen several men portray the character of Lincoln—also saw the President personally lots of times—1861, 1862 and 1865," wrote A. W. Gillett, who was one of the early volunteers in McClellan's army. "This is my genuine feeling— Mr. Drane made the best Lincoln I ever saw, more like the original than the others."

No Separate Peace For Russia Now

Special to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, May 19.—The Provisional government once more to-day declared that it was united in rejecting separate peace, and declared that the Russian army would not suffer the Germans to destroy Russia's western allies.

TO-DAY'S MILITARY NEWS

killed in action. The letter is as follows:

France, April 15th.

Dear Aunt and Uncle,—I now take every much pleasure in dropping you a few lines, trusting this will find you all well as I am in the very best of health myself at present.

I must thank you very kindly for your parcel which I have enjoyed very much. It happened to come just at the right time as I am living in a dug-out at present and more or less batching it. I made a nice cup of the tea and with the cake I certainly enjoyed myself for the time being and if it hadn't been for the cigarettes I don't know just what I would have done as I had just finished the last of my issue of tobacco and was trying to figure out where I could get some more. I suppose that you have seen by the papers that the Canadians have been into it again and believe me they certainly did some fine work. They made old Fritz take to his heels and beat it. I had a job of stretcher bearing that day, but we were not long in getting our wounded away to hospital. I think myself that we were lucky as regards our losses. I would like to tell you just where I am at present but I am afraid that the censor might not approve of it.

We have been having some very miserable weather and it doesn't look like getting much better.

Private Carl Noftall who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion and was transferred to the 20th in France came through the battle of Vimy Ridge uninjured. In a letter to his father, Mr. Wm. Noftall, a traveller for T. Kinnear Co., wholesale grocers he writes as follows:

France, April 28, 1917.

Dear Father,—At last I have had the chance to write home to you a little regular again. I know its a long time since you heard from me, but you see when the big advance started, no mail was taken, so I could only send you a "whizbang" and green envelope. I guess you have heard of us taking Vimy Ridge, the spot that the Kaiser thought was unbreakable, his strongest stronghold on the western front. Well we took it without any thouble, there is no use of me going into any details about this big advance, as I guess you will read it in all the Canadian papers. Anyhow dear father I have pulled through everything so far without a scratch. Of course, I have had lots of close calls, lots of little bits of shrapnel have hit me, but nothing to hurt. Well dad, how is everything at home. I am glad to hear you are getting lots of orders, keep up the good work. I am well and feeling fine. We are having fine weather over here now. We had a hard winter but this lovely summer weather is making up for it now.

Never mind pa, I hope to be with you before the summer is out, if all goes well. We are going ahead without any opposition. Germany is licked so bad now, she don't know which way to turn.

I received those papers you sent me, lots of reads, and eats are the main thing over here. You know a man can't fight unless he has got a good stomach full. I tell you pa you won't know me when I get back. I have gained considerably since I have came to France. Of course, not on army rations. What do you know, I was just sitting down to write Palmer Wiley a letter last night, thinking he was still in England, and in he walks himself as large as life. He certainly took me by surprise. Tell his people he is looking fine. We will be together quite often now. He is in the 19th Battalion, in the same brigade as I.

I guess that 247th will never get up to full strength at the rate they are enlisting. Oh, well I guess its pretty hard to get many more from Peterborough. Believe me Peterborough has certainly done her share in sending men overseas.

Well father there is not much more news to tell you all, that is, we are winning, and I hope to be home soon. Don't forget to write and send some more cigarettes, and you know what I like. Send my love to all the family. From your loving son,

CARL.

P.S. I have received all your boxes and letters so don't worry about me not getting them, I also received a box from Trinity Church and tell them I thank them very much for sending me such a good parcel. The day I received it I was in the trenches and believe me it didn't take me long to make those eats that were in it disappear.

As applications continue to be received at militia headquarters and by officers commanding districts from tradesmen and other individuals for assistance in the recovery of debts due to them by officers and soldiers serving in the Canadian Expeditionary Force, or the active militia of Canada, and from officers' or sergeants' messes, regimental canteens, etc., it has been found desirable to inform the public that the military authorities have no power to enforce payment, and they are unable to assist in the recovery of private debts. All persons who give credit to officers and soldiers do so at their own risk.

Officers, non-commissioned officers and men are as amenable to the civil law of the country as any other class of His Majesty's subjects, with this exception, that no execution can be taken against their person, pay, arms, ammunition, equipment, instruments, regimental necessaries or clothing. The militia authorities are therefore unable to take any steps towards the collection of private debts.

Notification has been received at militia headquarters from the Director of Graves Registration and Enquiries, London, that owing to difficulties of transport and for military reasons, it has been found necessary to issue the strictest regulation forbidding the acceptance of any small stone memorial for erection over graves in France, during the continuation of hostilities. Under arrangements now in force, all known graves are marked with a durable wooden cross, with a stamped metal inscription bearing full particulars.

The above information is published in order to spare much disappointment to relatives of deceased officers and men who may contemplate sending memorials to England for erection over graces in France.

Four forestry draft companies have been authorized. Capt. Barnet at Renfrew, Capt. Kenny, at Ottawa, Capt. Ferguson at Brockville, and Capt. McRostie at Belleville, will command.

The following letter has been received from Pte. Milford Woodbeck, written to his mother in Lakewade. He was a member of the old 93rd, but on arriving in England he was transferred to the 21st Canadian Battalion.

Pte. Woodbeck has been in the trenches since last December, and was in the big advance at Vimy Ridge, where he got a wound in the left side from Shrapnel on April 9th.

Southmead, Bristol,
April 20, 1917.

Dear Mother,—I am going to drop you a few lines as I feel like writing to-day. Also I would like to know how all our boys are coming on. I got a piece of shrapnel in my side, but not bad. I walked from where I got hit, which was in Fritzy's front line, over two miles back of our lines, so you see I am not dangerous. I am glad to get back to England and may be here until fall before going back to France again. I suppose you have read about our splendid advance, and it was as good as the papers said of it if not better.

The French lost about 60,000 men trying to take Vimy Ridge, and the English could not take it either. They lost about 35,000 men in the attempt. But we took it, and the Canadians can hold it, too. There are French men lying around there that never were buried, just rotted away.

Our artillery was grand. At half past five on Easter Monday, the 9th, we went over the top. Our lads put up the best barrage of fire from artillery ever was witnessed before. Talk about paying 50 cents to see fireworks; I have seen them at their best, but they were nothing in comparison to our fire. It was the prettiest sight I ever saw.

When you answer this, tell me all about the Apsley boys. I only saw Snider. He was hit before I was. But we came 60 miles together down from the line. Let me know about White especially, and all the rest. Good-bye for now. Answer soon.

MILFORD.

Pte. McNaughton, of Peterborough, is among the last batch of Canadian soldiers to return home from overseas and is at present at Quebec.

Gunner Frank Barrie, a well known Peterborough boy with the Cobourg Heavy Battery, is here recruiting for that branch of the service and will be here for the next week, during which time he expects to secure a number of local recruits for the eighth draft of the Heavy Battery. There are already eight Peterborough boys in this draft, and all are at present here on leave. The Cobourg Heavy Battery has always been a popular organization and just now conditions are more pleasant than ever, as the battery has a nicely furnished club of their own in Cobourg and are very comfortable. The announcement that conscription is to be introduced in Canada is expected to hasten enlistment in the different units now recruiting, and the Heavies expect to get their share. Gunner Barrie will be in Peterborough all next week and will be delighted to give information about the heavy artillery to any Peterborough young men who are considering the question of joining the colours.

CONSCRIPTION ENDORSED BY ALL THE PAPERS

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, May 19. — Newspaper comment from all parts of Canada heartily endorses the general principle of compulsory enlistment by draft selection for reinforcements for the Canadian divisions at the front. The only difference of opinion is as to the nature of compulsion and selection. Some papers think the Militia Act would do, but others prefer an entirely new legislation to fit the new conditions. Further official announcement by the government on the matter is anxiously awaited.

THE TRUTH ABOUT SPRING.

An old song revised for new times by Onyx in the Manchester Guardian:

"Come out, come out, my Spartan dear!
Come out and seek the sun,
My chilblains wake with throb and ache,
The merry spring's begun.
Come out and face the icy gale
That shakes the leafless tree,
Come out, come out, courageous love,
Come out and dare the spring with me.

"Put on your stoutest macintosh,
Put on goloshes, too,
For it's been snowing all the night,
To make things nice for you.
Come out and slide on slushy lanes,
Cold as the Arctic sea,
For jocund spring's set in at last,
Come out and catch a cold with me."

TIRED OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles are so frightfully common because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or exposure to cold or dampness. Once the kidneys feel the effects of these evils they are liable to remain inactive unless relief is obtained by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. These pills help the kidneys and make them work properly and urinary disorders then disappear.

ROOSEVELT NOT ALLOWED TO CARRY OUT HIS PLAN

Pershing to Lead Army of Regulars to French Front—First American Expeditionary Force Will Consist of Division of Regular Troops—A Matter of Business.

WASHINGTON, May 21.—President Wilson directed that an expeditionary force of approximately a division of regular troops, under command of Major-General John J. Pershing, proceed to France at as early a date as practicable. General Pershing and staff will precede the troops.

NO CHANCE FOR TEDDY.

Colonel Roosevelt will not be permitted to raise his volunteer expedition to carry the American flag against the Germans in France.

On signing the War Army Bill, President Wilson issued a statement saying that acting under expert advice from both sides of the water, he would be unable to avail himself at the present stage of the war of the authorization to organize volunteer divisions.

There was talk in army circles of the possibility that a way would be found to use the former President's services in another way, but official comment on the subject was lacking.

WOULD INTERFERE.

The President's statement said in part:

"I shall not avail myself, at any rate at the present stage of the war, of the authorization conferred by the act to organize volunteer divisions. To do so would seriously interfere with the carrying ont of the chief and most immediately important purpose contemplated by this legislation, the prompt creation and early use of an effective army, and would contribute practically nothing to the effective strength of the armies now engaged against Germany.

HIS TRUE VIGOR.

"I understand that the section of this act which authorizes the creation of volunteer divisions in addition to the draft, was added with a view to providing an independent command for Mr. Roosevelt, and giving the military authorities an opportunity to use his fine vigor and enthusiasm in recruiting the forces now at the western front.

"It would be very agreeable to me to pay Mr. Roosevelt this compliment and the Allies the compliment of sending to their aid one of our most distinguished public men, an ex-President, who has rendered many conspicuous public services, and proved his gallantry in many striking ways. Politically, too, it would no doubt have a very fine effect, and make a profound impression. But this is not the time or the occasion for compliment or for any action not calculated to contribute to the immediate success of the war. The business now in hand is undramatic, practical, and of scientific definiteness and precision. I shall act with regard to it at every step, and in every particular under expert and professional advice, from both sides of the water.

CAN'T SPARE OFFICERS.

"That advice is that the men most needed are men of the ages contemplated in the draft provision of the present bill, not men of the age and sort contemplated in the section which authorizes the formation of volunteer units, and that for the preliminary training of the men who are to be drafted we shall need all of our experienced officers. Mr. Roosevelt told me a few weeks ago that he would wish to have associated with him some of the most effective officers of the regular army. He named many of those whom he would desire to have designated for the service, and they were men who cannot possibly be spared from the too small force of officers at our command for the much more pressing and necessary duty of training regular troops to be put into the field in France and Belgium as fast as they can be got ready.

"The first troops sent to France will be taken from the present forces of the regular army, and will be under the command of trained soldiers only.

A MATTER OF BUSINESS.

"The responsibility for the success of our part in this great war rests upon me. I could not escape it if I would. I am too much interested in the cause we are fighting for to be interested in anything but success. The issues involved are too immense for me to take into consideration anything whatever except the best, most effective, most immediate means of military action. What these means are I know from the mouths of men who have seen war as it is now conducted, who have no illusions, and to whom the whole grim matter is a matter of business. I shall centre my attention upon those means and let everything else wait."

AUSTRALIANS PREPARED TO END TEUTONIC TRADE

ADELAIDE, Australia, May 21.—Australian commercial houses and business men have declared themselves through their Chambers of Commerce, to be in accord with those of other parts of the British Empire in planning to prohibit or restrict trade with enemy countries for a term of years after the war. They also approve the plans adopted in London and Paris conferences on after-war business conditions to give permanent preference to trading between the different parts of the Empire and with allied countries, as against enemy countries. Favourable treatment to neutral nations in this respect also is approved.

Proposals along those lines were recommended by the London Chamber of Commerce and have been adopted by the Associated Chambers of Commerce of Australia.

It is intended to accomplish most of these results affecting business after the war by revision of the tariff and of the shipping and naturalization laws. Among the after-war steps approved by the Australian chambers of commerce were:

AFTER-WAR MEASURES.

Restriction of enemy traders within the Empire.
Penalization of enemy shipping.
Retention of all German ships now in possession of the Entente allies.
Replacement by the Teutonic allies of all ships sunk by them.
Encouragement within the Empire of industries necessary to the public safety.
Prevention of the control by enemy countries of raw materials and resources of the British Empire.
State co-operation in promoting trade banks to aid in exporting products of the Empire.

A committee of the Associated Chambers of Commerce was directed to formulate further economic methods to recuperate the wealth of the British Empire depleted by the war.

PRICE OF WEEKLY PAPERS TO GO UP

PORT HOPE, May 18.—The semi-annual meeting of the Midland Press Association was held here to-day. Quite a large number of delegates were present. A very interesting and profitable address was delivered by A. R. Alloway, Assistant Manager of the Canadian Press Association of Toronto.

The question of increasing the subscription price of the weekly edition from $1 to $1.50 was discussed, and all the publishers present agreed to adopt the new rate commencing June 1st. Objection was made to Government advertising coming through agencies, and the Dominion and Provincial Governments will be petitioned to have all advertisements come direct to the publishers.

Following are the officers: Hon. President, G. H. Wilson, Lindsay; President, G. M. Goodfellow, Whitby; Vice-President, S. Keyes, Colborne; Secretary-Treasurer, D. D. C. Dawe, Peterborough; Executive Committee, J. J. Lee, Fenelon Falls; M. W. G. Purser, Port Hope; T. P. Lancaster, Havelock; W. Gives, Millbrook.

Mr. Roosevelt Not In It With Him

CLEARFIELD, Pa.—Theodore Roosevelt, who offered himself and four sons to his country in the event of war, is outdone by William Albright, sixty-five years old, a prominent farmer of this county, who has just tendered the services of himself, fourteen sons and seven daughters to President Wilson whenever they are needed. Mr. Albright declares he and his fourteen husky boys will enter the army, while his seven daughters are ready to devote their lives to the Red Cross. A fifteenth son was killed in an accident at Dubois last fall.

$15,000 Shortage As a Book-keeper Charged To Bride

"They Only Paid Me $11 and $12 a Week," Young Woman Cries on Stand.

NEW YORK, May 19.—Mrs. Minnie Baltes, twenty years old, a bride of two weeks, was arrested in her neat little honeymoon cottage at No. 1 Franklin avenue, Harrison, N.J., by New York detectives, who said they had a warrant mentioning $15,000, said to be missing.

When Mrs. Baltes was arraigned before Police Justice Branigan, in Harrison, half an hour later, Bernard Kleinschnidt, president of the Kleinschnidt Magnesia Company, No. 333 East Sixty-fifth street, Manhattan, testified that she had been bookkeeper for his company and that experts working on the books after she resigned to be married on May 2 had reported an inability to account for $15,000.

"That is not true," cried Mrs. Baltes, when she testified. "They only paid me $11 and $12 a week and that was not enough to live on, and I only took $6 or $7 a week to help out."

Justice Branigan asked the young woman if she had saved any money on which to be married and she took from her waist a roll of bills amounting to $1,375, and said:

"That's all I have left."

Mr. Kleinschmidt said that Mrs. Baltes, then Miss Minnie Kauffer, had been employed by him six years ago, as an errand girl, and later she had become bookkeeper. He testified that experts who had gone over her books had reported to him that between October 16 last and April 30 more than $3,000 had been taken.

While the examination was in progress the young woman's husband, John Baltes, reached the court, and when he heard about the charges and that his bride had produced $1,375, he cried:

"My God, this is a terrible ending for a honeymoon." He became highly excited. He is bookkeeper for a large Harrison manufacturing plant.

When the examination was finished Mrs. Baltes was committed to the Hudson county jail on a technical charge of "loitering," the detectives saying this would give them time in which to obtain a requisition upon which she could be transferred to New York city.

For several weeks before they were married Mr. Baltes and the young woman spent much time in furnishing the little cottage in Franklin avenue, according to the neighbors, all of whom knew they were a honeymoon couple. After they were married they went to Atlantic City for several days. They had seemed very happy.

SMART SHOES.

Shoes continue to grow exquisite and expensive.

They are very handsome, of course, but with such footwear one needs many, many pairs.

It is the fad.

STORY OF NOTES

What was described as a remarkable story was related at North London police court, when Benjamin Rubinstein, a Russian, was remanded on a charge of stealing 14,000 francs in notes by means of a trick from Lazarus Edward Warsaw.

Mr. Warshaw said he was introduced to Rubinstein at the Carlton Hotel, Haymarket. Rubinstein said he had discovered a chemical preparation which would prevent septic troubles in wounds and that there was no doubt that the governments of England, France and Italy would take up the invention.

The next day they met, Rubinstein produced a box, inside of which was a small electric motor. There were also several glass bottles containing coloured liquids. When the motor was started green and red lights were flashed. Then a piece of wadding was plunged into the chemicals, the box was shut and the wadding reproduced perfectly dry. This said Rubinstein, was the wonderful curative wadding.

Rubinstein, said the prosecutor said that he had sent 20,000 roubles to Russia, and suggested that witness should exchange 14,000 francs in notes with him for 504 pounds in English notes when his money arrived.

Mr. Warshaw said that he put the 14,000 francs on the table and Rubinstein handed him a sealed packet of what appeared to be 1 pound treasury notes The covering was of tracing paper and the engraved notes could be seen through this on either side. The prisoner was apparently about to break the seal when he turned to the witness and said, "I think you had better open it."

The witness did so, and in turning up the notes to count them found that the first of each of two piles was a genuine note but the rest were blank sheets of note paper. By this time Rubinstein had disappeared.

ECZEMA ON FACE

WAS SO BAD HAD TO STAY IN HOUSE

All skin diseases such as eczema or salt rheum, itching or burning rashes, eruptions, ulcers, boils, pimples, etc., are all caused by bad blood, and while not usually attended with any fatal results, may sooner or later develop into some serious blood trouble and the entire system become affected.

Burdock Blood Bitters, that old and well-known remedy, will cleanse the blood of all its impurities, and by this means cure all skin diseases and other blood troubles.

Mrs. Ernest Andrews, Hamilton, Ont., writes: "My face was covered with eczema and was so terribly bad I had to stay in the house. I had ten different doctors but got so tired of their treatment that I went and bought a bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters, and it helped me, so I kept on taking it. Now I am cured, and have a lovely skin.

"People who used to see me when I was so bad and see me now will not believe it, but I always tell them that nothing cured me but Burdock Blood Bitters."

All U. S. Ships To Carry Shells To Russ Army

Seized German Liners to be Used as Munition Transports.

TO USE AMERICAN LOCOMOTIVES ALSO.

NEW YORK, May 18.—An Associated Press despatch from Washington says:

All available American ships, the seized German liners and all the ships Great Britain can spare from her own needs, probably will soon be carrying war munitions and great quantities of railroad supplies to Russia.

Keep Stream Moving.

As part of the united effort to hold fast the Russian provisional Government against German influence, and encourage a Russian military offensive, the allied war committees are making preparation to furnish the necessary transportation for supplies to properly equip and maintain the Russian armies. The first problem will be to transport some 100,000 tons of supplies already piled up in the United States, and the second will be to keep a stream of supplies moving.

Use U. S. Railway Stock.

In addition to supplying war munitions, the important railway leading from Archangel is to be equipped with American locomotives and freight cars to bring it to its fullest degree of efficiency in moving the great quantities of material which will pour in during the five months the port is free from ice.

The Russian Embassy here has arranged for the railroad equipment, and the war committees are arranging for the transportation. Official announcement probably will be later.

JOFFRE

(From the Chicago Evening Post.)

We little realized three years ago when we watched with sympathetic interest the great retreat from Belgium to the Marne how much it meant to us and to the world.

France we loved and Paris we cherished in our hearts, and the danger that threatened them quickened our sentiment and thrilled our souls.

When at the Marne the tide turned we rejoiced somewhat primly, it is true because our neutrality rested upon us uncomfortably and suppressed the emotions to which we longed to give louder voice.

Paris was saved! The salvation of France had begun! These were the thoughts that stirred us.

Now we look back from a higher vantage point. We see those great events in their broader bearings. We know that what then seemed the saving of Paris, the beginning of redemption for France, was in reality the salvation of the world.

And in the perspective of the longer vision there stands out against the background of days of defeat turned to victory, the square-shouldered, kindly, imperturbable figure of Chicago's guest of to-day—Joffre of Paris.

To this man and to the gallant soldiers who bravely did his bidding we owe a debt immeasurable.

If there be hope to-day of triumph for democracy, it rests upon the work accomplished by this modest son of our beloved ally.

Joffre, citizen of France, belongs to us and to all the world's free peoples. No man in person or achievement better typifies the cause for which we fight.

Vive la Joffre! Vive la France!

HOW MRS. BEAN MET THE CRISIS

Carried Safely Through Change of Life by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Nashville, Tenn.—"When I was going through the Change of Life I had a tumor as large as a child's head. The doctor said it was useless opening me, as I would not live until I could get away from the city for operation. Of course I could not go to him then, so I wrote to Mrs. Pinkham telling her all I suffered and she thought it best that I take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I did so and it helped both me and my family. I am now past fifty years of age and the tumor is gone and when I got home I did not want the doctor. I took the Pinkham remedies until the tumor was gone, the doctor said, and I have not felt it since. I tell every one how I was saved. If this letter will help others you are welcome to use it."—Mrs. T. B. Bean, 1st Avenue, North, Nashville, Tenn.

DEATH RATE TEN PER CENT.

Actuarial Society Hears Reports on War.

NEW YORK, May 18.—The Actuarial Society of America at its annual meeting here yesterday offered its services, as a body, or as individuals, in census work, organization, or in any other way in which actuaries might be employed to aid the Government.

The writing of policies affected by persons in war service was discussed, but no decision was reached as to what amounts of extra premiums should be charged. A. B. Wood, actuary of a Canadian company, presented statistics indicating the percentage of mortality among policyholders at the front, but declared that accurate figures were unavailable at present. He said the mortality from disease had been greatly reduced as compared with all previous wars.

"The experience of the Canadian companies shows that ten per cent. is a moderate rate and that has been established as the minimum there," said Mr. Wood. "Canadian companies are now charging $100 per thousand for small policies; $125 per thousand for policies of $5,000, and $150 per thousand for higher amounts.

"The percentage of morality during the first year of the war showed that the mortality among infantry officers was 18 per cent. per annum. Heavy artillery officers who fought further back from the front about 6 per cent, and that of the Medical Corps and the Army Service Corps lowest of all.

"The mortality of the Canadian contingent the first eleven months' service in France was at the rate of 10 per cent. a year for infantry officers. In most of the whole contingent the mortality was 10 per cent. for eleven months."

FIXES PRICES ON POTASH

Germany Planning to Hold Stocks to be Traded after the War.

AMSTERDAM, May 17.—Increased prices of potash, which are to hold until 1930, are fixed in a bill amending the potash law which was passed yesterday by the Reichstag. During the debate it was said that America, the only profitable customer, had dropped out, and that it was necessary to accumulate large stocks of potash to be exchanged for other commodities immediately after the war.

The statement was made incidentally that 500,000 tons of potash for German farmers was not delivered last Fall owing to the lack of freight cars.

Free Water in the Earth.

The amount of water held in the rocks or other materials composing the earth varies greatly, owing to many causes. The amount absorbed depends on the porosity of the material, the slope of the surface and the size and abundance of joint cracks, fissures and cavities. The amount of water in drift or surface materials is dependent to some extent on the nature of the underlying rock, and the amount which finds its way into the solid rock is dependent on the thickness of the overlying surface deposit. The amount of water contained in the earth's crust (to a depth of three miles) has been estimated by different writers with widely different results. A recent estimate given by the United States geological survey, department of the interior, is that the total amount of free water in the earth's crust would be equivalent to a uniform sheet over the entire surface of the earth having a depth of about 100 feet. This is but a small fraction of the estimate made by other writers.

Rapid Painting.

Sir Edwin Landseer had promised a picture for the spring exhibition in 1845, but on the day before the exhibition was to be opened all the hanging committee had received was an empty frame, which was duly hung in the position of honor.

As the prospect of receiving a picture for the frame seemed to the committee to be slight, a member thereof went to see the artist. He found Landseer standing in front of a bare canvas.

"That's the picture I promised," said the great man, pointing to the canvas. "I have not touched it yet, but I will send it to the institution tonight."

And he was as good as his word. A few hours later the completed picture was delivered and may be seen today in the National gallery. This wonderful work of half a dozen hours was none other than the universally admired "Cavalier's Pets."

Chant of the Maori.

An interesting and pathetic scene is often witnessed in the camps where there are Maori soldiers. These ocasions are when Maoris who have been wounded in battle take leave of their comrades on the eve of their return to their homes, in many cases to fight no more.

Before their departure those who are left behind set up a mournful, though melodious, dirgelike chant, the pathos of which invariably brings tears to the eyes of those who hear it. It is their chant of farewell to those brothers in arms who have shared their dangers and who will never fight side by side with them again.

The Maoris place their faith a great deal in green jade luck charms. Green jade has with them a traditional interest, for it was of this material that the tomahawks of the ancient Maori chiefs were fashioned.—London Mail.

Eating an Egg.

Is there any corner of the earth where the homely egg has not found its way? It forms a substantial food to all nations, and it is not curious that different nationalities have different ways of demolishing this estable.

Eating an egg with a spoon would be sacrilege to a Spaniard. He boils his egg just one minute, then breaks the contents into a glass and drinks it as if it were wine. The Italians place their egg in cold water and remove it just as the water boils. Then they break it on a plate and eat it with bread.

English cooking pundits in France in regard to the egg. Three minutes in boiling water is the rule. It is then broken into a glass and mixed together with salt, pepper and butter.—London Mirror.

Madrid's Fearful Climate.

Madrid is afflicted with the most changeable climate of any European capital. The temperature varies from as much as 107 degrees in the summer to as little as 16 degrees in the winter, and at all seasons of the year it indulges in violent fluctuations. It is by no means unusual in December to wake up with the thermometer registering about 20 degrees and to find it mount to more than 60 degrees by the afternoon. No wonder, therefore, that lung troubles are far more prevalent in Madrid than in Petrograd.—London Chronicle.

Drawing the Line.

"Why don't you take up aviation instead of motoring?"

"I can't see the advantage," replied Mr. Chugging. "An accident is bad enough as it is. I don't want a vehicle that'll put me in the hospital every time it goes to the repair shop."—Washington Star.

A Mistake.

"I like that fellow Mr. Smarty, who is coming to see you, Matilda. He is a man after my own heart."

"Indeed, he isn't, dear, pa. He's after mine."—Baltimore American.

Be thankful fer de hope of heaven, fer in de end you sho' will be thankful ef you kin des manage ter slip in while de gatekeeper ain't lookin'.—Atlanta Constitution.

CLOSED AGAINST CANADA

Steamship Company Wouldn't Erect Detention House at Cape Vincent.

KINGSTON, Ont., May 17. — The port of Cape Vincent, N.Y., is closed against Canadian traffic because the Canada Steamships Company will not erect a detention building there. The United States Labour Department has this week refused to make any change in the regulation, and traffic via Cape, which is the shortest route to New York, is tied up. Ogdensburg and Morristown immigration inspection is made at Prescott and Brockville by U. S. officials but Washington authorities refuse to allow Cape Vincent examinations to be done at Kingston. A good deal of ill-feeling has resulted over the matter.

WHEN LATHAM INTERFERED

By WILLIAM MACLEOD RAINE

"Guess I'm all in, eh, doctor?"

The doctor looked into the white face and the unflinching blue eyes and decided to tell the truth.

"I don't know. You have a chance, but it's a bad wound."

Fifteen minutes later Robert Latham tiptoed into the sick room with that exaggerated caution which a robust six footer usually feels in the presence of death or mortal sickness. Young Weir had his face turned to the wall, but at the sound of footsteps slewed round his head.

He smiled faintly from the pillows. "Awfully glad to see you, old fellow. It was good of you to come."

Latham choked a little. This modest young fellow with the winsome smile dragged mightily at his heart-strings.

"Yep, it was mighty good of me," he answered grimly. "Do you expect your friends to forget you just as soon as you make an idiot of yourself?"

Weir's face was a study in embarrassed apologies. "Really I couldn't help it this time, Latham. The kid was right in the way of the car. It was up to me to do something."

"Of course it was. It's always up to you to do something." Latham spoke roughly to cover a melting heart.

Jimmie Weir laughed a little brokenly. "Good old Latham! Everybody knows you. A fierce bark, but you're mighty shy on bite." Then with a sudden change of voice, "I say, Bob, there's something I want you to do for me in case I pass out."

"You're not going to do any such dashed fool thing."

"The doctors think I am," answered the young man quietly. "They don't say so out and out, but they think it. They're afraid of blood poisoning. What I want you to do, Bob, in case the thing is going against me, is to forward this letter to Effie Sheldon. You'll do that, won't you?" he finished rather wistfully.

"So that's what the boy's had on his mind these last three months; might have known some baby faced pink and white girl was at the bottom of his depression; guess I'll have something to say to Miss Effie," thought Latham. Out loud he said, "Sure thing."

"Oh, and there's one thing more—about the book. You'll attend to any correspondence necessary between me and the publishers?"

"I will that. I'll see that the sale of the new great American novel doesn't suffer because its author happens to be a lally idiot without sense enough to let people take care of their own babies."

All through his day's work at the city desk of the Post young Weir's white face kept coming between Latham and his work. He had half a mind to write to the girl himself. Still, he had made it the rule of his life to mind his own business.

Afterward, on a sudden impulse, he sat down and wrote a letter to the young woman who hadn't sense enough to appreciate Jimmie Weir. He told very simply and briefly the story of how Weir had thrown himself in front of a motor car to save a child and in so doing had lost his hand, how the boy's first words after recovering consciousness had been as to the safety of the child and how the young author lay in the hospital at the point of death. Then he told graphically of the young man's fight against ill health and poverty, of the brightness and good cheer which never deserted him and which won all men to him. "He's the most charming man the Lord ever left unmarried. I don't know whether you love him. I dare say not. Most young women haven't sense enough to love the right man. But I know that he cares a great deal for you. I could see it in his eyes when he gave me this letter to forward you. If you do care for him, and you're a woman worth your salt, you will take the next train for Kansas City, no matter whether you think it 'proper' or not. If you come, wire me at the office, and I will meet you at the station." Latham smiled grimly as he read over his brusque, offensive letter. "If that doesn't bring that young woman, she isn't worth the powder to blow her up," he said to himself.

Then the germ there jumped into Latham's mind an idea for booming "The Dice of the Gods" that he always claimed was the real reason for its proving the big seller that it afterward did. He shouted across the hall to Perry, the literary editor:

"By thunder, Dick, I've got the biggest idea in logrolling you ever saw for booming Jim Weir's book. You watch my smoke. I'm going over to see Alcott of the Associated Press."

The result of his interview with Alcott was apparent in every city of the country next morning. Generally speaking, the Associated Press is not run for sentimental reasons, but the paragraph about young Weir's accident was designed to draw tears from New York to San Francisco. It succeeded. Men talked about it in restaurants, women discussed it at their clubs, and tender hearted girls wept. Latham had put four hours into the composition of a five hundred word story about how the brilliant young author of the latest novel, "The Dice of the Gods," had given his life to save a child. His life still hung by a thread, but there was small hope of his recovery.

Latham, the cynical, chuckled when the telegrams of inquiry poured in from all over the country. Orders for the book refused the publishers. The office discovered that the novel was then practically sold out.

"It happens to be true, but they would never have known it if it hadn't been for me," growled Latham as he walked down to the depot to meet a young woman from Buffalo.

A gray eyed girl in a brown traveling dress alighted from the train before the porter had well settled the stool.

"How is he?" she demanded from Latham before the newspaper man had announced himself. Her quick eye had picked him out at once.

"Better; he has a chance," answered Latham. "This way for the cab, please."

Latham could not tell on the journey to the hospital whether she cared for Weir or not. She was so quiet and self composed, so eminently mistress of herself, that he felt an unworthy desire to say something that would cut her to the quick. But once, when they got caught in a jam of carriages and had to wait a few moments, she turned a white face to him and asked if there were not some way of getting to the hospital faster. Then Latham wanted to shake hands with himself for having sent for her.

The city editor made a few cuts on talking with the nurse a moment while Miss Sheldon went into the room alone.

"You poor boy!" he heard her cry with indescribable tenderness.

When Latham, after reluctant coughing, pushed into the room, he found her kneeling by the invalid crying softly over the bandaged stump. As for Jimmie Weir, it took no specialist to tell that the young man had taken a twice-won grip on life.

He Is So Sensitive.

"I wish some people weren't so all fired sensitive and ready to take an insult when none is intended," remarked the man with the troubled look, looking for sympathy. "Now, last night I got myself into an awkward fix just trying to be agreeable and to please everybody. I went to see a young lady I think a great deal of—yes, I do think a great deal of her, but I wish she would be more sensible. Girl friend of hers was there, and it was her first visit since she'd sent a crazy looking, paid for nothing decorated cup and saucer with scalloped edges as a birthday gift.

"'While I was out shopping,' the girl friend explained, 'and saw that cup and saucer, I just thought of you, Marguerite.'

"Of course I was expected to admire the thing, and so I remarked, innocently enough:

"'How? Hand painted, isn't it?'

"Now, the recipient's complexion is pallid, as any one can see, and there was no reason for her to be so chilly toward me the rest of the evening. How such sensitiveness?"—New York Telegram.

The Quest For a Place to Eat.

He was hungry. Before he finished his morning's work he consulted his watch with a frequency born of gastronomic longing. The perfume of Hamburger steak wafted through the office window from an adjacent German restaurant convinced him that he would not hunt long for a place to get luncheon. Once out of the office, however, the old indecision returned. The Teutonic repast did not seem half so attractive as it had twenty minutes before.

He went on up Nassau street. Restaurants to the right of him, restaurants to the left of him; signs in big letters told of the joys of living. He passed them by. Cafes, three to a block, told him where he could dine like a prince on anything from roast beef to canvasback duck.

What did he do? He rushed into a dairy lunch room.

"Give me a ham sandwich and a cup of coffee!" he cried to the waiter. "It does beat the deuce how hard it is to get something you want to eat."—New York Press.

CANADA NEEDS HER FARMERS

The Empire is looking to Canada for food, and the farmers in the front ranks of production. Our "back to the land" cry of scarce help every farmer must work his hardest, and every farmer knows from painful experience that it is his back that first feels the strain. Almost every movement, whether with the plow, the fork, the hoe or in the harvest field, puts the muscles of the back and kidneys. A pain in the small of the back is the warning that inflammation, although slight at first, but persistent, has started in the kidneys or surrounding tissue.

Farmers, if you only knew how quickly Gin Pills soothe and heal the overworked and strained kidneys and restore perfect harmony between the kidneys and the bladder, making both work as nature intended them to do and in the process also relieve you of rheumatism, painful urination or other troubles incident to impaired kidneys, you would not delay a moment.

Gin Pills are also a gentle laxative and are wonderful, not only in their effect on the kidneys and bladder, but they keep the bowels in perfect condition.

We want every lame-backed farmer to try Gin Pills. Go to your dealer and buy a box. If you do not get relief, we will refund your money, or a free trial sample will be sent on request to National Drug and Chemical Company of Canada, Limited, Toronto. 16

Flood of Supplies Will Go To Russia

United States Will Send War Materials in Great Quantities.

NEW YORK, May 17.—An Associated Press despatch from Washington this afternoon says:

All available American vessels, the seized German ships and all the ships Great Britain can spare from her own needs, probably will soon be carrying war munitions and great quantities of railroad supplies to Russia.

As part of the united effort to hold fast the Russian Provisional Government against German influences and encourage a Russian military offensive, the Allied war committees are making preparation to furnish the necessary transportation for supplies properly to equip and maintain the Russian armies. The first problem will be to transport some 190,000 tons of supplies already piled up in the United States, and the second will be to keep a stream of supplies moving.

In addition to supplying war munitions, the important railway leading from Archangel is to be equipped with American locomotives and freight cars to bring it to its fullest degree of efficiency in moving the great quantities of material which will pour in during the five months the port is free from ice.

The Russian Embassy here has arranged for the railroad equipment and the war committees are arranging for the transportation. Official announcement probably will be later.

RAEMAKERS IS REAL CRUSADER FOR TRUE JUSTICE

FRENCH CHANTICLEER HAS CROWED TWICE AND LION HAS ROARED TWICE.

Louis Raemakers, the famous Dutch cartoonist, whose portrayals of German brutality and "frightfulness" are now appearing in the Montreal Star, was recently the guest of the city of Liverpool, where the representatives of the wealth, intellect and fashion of one of the world's greatest seaports, who rose and cheered his name with tumultuous enthusiasm, blended with gratitude and admiration.

The Lord Mayor of Liverpool, in proposing the artist's health, said that the great tragedy and drama through which we were passing, must be considered in order rightly to understand the place occupied by Mr. Raemakers. We were in the midst, possibly beyond the middle, of the greatest war the world had ever known, a war that represented in a higher degree than perhaps any other war in history, not race against race, or nation against nation, but the clash of contending civilisations. In a war of exhaustion such as this, men mattered and materials mattered, but morals also mattered, and the Allies were bound together by a great moral purpose. In addition to that, although our enemies overlooked it, the views of those nations who were not engaged in this great conflict were not unimportant, and the good will of the world was a factor which one wished to have on the side of the Allies. In this propaganda Raemakers had been a great factor.

A MODERN PETER THE HERMIT

Comparing the cause of the Allies with some of the great crusades, he ventured to suggest that Raemakers was the Peter the Hermit of the present crusade. In the great world of emotion the difficulty of language was bound to be of considerable importance; but Raemakers had got over that difficulty, because he spoke a language that all could read — his speeches had been made in the Esperanto of the pencil. He had portrayed hard, cold, brutal facts, because they had to be portrayed, and he had met the ruthlessness of Prussia with an equal ruthlessness of portrayal. What was not too dark to be done was not too dark to be depicted, if the darkness was to be removed. He had brought the horrors of darkness into the broad daylight and the world and civilization had stood awed. The Allies fighting side by side, had a sympathetic world behind them, largely because Raemakers had shown them what German civilisation meant. Belgium's fate was the Calvary of a nation. Was it too much to hope that from that Calvary would come the birth of a better era? If that hope was realised no small share of praise would be due to the guest of that day.

HAD SEEN THE WAR COMING.

Mr. Raemakers, who spoke in good English with (as one hearer remarked) the eloquence of the soul, said that both his own career and the war were a dream to him. When the war broke out the Dutch people — though happily they were not Germans—were so bewildered and so unaccustomed to international politics, which they thought were a matter for the bigger countries, that they readily obeyed their government when told to keep silent, to express no opinion and to be neutral. He quite agreed that a government had to be neutral but he never could agree that an individual must. Governments had to hide their opinions. That was diplomacy. He was an exception to the generality of his country, because he had seen this thing coming for years and years, as his cartoons of ten years ago would show. It was impossible for him to keep silent; if he could not express himself he must explode.

GERMANS COUNLD'T BUY HIM.

When he started his campaign there was great astonishment at his daring. It was said that he would bring Holland into the war, and people said that he ought to be imprisoned or killed. He then had many German friends—he did not think he had any now—who sent him nonsensical articles and letters with no logic in them, to show him that he was wrong. Among his treasures were several letters from the German ambassador in Holland who was stupid enough to think that he could buy him. He pointed out what a good thing it would be for him if instead of always criticising Germany, he also criticised Russia, England and France, in turn, because then his pictures would have a great vogue in Germany. He (Mr. Raemakers) kept up the correspondence in order to get his excellency to do other stupid things, but when the latter found that he was being played with he stopped it.

Then the pro-German press said he had been bought with English gold and the hardest thing to bear was the suspicion of his own friends. But that did not stop him, nor did five prosecutions, each one of which resulted in his acquittal, nor did the pleadings of his wife for herself and the children. The dream was then a nightmare, but when the Dutch people saw that he was still alive and at liberty their courage came back, and they said, "He is right; why should we keep silent?"

TURNED HOLLAND PRO-ALLY.

Then arose a strong body of Dutch opinion which had protested most strongly against such things as the Belgian deportations and the sinkings at sea, and there was now hardly anyone in Holland who did not support the allies. In November last year he came to England, and then came the bright part of his dream. At first he was disappointed with the spirit of the British people as compared with that of the French, but he had found that the difference was due to the insular security of this country and to their faith in the navy as compared with the position of the French people who had for forty years been living under the constance menace of Germanism. However, the French chanticleer had crowed, at the Marne chanticleer had crowed twice, at the Marne, which was won by the French and not by the British army—and at Verdun; and the British lion had roared twice, at Ypres and on the Somme. The next time these two raised their voices in unison the Germans would certainly understand, and would have "cold feet." "Ladies and gentlemen," he said, in conclusion, "I drink to that day, when this war dream will come to a glorious end."

Suffered With Heart For Ten Years

Would Nearly Smother

There is nothing that brings with it such fear of impending death as to wake up in the night with that awful sense of smothering. The uncertain and irregular heart action causes the greatest distress of both mind and body.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are the only remedy that can give prompt relief and effect a complete cure in cases of such severity.

They strengthen and invigorate the heart, so that it beats strong and regular, and tone up the nervous system so that the cause of so much anxiety becomes a thing of the past.

Mrs. M. O. McCready, Wapella, Sask., writes: "I am not much of a believer in medicines, but I feel that it is only right for me to let you know what your wonderful remedy has done for me, and in a very short time, too. I had suffered terribly with my heart for nearly ten years, could scarcely do any work, and would nearly smother at times. I had many remedies, some only relieving me for a time. I got a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills and felt so much better that I kept on using them, and can truthfully say I feel like a new woman.

"I would advise anyone with heart trouble to use them."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c, or three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

WAR LIFTS LITERARY TASTE.

Booksellers Find Less Demand For Frivolous Stories.

NEW YORK, May 16.—Because the war has created a demand for more serious literature, booksellers at the annual convention of the American Booksellers' Association at the Astor yesterday were urged by their President, Ward Macauley, of Detroit to stimulate the sale of books that offer authoritative information upon the issues involved in the struggle. Mr. Macauley pointed out that what was needed most was selective literature. The public, he said, was no longer in the mood to be merely amused and entertained, but wanted knowledge.

Reports read at the convention showed that the sale of war literature had been much increased in the last year, and that light, frivolous fiction had lost its market.

CONGRESS SHOWS TREACHERY TO U. S.

N. Y. World Speaks Bitterly of "Distracted Russia."

NEW YORK, May 17.—Declaring Congress is guilty of treachery to the United States, the New York World to-day again pleaded for quicker action on the army bill.

"It is difficult to write temperately of the treachery to the United States, its allies, and the cause of human freedom revealed by the treatment of the army bill at the hands of Congress," said the world. "Congress may be sincere in its attitude toward the army bill; but if so, it can defend its patriotism only by indicting its intelligence. A more shameful or shocking exhibition would be difficult to stage even in distracted Russia."

DEPORT JERUSALEM JEWS.

Masses of Young Men Sent by the Turks to Unknown Destination.

LONDON, May 17. — Confirmation was obtained to-day from official sources of the previous rumours that the whole Jewish population were expelled from Jaffa during the Passover feast and forced in a northerly direction. With the connivance of the Turkish authorities, the Jewish population were robbed during their flight, their homes destroyed, and their property sacked. Those who resisted pillage were hanged. Thousands wandered alon gthe roads, helpless and starving, their misery being increased by disease.

Among those deported to an unknown destination are masses of young Jews from Jerusalem.

RECRUITS FROM MORGAN'S.

Employees of Banking House Join U. S. Forces.

NEW YORK, May 19. — The staff of J. P. Morgan & Company has been depleted recently as a result of employees joining the army and navy. F. C. Bacon, the office manager, son of ex-Ambassador Robert Bacon, and Frank H. McKnight, of the export department, and brother-in-law of H. P. Davison, left yesterday for Plattsburg.

Twenty-five other employees left last week to join various branches of the army and navy, including Junius Spencer Morgan, who is serving as an ensign in the Coast Patrol Service.

HOSPITALS AUTHORIZED.

LONDON, May 18. —The organisation of the Canadian Military Hospital at Basingstoke is authorized, with Colonel J. A. Roberts of Toronto as the commandmant. A Canadian military hospital at Broadstairs is authorized as a convalescent officers hospital with Lieut.-Colonel Perry Goldsmith as commandant.

Fighting Wind and Wave.

In a storm at sea, with a gale blowing in one direction and the sea running in the opposite direction, it takes a stanch ship to stand the water pressure on one side and the contrary wind pressure on the other.

Stability is one of the greatest problems to the constructor of a steamship. Naturally the center of gravity should be low. The hull must be of such a form that when the vessel rolls to one side the center of buoyancy shall move sufficiently far to that same side for the forces of buoyance acting upward to right the vessel.

A badly designed ship is liable to many dangers. If light in the stern the screw may come out of the water, race and be snapped off. If too low in the stern when running before a storm breaking waves may fall on board and so tend to swamp the vessel. A ship may be top heavy. There comes a moment when the upward force of buoyancy no longer tends to right the ship, but instead exerts its force in pushing the ship still farther out of perpendicular, with the result that she capsizes.—New York World.

Winning a Fur Coat.

The artist Hans Canon once painted a Russian prince in a magnificent fur mantle which took the artist's fancy so greatly that he endeavored to hit on a plan by which he might retain possession of it. On sending home the portrait he omitted to return the garment, and to the letter requesting him to do so he made no reply. One day when looking out of a window he saw the prince coming toward his house. Hastily slipping into the garb, Canon sat down in an armchair near the fire. The prince, who had come for his coat, started on seeing Canon groaning and trembling at the fireside. "What is the matter with you?" he asked. "Oh," groaned Canon, "I don't know what it is, but I feel so weak and wretched, and I cannot get warm. Two days ago my brother died of smallpox, and I am a bit nervous about myself." The artist kept the coat.

The Lion of St. Mark.

The symbol of the Venetian republic, the famous lion of St. Mark, is made of bronze. There is a tradition among the Venetian people that its eyes are diamonds. They are really white agates, faceted. Its mane is most elaborately wrought, and its retracted, gaping mouth and its fierce mustaches give it an oriental aspect. The creature as it now stands belongs to many different epochs, varying from some date previous to our era down to this century. It is conjectured that it may have originally formed a part of the decoration of some Assyrian palace. St. Mark's lion it certainly was not originally, for it was made to stand level upon the ground and had to be raised in front to allow the evangel to be slipped under its fore paws.

Course of Your Tears.

Have you ever noticed two tiny holes at the "nose" end of each eye? Probably not, for they are very tiny, like pinholes. But if you look at your eye carefully in a mirror you will find them. They are tear ducts or tubes. Your tears start behind your eyebrows, at the narrow end of the eye. They pass out below the eyelids, and the blinking of the eyelids carries them toward the other end of the eye, where the ducts or overflow pipes collect and carry them down into your nose. That is why you are apt to blow your nose when you cry.

A flow of tears is going on all the time to lubricate the eyeball. It is only when you are under powerful emotion that they overflow.

Conquering a Critic.

William Simpson, a British artist who accompanied the army during the Crimean war, said that Lord Cardigan, the commander, examined his early sketches of Balaklava with "a vacant stare," curtly remarking, "It is all wrong." Still Simpson persevered and was rewarded in the end "with the expression of Lord Cardigan's highest admiration."

"The real truth was," Simpson adds in his simple way, "that in the last sketch I had taken greater care than in the first two to make his lordship conspicuous in the front of the brigade."

Positively Rude!

Because she wanted everybody else to know as well as she knew that she had small feet the woman who had offered to lend rubbers to a friend added apologetically, "But they are so big I don't suppose you can keep them on."

"Oh, I guess I can," said the friend serenely. "I have big feet too."

Since then the woman with small feet has refused to see her friend, even when she brought the rubbers home.

Bothered the Barber.

"How are things?" the barber asked pleasantly of the shrinking man in the chair.

"Dull, very dull!"

And the knight of the razor looked for a moment as if he thought the remark was personal.—London Telegraph.

A Long Eat.

Egbert—Great guns! Think of getting the neck!—Yonkers Statesman.

An Empty Echo.

"Money talks," observed the sage.

"Yes," replied the fool. "But all some of us hear is the echo."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The chains of habit are generally too small to be felt until too strong to be broken.—Samuel Johnson.

Every child should be trained to clean the tub after bathing. This makes the work lighter for the housekeeper.

Sunday Reading

The following selections from the Christian Guardian, and from "The Outlook of the Churches," by Tertius, should help those who are unduly depressed over the world conditions at the present time. The church still has her seers; men who have scaled heights and beheld visions unseen by those who dwell in the valley. The morning cometh. "The earth is the Lord's."

WHAT IS YOUR GOSPEL?

In times like these one of the great tasks of the Christian Church, and of the religion which it professes to teach, is to give heart and hope to men. Burdens rest down very heavy at times, the outlooks upon life are hard and dark very often, occasionally it seems almost as if nothing was worth while. We need something to enable us to take up the pressing burden with a smile, to walk even in an uncertain and clouded way with courage and hope, to feel that life after all is full of zest and meaning and purposefulness. We ought to get that something from our religion, and the Church ought to be the great agency in ministering it unto us. Whatever gospels other ages needed; ours surely needs the gospel of a great hope. And any man who anywhere in these times tries to give in its place quibblings and depressing uncertainties and half truths about this being a devil's world, is doing worse even than giving men stones for bread. The man to-day whose life and gospel are not instinct with hope is failing his generation.

On the surface it would appear as though the war has not made any appreciable difference in the outer manner of life, which is apparently as materialistic as ever, and it has been said that a stranger coming into our midst might be inclined to repeat the jibe of Carlyle: "Soul extinct; stomach well alive." But he would be entirely astray, for there is a remarkable movement going on beneath the surface, nothing less than the awakening of the human soul and its turning toward its true home. Evidences of this are seen in almost every direction, and especially in the change of tone in the utterances and writings of eminent men. Dr. J. B. Crozier writes to say that "A Student-in-arms" has opened up to him a new vision, and that instead of continuing a "pagan" in the Greek sense as he has been for many years, he is at length turning towards God. Then Professor Gilbert Murray, whose attitude to Christianity has long been known, writes quite tenderly about the old days when he heard from the pulpit about One who gave up his life for the redemption of men. And Sir Ray Lankester, invited to contribute to a Rationalistic publication, bears his testimony to the eternal ethical realities of Christianity, to the intense annoyance of certain sceptics, who always think that there must be something suspiciously wrong with the brain of a scientist when it confesses that any good can issue from Christianity. Not least of all, Mr. H. G. Wells has taken upon himself the role of a prophet and promises in the next few weeks a further incursion into the realm of spiritual realities. Thus the people are setting aside the materialism which seemed to hold the field not long ago. The war has effectually killed this absurdity, and people to-day are using the word "spiritual" who probably three years ago would never have conceived the possibility of employing it. This is how a thoughtful writer sums up the whole position, which is one of the greatest encouragement for the Churches, and indicates their very obvious duty:

"A great and wonderful change is coming over the soul of the country. At present it is not exactly what one would call 'religious' and certainly it is not ecclesiastical. But it belongs to that matrix from which issues religion and it should find its final home in the universal society over which Christ presides. It is mystic. Man is once again upon the great quest. Awakened to a sense of his own spiritual reality, he is seized with homing instinct, and he wants God—his great complement and his eternal home. The Church has an unparalleled opportunity at present to take humanity by the hand and to show it the way home.

If the kitchen seems not to allow for a corner in which to sit, out of the way the addition of a small alcove will solve the problem.

DIES IN SING SING CHAIR AT NIGHT

SING SING, N. Y., May 19.—The first execution of the death sentence at night in Sing Sing Prison took place just after eleven o'clock Thursday night, when Anthony Impolusso was put to death in the electric chair. The new order was issued by Governor Whitman to prevent all night efforts to induce the Governor to grant reprieves.

Every effort had been made to save Impolusso, even after the highest courts had ruled against him. For three days it had been necessary to keep him in a padded cell in the death house, as he gave indications of violent insanity. The Governor sent the chief alienists of the three of the State's insane asylums to examine the prisoner and they reported that he was sane.

It was expected that Impolusso would give trouble to-night when led to the electric chair, but he did not. Apparently he realized that further resistance was useless and when Father Cashin and Father Alexander, prison chaplains, and an Italian priest went to the padded cell at eleven o'clock the prisoner apparently was ready to go to the death chair.

He handed to the Italian priest a note in which he had written that he was innocent. Passing from the cell corridor into the death chamber, Impolusso called back to the twelve other men awaiting a similar fate, "Goodby, boys."

Most of the prisoners called goodby to him and heard the door close behind him. Among them was Dr. Arthur Warren Waite, the New York dentist, who killed his father and mother-in-law, and who will be the next to go into that chamber, and whose death is set for next week.

Impolusso made no remonstrance in the death chamber. He said nothing and was only slightly nervous as he held a crucifix in his hands while the cap was being adjusted to his head. At five minutes after eleven o'clock the current was applied and in four minutes he was dead. His mother was in the Warden's Office, waiting to take the body to New York.

Impolusso shot and killed Thomas Lhmonte in a political row in Harlem. They had been involved in political factions in the Italian colony and the afternoon of the murder had been to a funeral.

GEN. SMUTS AS CHAIRMAN.

Invitation to Preside at Irish Meeting Urged.

LONDON, May 19. — The London correspondent of the Manchester Guardian urges that General Smuts, the famous Boer leader, be invited to act as Chairman of the Irish Convention, if the latter materialises. The correspondent emphasises the intellectual, oratorical and legal qualifications of the general and is convinced that the appointment will be universally acclaimed.

Has Cured Your Neighbours And It Will Cure You

Look Into This Evidence for Dr. Chase's Nerve Food From Your Own Town People

PETERBOROUGH, Ont., March 15. —It is only natural to doubt reports from people at a distance and who are unknown to you. If you have felt this way about what you have read in regard to the great good being accomplished by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food you do not need to doubt any longer.

Every day we are publishing in this paper reports from people right here in Peterborough who have been cured by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, some recently and some years ago. When you have read these letters look these people up and inquire into their cases. Every one of them is glad of an opportunity to help others suffering as they did.

Miss Catharine Scully, 517 Sherbrooke St., Peterborough, Ont., writes: "Some time ago I was suffering from a run down condition of the system. I was nervous, could not sleep, and lost my appetite. I used to have severe headaches that became almost unbearable. I tried several remedies and Doctors' medicine as well, but they did not help me. Finally I became so weakened in condition that I was scarcely able to walk. It was then that I first tried Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I used one box, and detected an improvement, so I continued the treatment until cured. I am in good health now, can eat and sleep well, and do not have those terrible headaches. I give the credit entirely to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and can say it is a splendid remedy. If anyone suffering as I did would only try this treatment, I know they would not be sorry."

Mrs. Leether, 108 Lansdowne street, Peterborough, Ont., writes:

"About three months ago, I found myself in a run down condition, due no doubt to the fact that I had been working long hours. I was also troubled occasionally with headaches and pains in my back. Upon the advice of a friend, I began the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I found the very first box benefitted me, so I continued the treatment until now I feel greatly improved and more like my former self."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

FRESH GAINS ARE MADE BY BRITISH AND FRENCH TROOPS

General Haig Breaks Deadlock on Western Front and Once More Assumes the Aggressive — Registering Gains Which Seriously Menace the whole Oppy-Queant Line—General Nivelle Also Starts Another Offensive, Gaining Ground in Moronvillers Sector

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

LONDON, May 21. — Field Marshal Haig has apparently broken the deadlock on the western front, and to-day had once more assumed the offensive with gains registered in the last twenty-four hours which seriously menace the whole "Oppy-Queant German line." The Oppy-Queant line of the Hindenburg front is the outer series of the Hindenburg defense plan. The next succeeding part of the Hindenburg line, embraced in the so-called Wotan line, runs from Drocourt to west of Queant, and the final "backbone" line is the Douai-Cambrai-St. Quentin one.

From the French front reports indicated no abatement in the series of counter assaults planned by the German staff to relieve the pressure around Laon. They have proved fruitless in rejecting the French.

SUCCESSES FOR BRITISH ON HINDENBURG LINE.

LONDON, May 21.—Further success along the Hindenburg line was achieved by British troops in spirited fighting last night, Field Marshal Haig reported to-day. "At Bullecourt and Fontaine-Les-Croisilles along the Hindenburg line our success was continued at night and counter attacks were repelled, the statement says. "A Hindenburg line support trench was captured and 150 taken prisoners," Haig continued. "A large number of dead were found there. Two German divisions have been engaged there since yesterday morning. At Loos we continued a successful raid. Southwest of Bessines enemy raiders were driven off."

ANOTHER OFFENSIVE STARTED BY GENERAL NIVELLE'S MEN

PARIS, May 21.—General Nivelle's troops started another offensive today. The capture of several lines of German trenches in the Moronvilliers sector on the northern slopes of Cornillet with 800 prisoners taken, was reported in to-day's official statement is the first net result.

The War Office told of a resumption of active, bitter fighting on the greater part of the whole front. Along the Chemin Des Dames front an artillery struggle continued throughout the night. A strong German attack was made near Froidmont Farm, and repulsed. In the Champagne the statement said: "We brilliantly captured several lines of German trenches in the sector of Moronvilliers, imprisoning 800. We found crumbled German shelters filled with dead. The enemy's losses were formidable, particularly those inflicted by our forces against counter attacks. All of these were repulsed."

GERMAN AND FRENCH TORPEDO BOATS CLASH.

LONDON, May 21.—A "outpost engagement" between German and French torpedo boats off Belgium Sunday morning was reported in the Berlin and Paris statement to-day.

One French boat was slightly damaged, according to the Paris report.

The Paris official statement said the Germans "after a short engagement withdrew at full speed."

ROME, May 21.—Austria started a counter offensive movement in Trentino to-day designed to relieve the ever increasing Italian pressure on Trieste in the Isonzo fighting section. By such an offensive the enemy gained a foothold in Posina region, but were driven out with heavy losses in men and supplies.

BERLIN, via London, May 21. — French forces succeeded in gaining a hold on Mount Cornillet and British troops' only success was in occupying a completely demolished trench abandoned in accordance with our plans, according to to-day's official Berlin report.

LONDON, May 21. — Premier Lloyd George revealed his scheme of settlement of the Irish question to the House of Commons to-day. The proposed conference to decide the exact form of Home Rule to be applied to Ireland will be composed of all parties and all factions in Ireland, he said opening the debate. Even Sinn Feiners will be represented, he declared. The chairman of the convention, however, will be nominated by the King. The British Premier explained that the suggested Irish convention would be expected to submit to parliament a complete draft of an Irish constitution. Sir John Lonsdale, an Irish member, said he would lay Lloyd George's proposal before Ulster unionist Council, but he was not sanguine as to any result. "Ulster will never be forced into Home Rule," he asserted.

ACOUSTICON HAS BEEN INSTALLED IN ST. PAUL'S CHURCH

Was Used Yesterday for the First Time to the Great Satisfaction of a Number Who Have Not Been Able To Hear a Sermon for Years

THE FIRST TRIAL

An Acousticon has been installed in St. Paul's Church for the benefit of the deaf. It was used yesterday for the first time to the great satisfaction of a number who have not been able to hear a sermon for years. It consists of an arrangement very much on the principal of the speaking tube of the telephone. Fine wires run from this to the different pews of those for whom it is installed. These wires are connected with batteries that multiply the sound.

The first trial proved satisfactory to all who used it. Mr. Wm. Scott, of the Board of Managers, will be very glad if those belonging to other congregations who are deaf would confer with him and he would give them an opportunity of testing it, in the hope that it might be introduced in other congregations as well as St. Paul's.

Mr. Scott's address is 109 Hunter street, East City and his telephone number 1015.

Mr. G. A. Curle has accepted a position with Mr. G. A. Gillespie on his motor car sales staff and began his engagement to-day.

Prospective buyers who wish a proper demonstration of the Studebaker or Maxwell cars, will find Mr. Curle at the Gillespie Garage, Aylmer street.

FUNERAL OF THE LATE MRS. HOSKIN

The last mortal remains of the late Mrs. Hoskin were laid at rest this morning at the Little Lake Cemetery. The pall-bearers were the Messrs. Roche, Toronto, and the Messrs. Pengelley, Rice Lake. A service, conducted by Rev. Mr. Price, was held in St. John's Church, Mr. H. J. Dovey playing the funeral hymn before leaving for the cemetery. The congregation was represented by Mr. W. F. Johnston, Rector's Church Warden.

ST. PETER'S PATRIOTIC CLUB.

St. Peter's Patriotic Club will meet on Wednesday afternoon instead of Thursday until further notice. The tea room will be open as usual from 4 to 6.30. All the members are requested to attend a meeting on Wednesday evening at 7.30 in St. Alphonsus' Lecture to make final arrangements for the paper collection on June 5th.

Windover enlisted in the 93rd Battalion here in the Autumn of 1915, the three brothers donning the khaki on the same day. Pte. Daigneourt Windover was taken with pneumonia a few days before the 93rd Battalion left Peterborough and after being in the Military hospital all summer was discharged from military service last September and has become a resident of Peterborough. ALL POLITICAL PULL MUST BE ELIMINATED

Opposition Will Demand Ample Assurance That Favouritism Must Be Entirely Absent From the Operation of Conscription Measure

A BI-PARTY COMMISSION

OTTAWA, May 20.—The Government's conscription bill is to be induced in the Commons either towards the end of this week or early next week. The details are still to be worked out in the Cabinet Council. Only the principle of selective conscription had been determined upon when the Prime Minister made his announcement in the House on Friday. On the details will depend to a large extent the character of the measure in Parliament and the expedition with which the bill passes.

Must Eliminate Politics.

On the Liberal side of the House the opinion is generally expressed that there must be ample assurance and guarantees that political favoritism will be entirely eliminated from the operation of the measure. The selection of enforced recruits must be based solely on methods and motives fair and equitable to all classes without distinction of wealth position or political pull. In Great Britain conscription was not resorted to until a coalition Government had been formed and both parties had equal voice in the Administration. In Canada since the war started the entire administration of affairs has been confined to the party in power, and political patronage has held sway in regard to war appointments and contracts as well as to purely domestic matters.

Likely Bi-Party Commission.

With so vital and radical a change as that from voluntary to enforced enlistment pending, it is but natural that the Liberals in Parliament, rendered justly critical by past events of the desire of the Government to give even-handed justice to political friend and foe alike, should insist on bi-party representation on the Commission which will probably be appointed to administer the conscription bill. It is likely that the Government, under the circumstances, will agree to this demand. If, as is probable, a central body Commission is established to supervise the conscription proposals the members of the Commission may be expected to include a fair proportion of Liberals. Similarly with the local boards to be appointed in connection with individual selection, the same principle would obtain.

Sir Sam for Chairman?

For the Chairmanship of the central Commission Sir Sam Hughes is suggested in some quarters. Sir Sam has been one of the first to advocate compulsory service, and the bringing up of his resolution on the subject was only forestalled by prompt action by the Government last week after Sir Sam had communicated with the Prime Minister and urged that opportunity be given him for raising the issue in Parliament forthwith.

Probably Follow U. S. Plan.

While no authoritative announcement is yet available as to the Government's plans, it is understood that the principle to be adopted will follow pretty closely the lines just adopted in the United States. Compulsory registration of all men between specified ages will be required at local registration offices under military supervision. The first draught will then be selected from those military prospects having regard to home production requirements, dependents, physical fitness, etc.

Cannot Use N. S. Cards.

The national registration cards filled in last winter cannot be used as any really adequate or fair basis, since the signing was not made compulsory, was not sworn to, and some twenty per cent. of the men who should have signed did not return their cards at all, while a considerable proportion of the cards that were sent in were incompletely filled in. Even at that, the million and a half cards sent in showed that there were approximately at least 150,000 men still available in Canada for active service. The Government wants for this year 100,000.

HAVELOCK WOMAN WAS STRUCK BY TRIPLE BEREAVEMENT

Mrs. Ernest Mulligan Loses Her Mother Through Death and Receives Word That Two Sons Have Been Killed at the Front.

DIED AT VIMY RIDGE

To lose her mother through death and to be informed that her two sons have been killed at the front, the three tragedies coming almost simultaneously, is the unusual and most lamentable experience of Mrs. Ernest Mulligan of Havelock. A short time ago Mrs. Mulligan was officially notified from Ottawa that her son, Pte. Edward Thos. Mulligan had been killed in action on April 6th. Another message received about the same time stated that another son, Pte. Chas. Mulligan, was officially reported missing. This was followed on Saturday with another wire from Ottawa containing the sad news that Pte. Chas. Mulligan is now officially reported killed in action, between April 8th and 10th. Mrs. Mulligan's mother died only a week ago, on Monday, May 14th.

BRITISH SYSTEM TO BE FOLLOWED

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, May 21.—A brief statement that the Governments proposed compulsory bill will follow as closely as possible the lines laid down by Great Britain. No further announcement is officially forthcoming to-day on this matter of universal interest in Canada. It is stated that the bill itself, which will not likely be presented till late this week or early next, will not provide for the exemption of any class. Any exemption in regard to dependents or class of employment will be decided upon by local boards working under a central board at Ottawa and military headquarters. Many prominent men here and several members of Commons will come under the scheme if it is impartially administrated. The selections of the call boards will, therefore, be of paramount importance, since upon them will develve the responsibility of selecting men regardless of wealth, position or political influence.

PRICE OF FLOUR DROPS

WOODSTOCK, May 20.—The price of flour has declined here $1 a barrel, and wheat fifty cents a bushel. Prices here are now: wheat $2.25 a bushel and flour $7.60 per cwt. Eggs have gone up to 40 cents a dozen, while butter remains firm at 42 to 45 cents a pound.

A RUSH IN TORONTO TO JOIN COLOURS

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, May 21.—Toronto recruiting depot contrary to the usual Monday custom, is going to keep open all day to-day. This is the result of the imminence of conscription and is comparable to the palmy recruiting days of 1916. By 1 p.m. to-day fully 150 had entered and signified their intention to serve. Seven doctors were busy examining these men, and had done about half of them by noon. Out of that number there had been only one rejection as totally unfit for service.

DEATH OF MRS. DR. HUNTER PASSES AWAY IN TORONTO

Great regret will be felt at the sad news received late this afternoon of the death in Toronto to-day of Mrs. (Dr.) Hunter. The death took place at Wellesley Hospital, where, a few days ago, she underwent a serious surgical operation, after which word was received to the effect that she was doing well, but a sudden change must have supervened.

CONSCRIPTION.

According to announcement of Sir Robert Borden in Parliament on Friday night Canada is to have some form of military conscription or compulsory military service at last. The most welcome feature of the situation is the evidence afforded that the government is to do what it has largely failed to do, heretofore, take an official interest in the raising of military forces, instead of, almost entirely leaving the whole matter to the operation of the voluntary spirit, and the exertions of private organizations. The government has long been urged to more vigorous action, including the enforcement of the Militia Act, but it failed to measure up to the responsibility. It resorted to the cheap method of the post-card style of taking a military census, and, naturally with little result, for that was so ineffective, so far as helping recruiting, that Col. Williams, the chief recruiting officer, says the work will have to be done over again in an effective way.

The success of, and satisfaction from, conscription will depend upon the manner in which it is applied. Sir Robert Borden did not enter into details of method, as he might have done if the matter had been maturely considered, and not the result of some stampede to action. There seems to be reason to fear that party politics will play a large part in it. There are "canned" reports sent out to the Conservative press from Ottawa of distinctly party bias. We are told that when Premier Borden announced conscription, "the Conservative members cheered wildly—leaped to their feet to cheer and applaud," and we are told that "on the Opposition side it was received in silence, with a few exceptions." Why such wild cheering should have welcomed the announcement of the disgrace of Canada is hard to understand; for it is a disgrace that Canada should have to resort to force to compel Canadians to do their duty. Compulsion seems to be necessary; but it is a necessity not to be proud of. Reinforcements for the Canadian forces at the front must be provided, but it is a reflection on Canada's national spirit and Canadian manhood, that these reinforcements will not represent the splendid voluntary spirit that sent our Canadian soldiers to the front.

Another evidence of the determination to make party capital of the occasion is the statement in the reports referred to that Sir Wilfrid Laurier refused to commit himself, awaiting details." Why should he do so without knowing to what he committed himself? No doubt the "Conservative members who cheered wildly" learned all about the details in caucus; and if it has taken the government two or three years consideration to come to the point of doing something, could a responsible leader commit himself on the spur of the moment to the unknown details of one of the most serious proposals ever offered the country?

Conscription depends for satisfying the country upon the details of its application. If it is applied fairly, judiciously and equitably, the best side will be given a last resort, which is only tolerable as a necessity in the interest of the Country and Empire. But as the opening chapters indicate it is to be used as a means of party glory and aggrandisement, things will go wrong. The country has suffered enough from the prominence given the partisan spirit in many ways—in officering and equipping troops and by the application of the most evil expression of partisanship, the partisan system. Conscription is a dire necessity and can only be justified by a fair impartial and non-partisan application. In selecting men for service, no favourites must be played, no partisan consideration have weight.

If the election involves conscription he must blame himself and the adventure therein of the government in the matter of recruiting.

SHIPS OUR GREATEST NEED.

This is the time of crisis when grammatical accuracy of expression gives place to multiplied superlatives. We have come to give first place to many things at once. We declare with truth that the greatest need is more men to keep up the strength of Canadian divisions at the front; with equal truth we say the greatest need is munitions, the greatest need is food, the greatest need is increased production, and that the greatest need is more ships to carry food.

To carry food the greatest need is ships—to keep up the total diminished by submarine sinkings. Canada can, at least she must, produce and supply food. Can Canada help carry food, otherwise can Canada build ships? Yes; though Sir Robert Borden, to excuse his surrender of a Canadian-built navy to the anti-British Nationalists, declared Canada couldn't build a battle cruiser or destroyer in fifty years.

For some time past, the Canada West Coast Navigation Company has been building in British Columbia a whole fleet of sea-going 2,500 ton wooden ships. These ships, while not fulfilling completely present day requirements, are more speedily built than steel ships, and will be invaluable in the emergency, at a time when shipping is so badly needed.

The war loss of shipping has been tremendous. Britain had 21 million tons at the beginning of the war, now reduced by losses of 2 3-4 million tons. Britain, which, in the last peace year built nearly 2 million tons, under war conditions cannot be expected to maintain this rate. If Canada turns in and expends her full ship-building capacity, as is the intention; and if the United States keeps her promise of building two thousand tons of shipping a month, we shall beat the submarine sinkings hollow; and keep open the road to victory—the steady stream of supply to Britain and her allies. Lloyd George said the road to victory is to be found in "ships, ships, ships." Admiral Sir John Jellicoe, in a recent interview, spoke of the strategic position of Canada in regard to food supplies, and said that food could be carried four times as quickly from Canada as from Australia, owing to the respective distances. So that ten new food carrying Canadian ships would be of as much value to Britain and her allies as forty additional ships sailing from Australia. The same applies to the United States food supply situation.

We therefore need to become busy in shipping production as well as in increased food production, which will be of less value, the less our food carrying capacity is.

The organization of the full ship building capacity of Canada is one of the most pressing duties of the government, more important or primarily important than the harvest of conscription or of our fields. More men will be useless unless they are well fed, and more food will do little good unless we can get it across the sea in ships.

Viviani, the premier of France, said at Ottawa: "What does count is that every citizen before belonging to any political party, owes allegiance to his country."

WAIT TILL AFTER THE WAR.

Sir Robert Borden's explanation of what was accomplished at the Imperial conference from which he has just returned, does not give very large authority for insisting upon its usefulness. It seems to have done little to add to the solidarity of the Empire beyond that which now exists, and has long existed as demonstrated by the extent and enthusiasm of Imperial co-operation in the present war. At any rate, according to Sir Robert's statement, all constitutional reorganization of the Empire was to be postponed till after the war—till after the Empire is saved. As Sir Wilfrid Laurier pointed out the only concrete result of the late Imperial conference, was, according to Sir Robert Borden, the creation of an "Imperial War Cabinet," a misleading title as its work is not executive, but purely advisory. Any action that results must come from the several parliaments, to which the Imperial War Cabinet must report. The danger is the possibility that one parliament would act upon the Imperial Cabinet's recommendations or even agreements and others would not. Sir Wilfrid says:

> Thus, for instance, the same thing might happen again as happened in the case of the naval policy in 1911. Then the London Conference recommended naval defence some, for Canada, New Zealand and Australia, with local navies to defend their own coasts and trade routes. But subsequently Canada turned down that policy.

Taking out Canada's failure in the matter of providing naval defence, Canada herself has shown that no reorganization of the Empire is needed to bring the centre of the Empire and the outlying dominions into harmony of object and aim, and into effective co-operation in the common interest. No constitutional organization of Empire would have more effectively brought Canada and its Parliament and people into the place in this war to which they have been drawn spontaneously and voluntarily by no more tangible compulsion than that of affection and loyalty to the common interest. Imperial conferences frequently and even yearly as Lloyd George promises, are very valuable things in the way of keeping up the Imperial connection and Imperial spirit; but after all the successful promotion of the Imperial interest devends upon the manner in which each member individually, is accordance with a recognized Imperial policy, plays its part. Every unit doing its best at doing its bit, will result in the good and growth of the great whole.

How does the Dominion Minister of Labour reconcile the fact of a rise in wages of 10 per cent. and a 45 per cent advance in the cost of living with his masterly inactively in dealing with the food situation?

The necessity for economy has given a certain simplicity to fashion which is a great advantage.

IS THE HEBREW DREAM OF A RESTORED PALESTINE ON VERGE OF REALIZATION?

Right on the eve of realization now, to all appearances, is the oldest dream which has been cherished by any people of earth, the dream of the Hebrews to possess again their patrimonial land. History knows no other race so scattered, plundered, exiled and oppressed, which has clung so long and tenaciously to such a slender hope as have the Jews; and now at last their age-long ardent desire seems near fulfillment.

At a meeting held in New York city the Kehillah or Jewish community which represents the million and a half Hebrews of the metropolis, passed a resolution, the introduction of which brought the five hundred delegates to their feet, shouting, cheering, weeping for joy. "At last! at last!" they cried, our Jewish republic, the land of our prophets, our Palestine! And when the white and pale blue banner with the double star of David was unfurled their enthusiasm knew no bounds.

The resolution recited their unfaltering faith in the triumph of the cause of which our country stands, reaffirmed their faith in the speedy redemption of Zion and expressed their full confidence that the United States and its allies will use all need ful efforts for the realization of the hope and aspiration of the Jewish people for the re-establishment of a free and publicly recognized homeland in Palestine.

The Turkish Empire is breaking up. There is no doubt of that. British and Russians are near a junction north of Bagdad which will cut Mesopotaima in two, and leave the Turks in Palestine hemmed in between two armies, the Syrian desert and the sea. Thus surrounded their capitulation would be inevitable.

The present plan of the British is not to attack Jerusalem. Ringed by rugged mountains and valley easy of defense it would be a waste of life and labour to assault it when it must fall as soon as its supply lines are cut. The city and its venerable holy places will probably thus escape destruction. Unlovely as they are in many respects and wholly unfit to govern subject peoples, the Turks are not depraved and vicious enough to wantonly destroy the shrines of Christendom. They are robbers and will steal whatever they can; but they will not destroy through pure malignity as the Germans have in France. Being surrounded and realizing that eventual surrender is unavoidable, the Turks will be on their good behaviour. Had the Prussians been trapped, and had they known that they would be held accountable for their acts, would they have wasted Picardy as they did, and have committed such unspeakable crimes against women and girls? People who are brave towards helplessness are generally docile and subdued enough when in the grip of superior power.

But to return to the Jews. It is providential for the Zionists that America, England and France which esteem and accord full civic rights to the Jewish elements in their populations will have the controlling voice in deciding the future of Palestine.

10,600 From This District

Kingston District Will Be Expected To Raise About One Tenth of the Additional 100,000 Men For Overseas Service

414,531 VOLUNTEERS

In raising by conscription 100,000 additional men for service overseas, and according the same population basis of allotment to military districts as was adopted by the Government in its former plan to secure 500,000 men by voluntary enlistment, No. 3 (Kingston) Military District will be required to provide 10,600 men. The draft from each military district throughout Canada would be approximately as follows:

No. 1 District, London .....9,200 men
No. 2 District, Toronto ..17,200 men
No. 3 District, Kingston ..10,600 men
Nos. 4 and 5 Districts, Montreal and Quebec ...27,800 men
No. 6 District, Maritime Provinces.....13,000 men
No. 10 District, Manitoba and Saskatchewan .....12,000 men
No. 11 District, British Columbia.....5,400 men
No. 13 District, Alberta ..5,200 men

Total .....100,000 men

414,531 Have Enlisted to Date.

According to figures made public by Col. C. H. Williams, chief recruiting office, for Canada, the total number of men who volunteered for service up to April to raise 500,000 men by voluntary enlistment, was 414,531.

The following figures showing the number it was proposed to raise in each military district, and the actual number who enlisted from each district, are at the present time illuminating as showing where the voluntary enlistment system broke down.

No. 1 Military District (London), proposed enlistment 44,000, actual enlistment 33,659.

No. 2 Military District (Toronto), proposed enlistment, 86,000; actual 94,986.

No. 3 Military District (Kingston), proposed, 53,000 ;actual, 46,834.

No. 4 and 5 Military Districts (Montreal and Quebec), proposed 139,000; actual, 45,057.

No. 6 Military District (Maritime Provinces), proposed 65,000; actual 37,844.

No. 10 Military District (Manitoba and Saskatchewan), proposed, 60,000; actual, 79,340.

No. 11 Military District (British Columbia), proposed, 27,000; actual, 39,958.

No. 13 (Military District (Alberta), proposed, 26,000; actual, 37,343.

It will be seen that No. 2 Military District has exceeded its number by 8,986; No. 10, Manitoba and Saskatchewan, by 19,340; No. 11, British Columbia, by 12,958, and No. 13, Alberta, by 11,343; while No. 1, London, is 10,341 behind; No. 3, Kingston, 5,166; Nos. 4 and 5, Montreal and Quebec, 93,943; No. 6, Maritime Provinces, 27,156.

Men Available in Canada.

According to the census of 1911, which are the only dependable figures at present available, there were in that year 1,674,540 males in Canada between the ages of 18 and 45 which are the only dependable figure. It is interesting, accepting these figures as a basis, to compare the number of eligibles in each military district in that year with the number who have enlisted since the war began:

No. 1 Military District, eligibles 1911, 137,000; total enlisted, 33,659; probable number eligibles available, 103,341.

No. 2 Military District, eligibles 1911, 265,000; total enlisted, 94,986; probable number eligibles available, 170,914.

No. 3 Military District, eligibles 1911, 164,000; total enlisted, 46,834; probable number eligibles available, 117,166.

No. 4 and 5 Military Districts, eligibles 1911, 390,827; total enlisted, 45,057; probable number eligibles available, 335,770.

oN. 6 Military District, eligibles 1911, 178,477; total enlisted, 37,844; probable number eligibles available, 140,633.

No. 10 Military District, eligibles 1911, 275,577; total enlisted, 79,340; probable number eligibles available, 206,237.

No. 11 Military District, eligibles 1911, 152,278; total enlisted, 39,958; probable number eligibles available, 112,320.

No. 13 Military District, eligibles 1911, 120,264; total enlisted, 37,343; probable numb r eligibles available, 82,921.

By the above table it would appear that 1,259,908 eligible men have not enlisted voluntarily.

U. S. ADMIRAL IS CANADIAN

Commander of American Fleet in British Waters Born Near Port Hope

PORT HOPE, Ont., May 21.—The reference in the American papers to the fact that Admiral William S. Sims, who is commanding the United States fleet in British waters, is a Canadian by birth and, hailing it as an omen of good hope has created especial interest here. Admiral Sims was born 60 years ago in the Township of Hope about two miles north of Port Hope, but came to the town with his parents when an infant His father was Albert Sims and his mother before her marriage was Miss Adelaide Snowden. When young Sims was ten years old they moved to Pennsylvania, where his father took the position of Superintendent of Coal Mines. Admiral Sims entered the United States navy at the age of fifteen. His wife was Miss Hitchcock, daughter of Senator Hitchcock. Admiral Sims' parents are dead. Col. R. W. Smart and Mrs. R. C. Smith of this town, are cousins.

Stewards Elected For the Ensuing Year—Letter of Appreciation to Rev. R. G. Peever—The Statistical Report For the Year

The regular May meeting of the Quarterly Official Board of the George street Methodist church was held in the church parlours on Thursday evening, May 17th, 1917, the following gentlemen being present: Rev. R. G. Peever, B.D. in the chair, Rev. Cruickshanks, Messrs. D. W. Dumble, B. Shortly, W. Fisher, T. M. McFadden, G. W. Powel, H. G. Walker, C. C. Parsons, Wm. Might, T. W. Robinson, John Howland, H. C. Stabler, G o. Robertson, R. J. Winch, B. F. Ackerman, A. E. Micks, A. Northey, Felix Brownscombe, S. A. Oke, and S. R. Armstrong.

In the absence of Mr. Geo. Carruthers the Recording Steward, Mr. Felix Brownscombe acted as secretary of the meeting. A letter was read from Mr. Geo. Carruthers, tendering his resignation as Recording Steward, on account of his temporary removal from the city. Mr. Peever presented a very satisfactory statistical report for the year. Reports were presented by Mr. Brownscombe, Treasurer of the church, Mr. C. C. Parsons, Superintendent of the Sunday school, Mr. C. S. Thompson, President of the Epworth League and the Pastor read reports from the Ladies' Aid and Women's Missionary Society. Mr. Brownscombe stated that the Treasurer of the Church Poor Fund, Mr. Yelland, wished to resign and Mr. Powell was appointed as his successor. All the different branches of the church work appeared to be healthy and progressive and the givings in practically every department showed an increase.

Messrs. H. C. Stabler and T. W. Robinson were elected delegates to the May district meeting, with Mr. Geo. Powell and H. C. Walker as alternatives.

The following gentlemen were elected Stewards for the ensuing year: Messrs. Geo. C. Carruthers, D. W. Dumble, B. F. Ackerman, B. Shortly, T. M. McFadden, H. C. Stabler, T. W. Robinson, S. R. Armstrong and E. E. Ingall. The latter gentleman was unanimously chosen as Recording Steward.

Mr. D. W. Dumble moved that the following letter of appreciation of the Pastor's work for the years be presented to Mr. Peever. The motion carried by a standing vote.

The Letter.

The Reverend R. G. Peever, B.D., having served as pastor of George street Methodist church, Peterborough, for the full term of four years, and being now about to remove to his new appointment at London, Ontario, this Board Realizes it is a pleasing duty to give expression to their appreciation of his pastoral services while stationed here.

Mr. Peever has been favoured with a goodly presence and a clear and far reaching voice that made him easily heard. In manners he is dignified, courteous and kindly. Every duty falling to him as a pastor he cheerfully performed, all services as visitor, leader of week day services, and presiding officer were ably and acceptably rendered. He adhered to the discipline and, as presiding officer, was courteous and correct. His preaching was acceptable and profitable, his congregations kept up and the membership and givings to the church increased. Mr. Peever interested himself in the Sunday school and in the general societies of the church, and accorded them his full sympathy.

Prudent and discreet, he made no enemies and all his people are friends who regret his leaving, and hope for him and his family all prosperity and happiness in their new home.

Submitted to the Quarterly Board, Thursday, 17th May, 1917, and adopted by unanimous standing vote.—Recording Steward.

MUSIC IN THE HOME

MUSICAL HISTORY REPEATS ITSELF

Innovations Arouse Prejudice To-day Just as They Did Century Ago.

Even at this late day in the history of phonograph and player-piano music, we occasionally hear folks objecting to what is called automatic and semi-automatic instruments on one score or another.

"They make music too easy for young people," it is said. "Keep them from their grind at piano or violin or vocal lessons; make them think there is little use in working hard for something that can be bought in perforated rolls or small black discs.

When in the early sixteen hundreds, preachers here and there began to advocate the introduction of new songs into the churches, and thus thaw out the Puritan ice which had encrusted all forms of musical expression and reduced the stream to a tiny trickle of stereotyped psalm tunes, people began to object quite stormily.

Song singing was a "new way." Other music was almost an unknown "tongue" to most of the people. There were too many tunes to be learned. No one could learn them all. Songs might open the door to instruments, and instruments were the work of the devil for the seduction of mankind. The forefathers of the people had got into heaven on the wings of the orthodox psalm tunes, therefore there was no need for other music than that.

A long hard fight was started against the icebergs of prejudice. Point by point was won by the lovers of music (new men from across the sea). Finally the organ was admitted to some of the more daring churches, and the list of tunes increased from five or six to a dozen or more, here and there!

There seems to be a pronounced demand for music among the masses—and anything which aids in bringing music to the people must of necessity find a permanent place in our midst.

The skeptical had best pass judgment slowly.

Even musical history is repeating itself.

RAGTIME MUSIC CHAMPIONED BY MODERWELL

Well-Known Authority Finds Much Merit In It.

Ragtime the berated is still ragtime the beloved in millions of hearts. Musicians may condemn it, but they cannot banish it from our midst. Dr. Muck, director of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, may and does call it "poison" and a corrupting influence upon national taste, but he himself sadly confessed that in one case at least the subscribers to his own concerts fed mostly syncopated melodies to the victrola at home.

Defenders of ragtime have come to the front from time to time, though [illegible] has always been more or less sporadic and the burden of [illegible] "It's not as black as it's painted."

But now comes Hiram J. [illegible], widely known as an art [illegible] critic and student of the [illegible] and openly declares himself [illegible] champion of ragtime. He examines [illegible] and gives his verdict that it is "all right."

A Purely American Product.

Its first claim to recognition, if not esteem, says Mr. Moderwell, is the fact that it is "the one original and indigenous type of music of the American people . . . . . the one type of American popular music that has originated and undergone constant evolution. The American art-song—song that obeys the canons of artistic composition, is indebted for the meaning of syncopation [illegible] distinguished from the art-songs of other nations. But our ragtime songs [illegible] by themselves in the realm of popular music. They [illegible] a high spirit, unreasoned perseverance and naturalness. They echo the [illegible] of our city life. The [illegible] words, vulgar and sentimental as they often are, nevertheless piquantly express our everyday doings and desires.

Why It Retains Its Hold.

Ragtime is substantially new in musical history and has proceeded on its triumphant career without official sanction and assistance. This alone, Mr. Moderwell thinks, is proof of its vitality. And its vitality, in turn, is the result of its everlasting freshness, or buoyancy, or flavour, or some less definable charm, which makes even the disapproving musician like it, if it catches him off his guard and before he remembers that he shouldn't. It is the "personality" of these pieces, then, that is responsible for the sale of some thirty million copies of them annually.

The Folk Song Once Despised Too.

The beautiful folk songs of Germany, France and Russia once received just as cold a reception in social and artistic circles as is to-day accorded "Keep Your Eye on the Girlie You Love" in the studios of our eminent vocal teachers. But now see the homage paid the melodies of the illiterate Russian peasant! Baritones from the Metropolitan Opera House give the chants of the boatmen on the Volga a prominent place on their recital programmes and are nervous about rendering them in exactly the right manner.

The folk song, too, has become the basis of some of the most vigorous styles of composition, respected even by the best musicians. Lovers of ragtime also may well be optimistic. Who knows what high goal their favourite music will achieve? Irving Berlin, who won fame and wealth as the composer of "Alexander's Ragtime Band" and several other syncopated masterpieces, is thinking of writing a whole opera in ragtime!

Male Singing in Victoria.

The recent concert of the Arion Club of Victoria, B.C., marked the silver anniversary of this notable male chorus. Mr. Frank Sehl conducted, and a former conductor Mr. E. Howard Russell was present. The programme was light in character, but the men sang with great enthusiasm and made a particularly fine impression in the famous "Night Witchery" by Storck. There are not enough male choruses in Canada. Our musical life too frequently is almost completely in the hands of women. It would be a fine thing if in the small towns of Ontario and the other Provinces the men of the church choirs and others who are not connected with any choir could be organized for music-study. There is no more delightful pastime than part singing. It has all the surprises of poker and perhaps a shade more refinement.

JOB ARDERN.

Dame Fashion Becomes a Patriot

At least she is making loyal efforts to incorporate the national colors in all kinds of apparel. While the use of red, white and blue may be patriotic, it is surely not in good taste to overdo by too much trimming.

Dresses very military in meaning are appearing in the New York shops, and a number of sports suits are shown that have a distinctive trench origination.

Capes and cape coats assume brass buttons and military braids, and not a few hats have a smartness that is quite military.

The navy has exercised a very pronounced influence as well, but then you know middy suits and blouses have always been worn.

Anniversary Services At Park Street Baptist Church On Sunday

Large Congregations Attended Morning and Evening Services at Which Rev. Dr. Brown of Toronto Preached ---Special Music By Choir---Lieut. Marks Present.

The congregation of Park Street Baptist church celebrated with special services yesterday another anniversary. The pastor, Rev. Dougald Brown, was assisted by Rev. Dr. J. G. Brown, of Toronto, who preached in the morning and evening. At the latter service Lieut. Thos. Marks, son-in-law of Mr. A. Nicholls, organist of the church, who recently returned from France on a three months' leave, was present, and lead in the opening prayer in which he included a fervent appeal for the men at the front. Lieut. Marks is a member of Park street church. The choral service, under the direction of Mr. Nicholls was especially appropriate to the occasion. At night the numbers were the anthem—"I will sing of the mercies of the Lord forever," male quartette, "A Perfect Day," the offertory selection, "For soldiers and sailors," and a soprano solo by Miss Florrie Nicholls. An incidental and gratifying feature of the progress of Park Street church has been the steady improvement of the choir under the leadership of Mr. Nicholls.

At the evening service, Rev. J. G. Brown preached on the attractiveness of companionship with Jesus from the text St. Luke 5-10, "And when they had brought their ships to land, they forsook all, and followed Him." In simple language Rev. Dr. Brown sketched the scene by the lake of Gennesaret when Simon and Andrew and the sons of Zebedee, James and John, after a night of fruitless fishing on the lake had drawn their boats to the shore and were engaged in washing the weeds and slime from their nets. When Jesus appeared, followed by the crowd who desired to hear Him, He entered Simon's boat, asked him to push it a short distance from the shore and thus taught the people. Rev. Mr. Brown pointed out that Simon was downcast by the failure to catch any fish that night and as he listened to Jesus, His words made a deep impression upon him. When men are prosperous and getting along in their business affairs they often feel that they do not need God. They do not listen to sermons. They are more interested in their business than in sermons. Perhaps if Peter had made a large catch that night he would have been off to market and might not have been converted. It is in times of failure, discouragement and loss that they are driven to God. "One reason I believe Peter listened so intently to Jesus," said Rev. Mr. Brown, "was that he had come in from the lake a beaten and disappointed man. So he came to realize that it is a greater thing to find Christianity than a fortune. Peter was also impressed by the note of authority in Jesus' preaching and at the end of the sermon did not hesitate to put out on the lake. When the nets were filled with fish, Peter was so overcome by the consciousness of the presence of God that all he could do was to fall on his knees and say, 'Depart from me; for I am a sinful man, O Lord.'" And Jesus answered, 'Fear not; from henceforth thou shalt catch men."

Rev. Mr. Brown spoke of the attraction Jesus exerted in the fact that Peter left his wife, his home and business and for three long years remained with Him. He was not moved by wealth, position or power, nor for the glory that association with Christ the wonder-worker would have reflected to him.

THREE INFLUENCES.

Three things, Mr. Brown said he believed lead Peter to Jesus. He had received a great religious experience. He had been forgiven of his sins, and received salvation and peace and joy. He believed that in Jesus he had found a great friend and that in following Him there was an opportunity of living a great life. Christ made him a "rock" character, and "companionship with Jesus will completely change your character. He can turn Simons into Peters any day."

And Simon had been a rough fisherman. Cursing and swearing was characteristic of that class of men, Rev. Dr. Brown stated Simon's old habit broke out on him the night Jesus was betrayed. The speaker added a caution to beware of the feeling of security from old habits. He concluded by making a strong appeal to seek the service and companionship of Christ.

A SHORTAGE OF SWEDE TURNIP SEED IN CANADA

Swede turnip growers are urged this spring to endeavour to secure and transplant a few sound roots to produce seed for themselves and their neighbours. Owing to the abnormal conditions now prevailing there will likely in the spring of 1918 unless planting in the spring of 1918 unless our Canadian Swede turnip growers make provision for their own supplies by growing the seed themselves. Canadian supplies of Swede and most other field root and garden seeds formerly came from Europe, but this source is now practically cut off. The prospects for home grown seed have been reduced by the present price of Swede turnips for food purposes, as it would now take nearly two hundred dollars worth of full grown Swede turnips to transplant an acre for seed purposes. This factor has had the unfortunate effect of reducing the area in the eastern provinces that would otherwise have been planted for the production of Swede seeds.

SYNOPSIS.

Virginia Carvel, daughter of a proud Southern family, meets Stephen Brice, impoverished in fortune, but of New England aristocracy, at the slave market in St. Louis. Virginia is bidding, through her cousin and recognized suitor, for a beautiful quadroon maid. Stephen, touched by the sight of the dark girl's beauty and misery, outbids Virginia for her possession, with the purpose of setting her free. Virginia is haughtily indignant at what she considers Yankee impudence, but something in the man's manner fascinates her, and she falls in love with him in spite of herself. Stephen goes to work in the law office of Judge Whipple, a warm personal friend, but political antagonist of Virginia's father, Colonel Carvel. The young people meet regularly through this channel of friendship, but Virginia vindictively hostile. The civil war breaks out and her father sides with the South while Stephen and Judge Whipple are strong for the North and for the raw-boned backwoods statesman, Abraham Lincoln. The breach between the lovers seems hopelessly widened. But at last, when the South is conquered, and the cruel war is over, Virginia, who has been won to open admiration for the generous and heroic deeds of her lover, and Stephen are brought together through the kindly interference of Lincoln himself.

FIRST COMMUNION TO 75 CHILDREN

At St. Peter's Cathedral on Sunday Morning

Children of St. Peter's parish received their first communion at the Cathedral yesterday morning. The class was composed of thirty girls and forty-five boys. In preparation for the Sacrament they had spent three days in retreat and were previously examined in Christian doctrine. The boys assembled yesterday at St. Peter's school and the girls at St. Mary's convent and marched in file to the church, where they occupied the central front seats. Mass was celebrated by Bishop O'Brien, who gave their first communion to the children, and after words addressed them on the importance of the event and the place it would have in their lives. The children will be confirmed next Sunday.

AN OPEN LETTER TO SIR ROBERT BORDEN

Mr. Ben H. Spence Appeals to the Premier to Abolish Liquor Traffic Which He Describes "As a Hindrance to Success and An Enemy of Our Country."

The following open letter has been addressed to Premier Borden by Mr. Ben. H. Spence of the Ontario Branch, Dominion Alliance:

Toronto, May 18th, 1917.

Dear Sir,—As a native-born Canadian, loyal to the core, one who has repeatedly offered himself for active service in any capacity, military or civil, at home or abroad, who feels that now the great, all-important objective is the winning of this war, and the triumph of the great principles of honour, justice, liberty, humanity for which our Empire is contending, and who sees in the liquor traffic a hindrance to success, and an enemy of our country, I take the liberty of addressing to you these words.

No finer men tread the earth today than our noble boys who have given themselves so willingly and unreservedly to this great cause. Every true Canadian is proud of the men at the front who have signally honoured their country and efficiently served their King, many of whom have made the supreme sacrifice. We would be unworthy, indeed, who incapable of serving, would cast the slightest reflection upon the honour, integrity, chivalry, goodness of these, our brothers. But, feeling as I do, it would be disloyalty to them, and to my own convictions, not to attack with all my power the liquor traffic that has hurt so many and helped none and not to urge with all my soul upon you and your Government immediate action to the limit of your power in curtailing this great evil.

On your desk, still awaiting reply, is the unanswered memorial of the Dominion Prohibition Committee, presented by the deputation of which I had the honour of being a member in January last. That deputation represented every Province in Canada, and I believe, the general sentiment of the citizens of Canada regardless of party, creed, race, or colour. It was, I submit, a moderate, fair, reasonable request and asked for action along three lines:

1. Prohibition of the manufacture of intoxicating beverages.

2. Prohibition of importation of intoxicating beverages.

3. Stoppage of shipment of liquor into dry Provinces.

This legislation to be effective during the war and at its close the question of its maintenance or repeal submitted to a vote of the electors, or, in the alternative, an immediate referendum to be taken upon such legislation.

Permit me to enlarge upon these points:

The Manufacture.

First, the Manufacture: The vast bulk of liquor used is made from foodstuffs sorely needed to-day, yet which are made harmful instead of helpful, weakening instead of strengthening, by the process of distillation and brewing.

I am not unmindful of the fact that much of the liquor distilled today is for munitions purposes, yet there is in bond, held for beverage purposes, an enormous quantity (over 205,000,000 gallons) that could readily be used for munitions, instead of that now being manufactured. This would mean no less alcohol for munitions, but more grain for bread. There is no objection from any standpoint to the diversion of foodstuffs for any useful war purpose. The granting of our request would not interfere in the slightest degree with such manufacture. There is, however, unfortunately, some liquor still being distilled for future use as a beverage.

With the breweries, the manufacture is practically all for immediate use, and no good purpose of any kind is served save in regard to the very small quantity that might be needed for medicinal purposes.

The figures furnished by Sir George Foster, in the House of Commons, the other day, show that in three years Canadian distilleries used 216,207,947 lbs. of foodstuffs, the breweries, 336,998,663 lbs.; a grand total of 553,206,610 lbs.

This is an enormous item and though not so great as in other countries, has no justification, especially in war time. Surely Canada, which we call the granary of the Empire, should use its food products to help humanity not to debauch its own citizens and lessen their producing power.

Second. The importation: We are to-day sending large sums of Canadian money to foreign countries in exchange for destroyed foodstuffs. Why should we do this? Why not have the money available for the purchase of undestroyed foodstuffs and other necessary and helpful products?

Stopping Shipments.

Third, stopping the shipment of liquor into Provinces that have prohibited the Sale: The present condition is an intolerable one and constitutes a gross infringment of Provincial rights. Seven of the nine Provinces of Canada have prohibited the sale of liquor within their boundaries; yet liquor is being freely shipped in from other Provinces, and thus the purpose of the citizens in enacting their prohibitory legislation is to that extent defeated. That this nullification and over-riding of Provincial laws should be allowed to continue unhindered would be a monstrous injustice.

It may be argued that the Provinces have not availed themselves of legislation passed last year. This is because that legislations offers absolutely no protection to the present laws in the various Provinces. To use its provisions further legislation would be necessary in every Province in Canada; legislation, moreover, along a wholly new line, that has never, so far as I know, been followed to any large extent in any civilized country in the world. Prohibitory legislation everywhere has been primarily directed against the "traffic" in liquor rather than the "use" of liquor and it is only in regard to the prohibition of the 'traffic' in liquor that we have the Privy Council's decision sustaining provincial powers.

Only by going further than any legislative body in the world has gone, and making it an offence for any person to have, keep or use liquor for beverage purposes could use be made by any Province in Canada of the Act passed by the Dominion Parliament at its last session. This would be departure from the primary principles of legislation hitherto followed and the entering upon a new line that might entail vexations, tedious, expensive litigation.

I submit that when a Province has made it illegal for a citizen of the Province to sell liquor to another citizen for beverage purposes, it is not asking too much to request the Dominion Parliament to give the Dominion equivalent of this law by prohibiting the shipment of liquor from another Province for beverage purposes except to those who have the right to sell within the Province. This would simply put the citizens of other Provinces upon the same footing as citizens of the Province passing the prohibitory legislation.

Overwhelming Need.

The need is overwhelming. The flower of Canadian manhood is freely shedding its life-blood; citizens of every rank are making unstinted sacrifices at the call of patriotic duty and for the great principles and issues at stake in this titanic world struggle; we are warned and warned of the pressing need of the hour for the development and conservation of every resource of manhood and means. Yet, in the midst of all, the resources of our Dominion are being squandered, the efficiency of our manhood impaired, our transportation facilities blocked, and industry hindered by the liquor traffic that is absorbing millions of dollars, millions of bushels of grain, labour of thousands of men, to which must be added the shame, suffering, crime sickness, death that are the inevitable retail of this curse.

We are waging war with an alcohol-shaken hand, our purposes thwarted, our efforts paralysed, our strength palsied. The marvel is that we have done so well working under this stupendous handicap, but surely now the time has come for Canada to put forth her full strength in fulfilment of her divinely-ordained mission. Is it not reasonable that we should expect Parliament to legislate in the hour of our national need in harmony with the people's will?

If you have any doubt whatever as to the attitude of the electors of Canada, then, I submit the alternative proposition should be accepted, and the people allowed to express themselves upon the issue. Surely, at this critical hour the Parliament of Canada will not place itself in the position of refusing this measure or refusing the people power to get it by their vote. In a democratic country, such a position is almost unthinkable.

The King's Appeal.

His Majesty, King George, has appealed to us with words that thrill every heart when he said:

"I rejoice in my Empire's efforts. I feel pride in the voluntary response from my subjects all over the world who have sacrificed home and fortune and life itself, in order that another may not inherit the free Empire which their ancestors and mine have built. I ask you to make good these sacrifices."

You, yourself enjoyed the King's hospitality, and saw how practically he and his household synchronized their action with this appeal by the abolition of all intoxicating beverages during the period of the war. Surely what has been done by our King in his House can be done by our Premier in his country.

Ringing in our ears is the strong appeal of Lloyd George, Premier of the Empire, whom he said:

"We are fighting Germany, Austria and drink, and so far as I can see, the greatest of these three deadly foes is drink."

"I have a growing conviction, based on accumulating evidence, that nothing but root and branch methods would be of the slightest avail in dealing with the evil. I believe it is the general feeling that if we are to settle German militarism, we must first of all settle with the drink."

Who is there that doubts that, had Lloyd George the power that you Sir, enjoy, he would crush this, our Empire's deadliest foe?

What Hearst Said.

Sir William Hearst, Premier of Ontario, has done what he could. His words are fresh in our memory, when he said:

"Surely we, as a young country in the making, must so shape our legislation and educate our people that no government of this country will have to make the admission the Government of Great Britain has had to make and be like that Government impotent to remove the evil. If it should ever be in years to come Canada is threatened with some foe from without, as England is to-day, that her statesmen will have to admit, as England's have had to on the present occasion, that great as the danger was from the enemy from without, we had a greater danger from within, from something we had licensed, tolerated, and cultivated, if so, it will stand as a reproach to us and to this generation, and public men of he future will curse us for our cowardice and weak-heartedness."

"The situation in the Old Land to-day speaks to us in this new and in tones of thunder, to avoid the path that land has taken, and to shake off that which hampers progress in times of peace, and may destroy entirely in times of war.

"The soil of France and Flanders is red to-day with the blood of Canada's best and bravest."

"Are we who are staying at home comfortable and safe around our firesides going to cavil about our rights, our privileges, and our pleasures while the stream of our riches and best life's blood continues to flow unstaunched for the cause of liberty?"

"I may be wrong in the judgment I have formed. The Act before the House may not accomplish what I hope for it, but I would a thousand times sooner be guilty of an error of judgment in taking an action of this kind with the object of conserving our strength and mobilising our resources to the utmost so that this war may be brought to an end and the life of our young manhood saved, as far as possible, and the grief and suffering and woe minimized to the greatest extent we can, than to sit with folded arms free from criticism and censure."

The country awaits your reply, Sir Robert. We earnestly trust that you will not be outdone in patriotism, sacrifice or strong progressiveness by other Empire leaders. Canada will rejoice at such a demonstration of strength, and a thrill of pride will go through every citizen to know that we have, as Premier, a man who nobly dared to lead in his country's need.

We ask you, your Government and the House of Commons to do what you have the exclusive power to do, and to do it now. We do not ask you to pass a law the Provinces have powers to enact, but do respectfully request that, instead of placing further responsibilities upon the Provinces and thus indefinitely delaying the possibility of relief, you accept the opportunity now offered and act within your present powers.

The enactment of legislation in harmony with our request will bring additional honour to Canada in the eyes of the Empire, and of the world. It will redound to the credit of yourself and your Government, and raise you in the esteem of right-loving citizens everywhere.

Show Soldier's Spirit.

Let us, at home, act in the same spirit of brave unselfishness shown by them in the trenches. They count not even their lives dear to them, if but our Christian civilization be saved from the domination of a heartless military despotism. Should we hesitate about giving up our intoxicating drink?

Would that we might have in the Dominion House of Commons a repetition of the inspiring scene witnessed in the Ontario Legislature when the Leader of the Government and the Leader of the Opposition led the whole House, and, without a dissenting voice, the Ontario Temperance Act was put through.

Sir Robert! If you speak, Parliament will follow you. But, it is your move.

In yearning hope that this Canada we love, through the Premier we honour, will rise to the greatness of this occasion, fraught, with such vital possibilities and responsibilities, I am,

Yours respectfully,
BEN. H. SPENCE.

To the Hon. Sir Robert L. Borden,
Premier of Canada.

Honour Roll Unveiled In Trinity Church

Stirring Address By Major T. J. Thompson—A Word to Munition Workers and the Man Who Plays Tennis

"BLOOD MONEY"

Munition workers who claim to be doing their bit and are incidentally getting their bit at the rate of five or six dollars a day, would not have felt flattered had they attended the Sunday morning service held in Trinity Methodist church, when Major T. J. Thompson, pastor of the Globe Presbyterian Church, Ottawa gave an address in connection with the unveiling of the honour roll upon which was inscribed the names of eighty members of Trinity church who have responded to the call of Empire. Major Thompson scored the man who would be seen attired in white flannel trousers and a tennis racket in his hand while the boys in the trenches are standing in water with a rifle in their hands. The speaker also referred to the man who takes "blood money" while the conquest for right rocks the world. Speaking of munition works, Major Thompson said that the position taken by the munition worker as to his importance in the present crisis, is largely due to the Government "preaching that the man who makes munitions is as important as the man who joins the army." "I hope," said the speaker, "that within the next few weeks the Derby plan will be applied in Canada, but I doubt if it will."

In his opening remarks the speaker said that he had been requested to come to Peterborough by Major T. G. Campbell of Kingston, who was unable to be present. Speaking of the world war, Major Thompson said that the conflict was a supreme and final test of Christians. "There is no industrial upheaval, world war or crisis which in the final analysis is not based on religious principles," said the speaker. As poor as our world is there is one triumphant impulse and that is the vision of Jesus Christ who came into the world in a concrete form. He who pours out his heart's blood in the current of human events in order to make this world a better place to live in enjoys the fullest realization of the ideal which makes life worth living. So it is we gather here to-day to honour those who saw that vision. It is because of this ideal that the church of Jesus Christ has been forced to stand behind this awful conflict. It is no vain task the church has undertaken. It is the duty of the church to help save men from the dominion of tyranny and evil."

The Redemptive Struggle.

"This redemptive struggle," said Major Thompson. One of the best results of this great redemptive movement will be the elevation of politics and the purification of politicians. As a Christian institution having paid the supreme price, we must insist that the sacrifice of our people shall not be in vain. We must press on until the last sin has been eradicated and Christ has been crowned Lord of Lords and King of Kings."

Major Thompson said he had addressed many congregations during the past few months and in that time had not seen a congregation with so few young men present as was the case in Trinity church Sunday morning. "You have very few young men here," remarked the speaker. "It was here that the speaker referred to the young man who would appear in a tennis costume. "The church must scorn the fussy pleasures. We must remember the men who are holding the line in an effort to preserve to the world that civilization and righteousness which Christians enjoy. It is a wonder of Divine grace that any mother can live with the nightmare of screaming shell ever hanging over her loved one. The church must raise its voice against petty party politics and racial difference that makes it more difficult to accomplish a mighty task. The church must call for an absolute dedication to the cause of all we have and own."

The Honour Roll.

The actual ceremony of unveiling the honour roll, which was draped with a large Union Jack in front of the pulpit, was performed by Lieut.-Col. D. Walker, Officer Commanding the 57th Regiment, Canadian Defence Force. "In times ancient and modern it has been customary to erect memorials to noble service," said Col. Walker. 'The church itself is a memorial to one of the greatest events in the history of the world. The British flag, under whose folds our soldiers are fighting, protects the meanest as well as the noblest man in the Empire."

In referring to the honour roll, the Rev. J. P. Wilson, D.D., said that the records pertaining to the number of men enlisted who were members of the Methodist church were incorrect in that the original records did not reserve a place for Methodists. A place was reserved for Wesleyans, but there are few Wesleyans in Canada, so that many men who were members of the Methodist church in Canada were credited to other churches in the early months of the war.

The Great War.
Declared Midnight August 4th, 1914.
Peace Proclaimed ——.
Trinity Methodist Church Roll of Honour. Heroes All

The honour roll was inscribed by Mr. J. Kennett, a member of the Church. It is a beautiful piece of workmanship.

During the course of his address Major Thompson referred to Gunner T. E. Gilchrist whose name appears on the honour roll. Gunner Gilchrist is one of three brothers who have responded to the call.

NO CHEAP EGGS THIS SEASON

KITCHENER, Ont., May 20.—The farmers at the city market yesterday offered as their explanation for the sharp increase in price of eggs from 35 cents last week to 42 and 45 cents, that they were being offered 45 and 47 cents a dozen for the Summer by representatives of packing and cold storage houses, and that the eggs could be called for at the farms. Very little hope was held out to local consumers that the price of eggs would be lower than 40 cents a dozen this season.

Natives of Egypt

In spite of frequent reports that the native population of Egypt and the Soudan are on the point of rising against their British rulers, they have proved themselves more loyal than ever, says Herbert Adams Gibbons, author of "The New Map of Europe," who recently spent some time in the various North African countries gathering material for his new book, "The New Map of Africa," and who contributes an article on "Great Britain in Soudan" to the January Century. Mr. Gibbons describes in confirmation of this opinion, a visit which he paid to Omdurman on the occasion of the prophet's birthday. His host was Sir Reginald Wingate, Kitchener's successor to Sirdar of the Soudan. "When Sir Reginald explained to the sheiks who I was and what I had come for," writes Mr. Gibbons, "they nodded their heads with satisfaction and laughed.

"Tell him to write what he sees," they declared. 'We are glad that he came to our feast, for he can give London a good report of us.'

The last tent we visited was the most important and around it were gathered all the people of Omdurman and of the tribes who had come into the city for the festivities. Thousands of white robed howling dervishes were dancing and barking and had reached the point of frenzy. We sat sipping coffee in the midst of a crowd of sixty thousand Moslems who had been followers of the Mahdi and believers in the Khalifa. The sirdar's guard of honour was four mounted Sudanese lancers. There were no troops, Egyptian or British. None of our party was armed. The people of Omdurman, at the moment of the greatest religious exaltation of the year, had in their power the Governor General and the chief representatives of British military and civil authorities in the Soudan.

"I know the feeling of Moslem fanaticism in an Oriental crowd. I have experienced it more than once when I knew that I was facing death. That feeling was not here. There was real love for the Sirdar and no hostility to the rest of us."

TRIS SPEAKER NOW LEADING

Back in His Old Place at Head of American League Batters

NEW YORK, May 19. — Tris Speaker's absence from the top of the American League batting list ended to-day. He has bounded back and leads George Sisler by a single point. Speaker is clubbing at a .398 clip and Sisler is hitting .349.

George Burns is the real leader among the National Leaguers, but his average of .395 is topped by four players. Jack Smith, St. Louis, is hitting .405; Welhoit, Boston, .393; Griffith, Cincinnati, .391, and Fischer, Pittsburg, .390.

Benny Kauff, of the Giants, is doing within the select class, being credited with a mark of .300. Hal Chase, last year's National League champion, is hitting .295, and Hornsby, Cardinals, is hitting .290.

Babe Ruth maintains his place at the top of the American League batters, his eight straight victories giving him a record of having won that many and lost one. Williams, Chicago; Shocker, New York; Fisher, New York; Love, New York; and Cunningham, Detroit, have escaped defeat.

Ferd Schupp, Giants, leads in the National League pitching averages, with three victories and no losses. Seaton, Chicago; Reuther, Chicago; Mayer, Philadelphia; Prendergast, Chicago; Middleton, New York; and Eller, Cincinnati, have maintained ciphers in their lost column. Alexander has won five and lost two.

BASEBALL

A baseball game was played Friday afternoon on the King Edward school grounds between the Central seniors and the King Edward senior teams. The Centrals were victorious by the score of 11 to 6. The batteries were: For King Edwards, Holyman and Robinson; for Central, McGill, Dutton and Bugeau.

S. McNeely umpired the game.

"THE FALL OF A NATION"

Thomas Dixon and Victor Herbert's Patriotic Spectacle at the Royal To-day and To-morrow

"The Fall of a Nation," which will be presented for the first time at the Royal this afternoon and evening, tells a vital story of international significance. A confederation of European powers decides to seize North America and annex it to Europe. A secret army of the foreign-born is raised in New York. As the greatest city of the North American States has few armed defenders, it is an easy task to capture it overnight.

Meanwhile 150,000 trained troops, fresh from the European wars, are rapidly transported across the Atlantic with all their equipment of great guns, poison gases, liquid fire, and bombs. Effecting a landing they easily vanquish the small North American army, join the foreign-born conquerors of New York, and march to Washington where they depose the president and put in his place the "Imperial Viceroy of the Provinces of North America."

While the locale of the story is in and near New York, its momentous lesson applies to any country unprepared to meet the foreign foe. At the end of the present war there will be millions of idle troops in Europe.

What new task will be set for them? Will covetous eyes be cast on the riches of the continents discovered by Columbus? Will some Emperor—like Napoleon III., who sent the French invaders into Mexico—attempt to seize a fair and wealthy portion of the New Hemisphere? Then—unless the country attacked is ready and well prepared—history will record a real tragic "Fall of a Nation."

It is against this terrible danger that Thomas Dixon, the author of the spectacle, provides an awful warning.

On the music side the author has had the collaboration of Victor Herbert. Mr. Herbert is the first of the prominent composers to write a complete original score for a picture spectacle. The musical accompaniment will be performed by a large orchestra.

HINTS TO THE HOSTESS

At a luncheon made up exclusively of ladies the hostess leads the way to the dining room and leaves her guests to identify their places by the cards placed at every cover. Or, standing by her chair, she can herself indicate the order in which she wishes them to be seated.

At her right she seats that lady to whom she wishes to show the greatest honour. The others she may place in the order which she believes will discover the most congenial companionship.

Artificial light is not recommended for luncheons or for luncheons given in the spring and fall.

COUNTS ON GERMANS HERE TO HINDER WILSON

THE HAGUE.—A writer who has been in America since the war, writing in the Rhenische Westfalische Zeitung on German-Americans, says that it is difficult on this side of the Atlantic to understand why Germans have little influence in America. It, however, is painfully evident, he continues, that such is the case, and people who have known America for the last thirty years have seen German influence there diminish. Commenting on the fact that the second generation speaks no German, he says that this speedy Americanisation is due to want of national feeling and national pride in Germans.

"Before Roosevelt got Wilson and the Government under his influence," he says, "there was, no doubt, among German-Americans a feeling for the Fatherland."

The writer says that when he was in America an old friend in the Middle West showed him a rifle he had just bought "to shoot English-Americans when things break loose."

A Western journalist had assured him that there would be a revolution when war was declared, and that he (the journalist) had made preparations for it.

Another friend has asked him to make known in Berlin a plan in accordance with which Germany was to take Canada as a war indemnity, so that German-Americans might shake the dust of America off their feet and settle in Canada under the German flag.

"How is it going with all these Germans? Are they under Wilson's yoke, or do they resist? The English-American censor works so admirably that we know nothing; but they probably take shelter behind their pacifist friends and try to make obstacles for Wilson. We can count on them to hinder Wilson's policies and to endeavour to drown Roosevelt's demagogic shouts. The Federal Constitution guaranteeing the rights of the separate States gives American citizens the power to make themselves felt, and only those who do not know the German-Americans can doubt that this power will be used."

Commenting on Roosevelt's plan to put American troops in service in Europe, the Frankfurter Zeitung says:

"It is unfortunately still doubtful if we shall have the pleasure of greeting the Rough Rider here on the western front."

ALL MAY CHEESE STILL IN FACTORIES

LISTOWEL, May 19.—At the regular meeting of the Listowel Dairymen's Exchange to-day a resolution was unanimously passed requesting the Government or Dairy Commission to take action at once to relieve the situation regarding the sale and shipment of cheese, as all May cheese in this district are still in the factories, unsold, and with warm weather approaching the conditions are becoming acute. The secretary was instructed to send a copy of this resolution to J. A. Ruddick, Dairy Commissioner at Ottawa. About a thousand boxes were boarded, but the best bid was 25½c and no sales were made.

Driver Jas. Cruickshanks, of Peterborough is reported admitted to No. 47 General Hospital on May 10th, suffering from a severe fracture of the fibula, according to official word received by his wife at 184 Dublin street this morning. White, who enlisted here with the 93rd Battalion in October 1915 and went overseas with the Peterborough unit is officially reported wounded, his name appearing in Sunday's list issued at Ottawa. Corp. White originally enlisted here with the 39th Battalion early in 1915, but was discharged at Belleville, afterwards joining the 93rd. He went through the Vimy Ridge battle safely and a few days ago a letter from him appeared in the Examiner telling of "going over the top" on that occasion.

He enlisted in the 93rd Battalion soon after it was organized and went overseas as a member of A Company, and was transferred to the 1st Battalion at the front.

Mr. Miles Hamilton has received word from his son, Capt. Beresford Hamilton, C.F.A., who was a few days ago officially reported shell-shocked to the effect that he has been admitted to hospital in Brighton and that his condition is not serious.

WASHINGTON, May 20.—Efforts to escape registration for military service under the selective service law by trips to Canada or any other country will not succeed. The Canadian Government is to co-operate with the United States to defeat the purpose of slackers. It is likely that similar regulations will be made effective relative to attempts to leave by ships to foreign ports or to Mexico.

Five munitions workers of Riverside, N.J., were turned back of Canadian officials at the border, who notified them that the border would be closed until the United States Government has completed its registration. The date for this was said to be June 5.

In the past six weeks 184 casualties among soldiers from Peterborough and the immediate district have been reported. The 93rd Battalion members continue to form the greater portion of the lists. The figures are as follows:

Killed in action	42
Died of wounds	19
Missing	2
Wounded	121
Total	184

The 74th Peterborough Battery has had a very successful week. In the six recruiting days of last week ten new recruits were added to the strength of the battery, five of them being Peterborough boys. Major Crocker expects to secure at least double that number this week. With conscription coming many young men intend to join the colours before the measure is put in force, and naturally the Peterborough battery is appealing strongly to such men. The recruiting office at the armouries is always open, and information is cheerfully supplied.

When Julia Ward Howe died memorial service in her honour was held at San Francisco, and the local literary colony attended practically en masse to pay by their presence a tribute to the writer, relates the Saturday Evening Post. A municipal officer was asked to preside. Dressed in his long frock coat and his broad white tie, he advanced to the edge of the platform to launch the exercises and introduce the principal eulogist. He bowed low and spoke as follows: "Your attendance here, ladies and gents, in such great numbers shows San Francisco's appreciation of good literature. This meeting is a great testimonial to the immortal author of 'Uncle Tom's Cabin'—the late Julia Ward Howard!"

New Food Regulations Show The Government Will Stop At Nothing

LONDON.—The scarcity of sugar throughout Great Britain has now reached serious proportions, although some improvement is looked for during the coming month. The regulations now in force are exceedingly stringent. Necessities arising as a result of the war seem to have effectually ended the popular belief that "an Englishman's home is his castle," as is shown by the following orders issued by Lord Devonport who is in control of the machinery, governing Britain's food supplies.

1. An order will be issued under which the police will be given the right to search any house, and if they discover more than a fortnight's supply of sugar there the householder be liable to severe penalties, including imprisonment.

2. A retailer shall not sell more than a fortnight's supply of sugar to one consumer.

3. In an order issued it is made illegal for retailers to make it a condition of selling their sugar that the customer shall buy other commodities as well. Such an offence shall be liable to penalties. There is no obligation, however, on grocers to sell sugar.

4. There is understood to be a leakage of sugar through some of the retailers. Small manufacturers who use sugar for jam making, aerated waters, etc., are believed to be supplementing their regulation supply by getting a bit more from the grocers. Steps will be taken to stop this. Further restrictions will also be put on the manufacture of confectionery, sweets, chocolates and pickles.

5. A committee will be appointed to secure better methods in the local distribution of sugar. On this will be representative of the trade and co-operative societies and two M.P's.

Grocers may be asked to keep lists of their customers, with the number of the members of the household, to facilitate the regulation of supplies.

The allowance of three quarters of a pound of sugar to each member of a household may shortly have to be reduced to one half pound. The rationing of sugar to hotels is being considered.

It is understood that Lord Devonport is opposed to the compulsory rationing of provisions at present. This would necessitate a staff of some 30,000 people who might better be otherwise engaged in war work. If it is later seen to be necessary such work will be undertaken. The food controller has pointed out that failure to intelligently comply with the regulations will be followed by action that may prove disastrous to many now engaged in the sugar business.

Few Opportunities To Choose Cheap Groceries Grocer States

A long list of groceries recently tabulated in the Canadian Grocer showed an increase in the price of every item except pineapples. Retail dealers examining their stocks these days find few articles they can term cheap. The market has advanced so generally that selective buying for price advantage is limited to a small range of articles.

One grocer advised the purchase of fruits which are now coming into season. "I can sell a peck of oranges for 60 cents," he said, "whereas potatoes are 85c and 90c a peck. A dozen of bananas can be bought at 20c, and better fruit at 30c. With bananas and oranges salads are easily prepared, and they can be otherwise served at meals as a substitute for other food. Rice went up two cents a pound last week, but even at the advance it is comparatively cheap when you consider its food value, and the number of persons one pound will supply as dessert at a meal. Rolled oats at five cents a pound, buying twenty pounds for a dollar, is also an economical purchase. For sauces, pies and other preparations for the table some canned fruits sell at 35c a can of scarcely more than a pint. But canned apples can be had at 35c a gallon. Jams and jellies are really not dear yet, for the reason that there were heavy stocks in hand when the war broke out. Beans at fifteen cents a pound may be recommended to persons seeking the advantage of price. I have often thought that household ammonia should be more generally used as a cleansing article, especially since soap has become so dear.

We have been told that soap is likely to go much higher, and in fact may yet become a luxury during the war. Immense quantities of tallow are required for the manufacture of glycerine in munitions.

Canned salmon appears to be an economical article of food. There is absolutely no waste, there is no loss in cooking as in the case of meat, and the quality at 20 and 30c a tin should commend itself to the most fastidious tastes. Stove blacking is one article that has not become dearer, but an advance is not unexpected. However, it will make but very little difference to the householder."

Such were the limited suggestions received from one grocer, and they clearly indicate the proscribed limits of a cheap food market at the present time, with few promises of easier prices in the near future.

OF INTEREST TO FARMERS

Labour on the dairy farms this year is going to be hard to get, and undoubtedly will cost all it is worth. It is a condition that will start many dairy farmers thinking about mechanical milkers.

Uniformity in market stuff is becoming more popular every day, and the time when one could see traces of twenty or more different breeds in a carload of lambs, hogs or cattle will soon be past.

If the average farmer could get one assistant as easily as the Ontario Department of Agriculture can hire a score of "experts" production might be greatly increased in this old Province in 1917. — Farmer's Advocate.

The earlier calves are taught to eat the better. If the calf is given a small handful of ground oats with the hulls sifted out, in the bottom of the pail after he is through taking up the mills he will be eating chop before he knows it.

No mistake will be made in planting for a large area for fall wheat next autumn. With a short crop in sight for America this year, and all Europe torn by war, the shortage of wheat in 1918 is likely to be as great as in 1917.

Special Uniform

Special Garb Proposed For Women Who Are Engaged in War Work

TORONTO, May 20.—With all the different forms of war work women have undertaken, comes the question—should they adopt a uniform, a costume suitable to the "job" in hand?

A member of the thrift committee, when questioned on the subject, said she most decidedly advocated the wearing of a uniform, not only as an indication that the wearer was doing patriotic work thus helping by example to enthuse others, but also from the standpoint of suitability. Much of the work undertaken is of such a nature that the usual dress would be most inappropriate. Fancy digging or hoeing in a khaki-kool sport suit or a fluffy muslin dress! Even the simple summer clothes would not be satisfactory on account of the expense, and the valuable time wasted in keeping them clean. A white middy, for instance, would have to go into the tub after one morning in the garden—a khaki or grey one would be so much more serviceable.

"The girls doing gardening certainly need a special costume," continued this representative of the thrift committee. "I think, too, the munition workers should wear one. As for the girls who are volunteering to go out to the farms to help the farmer's wife, it is absolutely necessary for them to wear a regulation uniform. Not only to be appropriate to the work they have undertaken, but as an indication that they are rendering purely patriotic service. It would save a great deal of explanation on their part, for people, seeing the uniform, would understand at once that they regard war workers doing their bit to help in the all-important project of food production."

Have any of the women adopted uniforms yet?

"As far as I know, the only ones are the drivers of the Red Cross collection motors. Their khaki outfits are well known by now, and the University girls who are to pick fruit this summer. They are to wear clothes that will enable them to do their work with the greatest possible ease."

It was learned that the girls of the various colleges are each adopting a uniform which will indicate to which one they belong. Those from University College will wear a dark grey smock and either full bloomers or regular overalls — according to the wearer's personal inclination. The smocking will be done in red, and the lace in front will also be bright red. The Victoria College girls have khaki bloomers, neatly pleated in at the waist so that they look like a full skirt, a khaki middy with bright red bands on the collar and cuffs, and a tie to match. Trinity has not quite decided about its uniform, but it will probably be khaki and blue.

"Of course," said Miss Wyatt of University College Women's Union, "the uniform is not compulsory. If the girl is going for only a few weeks, we advise her to wear old gamping of gymnasium clothes—this saves the expense of buying a new outfit. But if she volunteers for the whole five months it is almost necessary for her to get this strong, serviceable costume. The only thing we insist on is that the students must wear bloomers rather than a skirt. Yes, of course, wearing the regulation outfit would explain why they are doing the work, but it is probable there will be a government National Service badge issued which all workers of this kind will wear."

NO UPROAR IN QUEBEC

Special to The Examiner:

MONTREAL, May 21.—One thing is certain and that is that those who expected the announcement of conscription would cause an immediate uproar in Quebec, have been disappointed. The morning Le Canada (Liberal) has an editorial, in which some pointed remarks are made, but it does not condemn the measure. On Saturday La Patrie commended the statement taken by Sir Robert.

Liberals admit that they are waiting for their party to speak, and it seems to be safe enough to predict that unless the measure is combatted by leaders of the Liberal party, the rank and file in Quebec will accept, even though they do it like Armand Lavergne, who said on Saturday that he is against the measure, but as he is a military man he will go when the government calls him. This is taken to be the answer those opposed to conscription will give throughout this city.

Henry Bourassa has been silent so far. Other French-Canadian papers carry rumours that Sir Wilfrid Laurier will resign the leadership of the Liberal party, and Messrs. Patenaud, Blondin and other members of the Cabinet may also resign as the result of conscription.

OBITUARY

ROBERT INNES.

One of the most highly respected, well known and oldest residents of Peterborough, Robert Innes, passed away suddenly on Sunday morning, at his residence, 356 Rubidge street.

The deceased gentleman, who had not been feeling very well for some days, went to bed on Saturday evening, apparently in his usual condition, and rose about seven o'clock Sunday morning, and remarked that he did not feel as well as usual. He requested his housekeeper to notify his physician, adding that the latter need not come till he was leaving on his regular visits. A few minutes later, however, Mr. Innes' condition grew worse and his medical adviser was urgently summoned. He found deceased sufferinfi from serious trouble with his heart. Medical skill proved unavailing and death came quickly.

Mr. Innes had passed his 83rd year. The anniversary had been observed on May 8th. He was born in Aberdeenshire, Scotland, and came to Peterborough in 1856 to enter the employ of the old dry goods firm of Nicholls and Hall. On the death of the late Robert Nicholls and the reorganization of the firm, he became an active member of the new firm, Hall, Innes and Company, with which he was identified for many years, and recognized as the principal buyer during that period.

Since his retirement, in the year 1898, the deceased has lived a quiet and unobtrusive and blameless life.

In politics Mr. Innes was a Liberal, and in religion, a Presbyterian, a member of St. Paul's Church, taking, in his days of activity, a warm interest in its work.

Mr. Innes leaves only one relative in this country, a nephew, Mr. Andrew Cameron Innes of Toronto. His wife, Isabella Hamilton, sister of the late William and Peter Hamilton, died about a year ago.

The funeral will be held on Tuesday morning at 10.30 from the residence, 356 Rubidge street.

Often the cause of a child's dullness can be traced to poor eyesight, and it is too bad to have their progress hampered in this way when it can be so easily corrected. THE RAIN WAS BADLY NEEDED

Market gardeners, amateur and otherwise, breathed a sigh of relief when Saturday night's thunder storm broke over the city, and a short but refreshing rain created new life in the gardens that dot the city. "It is just what we needed," remarked Mr. G. O. Cameron, local manager of the Bell Telephone Company. It might not be generally known, but Mr. Cameron, together with other members of the Bell Telephone Company's staff, is numbered among the men who have their hat in the ring for greater production.

AUTOMOBILE DRIVERS MUST BE CAREFUL.

Cars Have Greatly Increased in Number and Traffic Soon Congests.

Automobiles have become so numerous that the owners are reminded that within the centre of the city they should exercise caution and attention in their driving. On Saturdays especially the streets are alive with cars, and carelessness at the wheels is bound to lead to mishaps. A week ago Saturday there were three, and nearly every day there are many narrow escapes reported. Chief Thompson has gone to a great deal of trouble in disseminating the traffic by-law. Hence there can be no excuses of ignorance offered in the event of arrests. Drivers who corkscrew up the streets in a spiral route are a source of danger, and twenty miles an hour is not an uncommon speed along the main street. This is contrary to the by-law and must be stopped.

JACK RABBITS TO HELP SOLVE FOOD PROBLEM?

BEND, Ore., May 21—E. D. Prescott of Seattle, has come here to establish a place of business wherein he may negotiate with the farmers, ranchers, or others for the purchase of the common, every-day jack rabbit—the one for whose scalp the state pays a bounty—the jack rabbit that pesters the homesteader and rancher.

Mr. Prescot proposes to pay 10 cents for the rabbits, but they must be fresh, and in order to make his staying here worth while it will be necessary for him to arrange to buy at least 300 to 400 rabbits daily. He can use more than that if he can get them. His company is now receiving thousands of rabbits from Idaho and other states in the West, and they can use about 12,000 daily.

DEPUTATION WILL GO TO BUFFALO

A red hot day and Alderman Dobbin, representing the Patriotic Fund, will lead a deputation across the line. The first stop will be Buffalo, where an attempt will be made to obtain three housand tons of coal to be distributed in Peterborough under the auspices of the Patriotic Fund. Mr. Elias Rogers, one of the coal barons of Toronto, has promised his "vote and influence," and has assured Alderman Dobbin of his interest in the matter. Mr. Rogers specified a "red hot" day for the occasion, for obvious reasons.

A GOOD WINTER HABIT

Many people dread winter because the sudden climatic changes bring colds, grippe, rheumatism, tonsilitis or bronchitis. But thousands of well-informed men and women today avoid much sickness for themselves and their children by taking a few bottles of Scott's Emulsion to make richer blood, fortify the membranes of the throat and chest and create body-warmth to resist sickness. Soldiers at war receive cod liver oil; it will also strengthen you.

Aeroplane Superiority on Western Front Is Vital In Deciding Present War

Inferiority of French and British Air Service to That of the German Is Not Relieved in Any Way by Assistance the United States Can Offer in This Arm

MUST QUIET MACHINE GUNS

By Captain Henry J. Reilly.

The armo of the modern soldier is the trench. As a range, rapidity of fire and violence of effect of all arms and particularly of the artillery trench, light and heavy, has increased, the trench systems have increased in complexity until on a may they look like a mystic maze extending not only over miles in length, but also miles in depth. The extent of these trenches is so great and the measure of protection furnished so large that only the most accurate knowledge of every part of them can permit the artillery to know exactly what must be destroyed if their own infantry is to successfully assault them. The artillery may fire literally millions of shells, but if they do not actually hit the machine gun emplacements, the fire trenches, the trench mortars and the enemy light and heavy batteries, when the assault comes the attacking infantry will be met by a fire which will either entirely stop it or only permit its advance at a tremendous cost in human life. This has happened more than once in the present war, particularly in the battle of the somme.

This example is not given from a spirit of criticism, but because the British misconceptions as to war prior to the present war and during the first part of it were the same as those which obtain in this country at the present time. Therefore, we should take advantage of our late entry to avoid making the same errors, as we will do inevitably if we are unwilling to frankly face the truth even though we may not like it. Accuracy of artillery fire, of course, depends upon a well trained artillery. However, the most perfectly trained artillery cannot smash its target if it does not know exactly where they are and cannot correct its preliminary ranging fire in order that its fire for effect may be overwhelmingly effective. This location of the targets and correction of ranging fire can only be obtained by aerial reconnaissance and observation of fire carried out by aeroplanes.

MUST QUIET THE MACHINE GUNS.

Thus the infantry advance depends upon the artillery smashing the enemy's means of defence, above all the machine guns, which can create the most havoc among the assaulting infantry. This smashing depends primarily upon aerial reconnaissance and observation of fire. However, this reconnaissance and observation can only be performed by flying over the enemy's lines not once but day after day. This can only be done if the enemy aviators can be driven out of the air and kept out or at least so far back as to be unable to materially interfere.

The best example of the importance of not losing control of the air is furnished by the overrunning of the greater part of Roumania by the Central Powers last winter. General Iliescu, the Roumanian Chief of Staff, in the interview which he gave the New York Herald, pointed out as one of the primary causes of the Roumanian defeat the fact that the tremendous German superiority in aviation enabled them to sweep the Roumanians from the akies in the very beginning and thus blinded them. The Roumanian artillery never knew where its targets were, and much less whether or not it was hitting them. The German artillery knew where its targets were and could regulate its fire. The result was it smothered the Roumanian artillery and infantry with bursting shells and enabled its own infantry to advance with relatively small losses.

MAY WIN DESPITE INFERIORITY.

In the artillery or infantry, guns and rifles inferior to those of the enemy can be used and success obtained in spite of the fact. In the Russo-Japanese war the Japanese field guns were inferior to those of the Russians. However, they were better handled. This is in no way true of flying material. Sir Douglas Haig, in his official despatch dated December 23, 1916, states that "the maintenance of the mastery of the air, which is essential, entails a constant and liberal supply of the most up to date machines, without which even the most skilful pilots cannot succeed." In other words, as soon as one side or the other gets a type of machine which can ascend to a greater altitude and fly more quickly than the machines possessed by their enemy, they can successfully attack and drive out of the air their opponents.

Recently Mr. McPherson stated in the British House of Commons, in answer to a question, that there had never been a situation which could properly be described as absolute mastery of the air on the western front, and also that at the present time the mastery of the air on that front was undecided. He further admitted that while the main German concentration of the German air force was before their guns last year it is now in front of the British forces. In other words, the German aviators are maintaining themselves a number of miles further forward than was the case last year, with a consequent stoppage in many cases of complete Allied aerial reconnaissance and observation of fire. Such work as was done could only be partially done, and that as the result of heavy fighting.

TWO DAYS' AIR RECORD.

During one two-days period of March, 56 aeroplanes were brought down, 39 of them Allied, 23 of them German. The more the situation is examined the more it is evident that one of the primary requisites to complete victory on the western front, the front on which the war undoubtedly will be decided, is to blind the Germans by an overwhelming air superiority and that the French and British have not been able to manufacture a sufficient number of the right type of machine and to educate a sufficient number of pilots. Here is place in which immense resources in matreial and in men power can be utilized. However, before we can furnish the assistance needed we must realize that we are looking at the problem on too small a scale when we continue military aviation as a branch of the Signal Corps, itself an auxiliary service, and when we maintain that our machines and their engines are of an adequate type, when every observer who has seen them and the European ones, knows they are decidedly inferior.

In Europe the aviation service is no longer considered an auxiliary service such as the Signal Corps, Medical Corps or Engineer Corps, but as a fighting branch of the service and on a par with the infantry, artillery and cavalry. Not only is it a separate service with its own general in command, but also it has a separate supply service in the rear, which deals directly with the manufacturers.

Every bathroom should have a clock in it as a gentle reminder to each occupant not to waste time.

COMMENT LACKING

Few English Papers Have Editorial References to Conscription in Canada

LONDON, May 21.—Cables announcing the adoption of conscription in Canada were rather meagre during the week end which amounts, perhaps, for lack of comment in London papers so far. This absence of comment, though, is doubtless due also to a recognition that the adoption of such a measure is entirely a matter for Canada itself, and English comment will not help in any way. It is worth recalling, though, that the authoritative statement was issued in London in December, stating that "a decision has not yet been reached anent sending another Canadian division to the front, but its organization is being completed. What will ultimately be done in this connection will depend largely upon the response obtained for recruits in Canada."

More From Canada.

Londoner's Diary, in to-night's Evening Standard says: "I have good authority in declaring that Premier Borden's recent visit here had no direct bearing on this latest departure, except that in common with other visiting statesmen he had facts and figures placed before him which showed him that the Dominion he represents must do even more in the great struggle than it already has done. Compulsion in Canada is for many reasons a much more difficult matter than compulsion in England. The Dominion Government, however, will doubtless have heard of the outcry from voluntary 'diehards' here when the matter was first moved, and will also have heard how very little that was effective was heard from them when the measure was ultimately introduced."

Favours a Referendum.

The Manchester Guardian says that a year ago conscription for Canada was agreed to be impossible. Various things have combined to remove some of the difficulties, but grave obstacles still stand in the way. When the national service scheme was first launched, its directors said conscription might lead to civil war. That so soon afterwards it should be, in fact, proposed shows the striking effect on Canadian opinion of the entry of the United States into the war. Two courses are open to Premier Borden, either to utilise the Militia Act to secure a large extension of his forces, thus releasing others for the front, or to put the issue of compulsion direct before the people. The latter method was adopted by Australia, and though the Government failed of their aim, it is so clearly the more honest procedure that the Canadian Government is not likely to incur the odium of foregoing it.

POTATO SHORTAGE ACUTE IN GERMANY

Government Unable to Keep Up the Ration Promised When Bread Was Cut Down — In Many Sections the Potato Ration is Only Twenty-four Ounces Weekly

THE GOVERNMENT'S PROMISE

COPENHAGEN, May 22. — The potato shortage in Germany is making itself felt in spite of assurances given at the time the bread ration was reduced last month that enough potatoes were on hand to permit a weekly per capita issue of five pounds until the next harvest. The Bureau of the Food Control by strenuous efforts, has been able to supply a five-pound ration in the Berlin and Westphalia industrial districts, where the labour crisis at the time of the reduction of the bread ration was particularly acute. Bitter complaints however, are coming from various other sections of the empire, which feel that they are being slighted in favour of the capital and the Essen district.

In many sections of Bavaria, according to reports to the Reichstag, the potato ration is only twenty-four ounces weekly. The Hamburg ration is now, and has been for weeks, three pounds, and the sister city of Altona has been placed for the next week on a pound-and-a-half allowance.

It is true that, in accordance with the Government's promise, the bread ration is not reduced where the five-pound allowance of potatoes is not furnished. Every pound extra of flour applied for this purpose, however, upsets the Government's scheme of distribution, which was based on the fact that the stock of grain in the empire is barely adequate, under reduced rations, to carry the population through until Aug. 15—the earliest possible date when flour from the new harvest is expected to be available.

The national military requisition and expropriation of grain, which has just been finished, has, according to Food Commissioner Michaelis, not uncovered enough unreported grain to materially affect previous estimates.

Cattle Markets.

Union Stock Yards.—Receipts 271 cars, with 3,322 cattle, 237 calves, 944 hogs, and 65 sheep and lambs.

Yesterday's heavy run of nearly 3,500 head of cattle included a good proportion of choice, well-finished stable steers and heifers. The demand was anything but active for the early part of the day and trading was extremely slow. Prices barely held steady for the choicest loads, and were inclined to wobble on the medium qualities. The market for the earlier transactions was probably off 15c. to 25c., but later cattle went over the scales more freely, and some good prices were made around $12 to $12.50, the latter for choice baby beef.

Sheep and lambs, quiet, but steady.

THOSE LIABLE FOR SERVICE

Although the Militia Act has not been called into force the impression that with a view to improving the military position of the Dominion, the Government may invoke this measure is becoming more general. Should this be done the entire male population of the country would be liable for military service and for this purpose four classes of militiamen would be formed.

The first to be called up would be males from the age of 18 to 30 years, unmarried or widowers without children, the second class from the age of 30 to 45 years, unmarried or widowers without children; the third class would be all married men or widowers with children from the age of 18 to 45 years; while the fourth class would comprise all males from the age of 45 up to 60 years.

WHO ARE LIABLE.

The Act says: "All the male inhabitants of Canada of the age of 18 years and upwards and under 60, not exempt or disqualified by law and being British subjects, shall be liable to service in the militia: Provided the Governor-General may require all the male inhabitants of Canada capable of bearing arms to serve in the case of a levee en masse." Permission is also given to any youth under the age of 18 years to enlist as a bugler, trumpeter or drummer.

EXEMPTIONS.

Those exempt from service are besides members of the Privy Council for Canada, all judges and members of the Executive Council of provinces and deputy ministers of the Federal and Provincial Governments, clergy The militia shall be divided into the inations. Telegraph clerks are also exempt, and so too are officers employed in the collection of the revenue and the wardens of all public prisons and lunatic asylums. Members of the police force and fire brigades, members of the naval militia and the professors in colleges and universities, and teachers in religious orders are also free. Provision is also made whereby the only son of a widow, being her only support, and persons disabled by bodily or mental infirmities will not be called upon for service.

CONSCIENTIOUS OBJECTORS.

"Conscientious objectors" come under the following provisions: "Persons who from the doctrines of their religion are averse to bearing arms or rendering personal military service are among those who shall be exempt from liability for service in the militia, under such conditions as are prescribed."

The milita shall be divided into the active and the reserve, the former being raised by voluntary enlistment, and by ballot, and the latter shall be raised and maintained under regulations prescribed by the Governor-in-Council. Thus, all classes called up will be in the reserve militia and only those who volunteer will be called upon for active service, the exception being that when an insufficient number volunteers, corps shall be raised by ballot.

MAY ADJUST PAY.

With regard to pay, the Act says: "For officers, warrant officers and non-commissioned officers such rates as may be prescribed; for privates at the rate of 50 cents per day, which rate may be increased as prescribed up to a maximum of $1 a day; an allowance of a dollar a day or such other rate as is prescribed is made to each officer and man for every horse actually and necessarily used by him."

Every member of the militia who absents himself without leave from his corps for a longer period than seven days may be tried by court martial as a deserter, and for all military purposes trial by court martial shall be established.

DON'T DOUBT THIS! WORKS LIKE A CHARM

Read how to lift painful corns or calluses off without any pain.

Lift your corns out with the fingers. Not a twinge of pain or soreness before applying, or afterwards. This may sound like a dream to corn-pestered men and women who have been cutting, filing, and wearing torturous plasters. Yes! Corns lift out and calluses peel off if you will follow the advice of this Cincinnati authority.

Ask any drug store man for a small bottle of freezone. Tiny bottles like here shown can now be had for small cost. Apply a few drops directly upon your tender corn or callus, and instantly the soreness disappears; then shortly the corn or callus will be found so loose that it lifts right off.

Freezone is an ether compound which dries instantly. It doesn't eat out the corn or callus, but just shrivels it up so it lifts away without even irritating or smarting the surrounding or underneath tissue or skin. Genuine freezone is only sold in these small bottles, packed in a little wooden case bearing a yellow wrapper. Don't accept anything else.

TO WASH PILLOWS.

The task of washing pillows is made simpler by preparing cheesecloth cases which may be sewed to the ripped sides of the ticks. The feathers are shaken into the thin cases and sewed up permanently. Then the feathers are easily washed with warm water and white soapsuds and dried in the open air. When the ticks are washed and ready for refilling the cheesecloth pillows are slipped inside and can ever after be removed at will. But the feathers themselves will not need washing so often as when they Arab Dancing Girls.

An English traveler thus describes the Arab dancing girls he saw at a fair at Biskra, in the Sahara: "Here, surrounded by a rope, on raised deal benches, sit the dancing girls. Beneath them is a deal table covered with strange sweetmeats and syrups. Opposite to them is a bench, upon which, after a small payment, you may install yourself and admire Zora, Fatima, Alchouch or Algia at your ease. They are worth seeing in their gala attire. Indeed, they look like a troupe of magnificent, chattering macaws perched in the sun. Some, the real Ouleds, wear crowns of gold, surmounted by tufts of tinted ostrich feathers. Upon their painted fingers are heavy barbaric rings. Upon their arms are massive gold and silver bracelets. Veils of gold and silver tissue float around them, half concealing their robes of pink, yellow, magenta, scarlet and bright green silk. One wears a broad band of diamonds across her broad forehead. Another has sewed her earrings upon strips of velvet and is literally clad in gold coins, which make the eyes of the Arabs glitter greedily. A third, the wonderful Gazela, can scarcely move to the sweetmeat table to drink a glass of sirup with an obeah admirer, so loaded is she with necklaces, amulets and ankle rings."

Heavy Rollers at St. Helena.

If the sea were to break on the shores of Coney Island in time of calm weather with the same force as it does on the shores of St. Helena motions of South Brooklyn would be uninhabitable in all likelihood. They have at St. Helena what are known as calenmas, or heavy rollers. These rollers are particularly bad in time of calm weather. They strike the island with such tremendous force that the spray is sent over Goat Pound ridge, which is several feet above sea level. Scientists are of opinion the calenmas are caused by seismic disturbances beneath the ocean.—Exchange.

GERMAN SUPERSTITION

Soldiers of the Kaiser Have Firm Belief in Charms

A Copenhagen paper writes:—The soldiers of the kaiser are very superstitious, from the men in the ranks to the crown prince. The chief Hun's eldest son carries a horseshoe with him on all his motor trips. The horseshoe is attached to one of the doors of the car. The soldiers of Wurtemberg pin their faith upon a little bag containing the dry pollen of flowers, which, they believe, has the power of warding off the bullets. The Saxons sew into the lining of their waistcoats, the wings of a bat, and think themselves to be invincible, while the Bavarians hold on tenaciously to a still more binaye custom. Before going into a battle, each soldier finds a birch tree, cuts his skin, and lets a few drops of blood fall upon the tree. This ceremony, they assert, hastens recovery, no matter what the nature of the wound, when the leaves begin to fall again.

Where Red Cross Is Defiled

It was the common amusement of these German Red Cross women to tempt our men, who were in the last extremity of hunger and thirst, by holding food and drink out to them to try to make them snatch at it, and then drawing it away. Many scores of our men, begging for a drink, had coffee, or water, or soup tendered to them; and then at the last moment the gentle nurse would spit in the cup or glass. Not seldom our men, in their suffering, had to drink the defiled stuff while the women looked on and laughed.—London Daily Mail.

More German Atrocities

Discoveries at Baden-Baden revealed the statue of the Virgin, which the victim was told to kiss, whereupon a concealed trapdoor on which he stood fell and dropped him upon wheels set with revolving knives.

A HERO HE LIVED, A HERO HE DIED

The survivors of the Leyland Line steamship Canada, when they arrived at Boston a few days ago, told how their ship was torpedoed off the Irish coast, and how their captain, William H. Bullock, sent them away in the boats, but remained himself on the bridge signalling for aid for those in the boats and vengeance for the German U-boat, until his ship went down and he with it. This heroic ending turns out to be the termination of a life marked by deeds of courage and the grandest heroism. Arthur E. Chant, of Fourth Avenue, Verdun, writes The Herald, under date of April 25, as follows:

"In your issue of April 25 you give note to one who died a hero,—viz., Captain W. H. Bullock, of the Leyland Line steamer Canadian, which was torpedoed on April 4 off the Irish coast. When the story of this war is written his name will figure as that of one of those great men who have gone back and from the west in these great days. He was known to a few business men in Montreal, but in the U. S. port from which he sailed year in and out, he was known as the true-born sailor and gentleman. He was under fifty years of age and had been in command for over twenty-five years. He never spoke of his career, but one or two little incidents will bear out his nature. As a youngster (age 15) he was presented with the medal of the Board of Trade for saving life at sea. At nineteen he had the Humane Society Medal and Vellum for saving life on board ship when on fire. At twenty-two he received Lloyds thanks and cheque of merit. At twenty-three he joined the West India and Pacific S. S. Co. as an officer, and the following year was presented by the directors with a handsome cheque and promotion to master of the Floridian, for extraordinary life saving at Colon, Columbia, when he saved the lives of a ship's company in a shark infested harbour. The Humane Society also made special recognition of his bravery. The late King Edward also decorated him on two occasions, and so on up to September, 1914, when he brought his late ship into port "awash" after having been in collision with one of H.M. ships.

"I am sure many of your readers will be grieved to hear of his loss, but when with him in June last, he felt that sooner or later his "run of luck" would cease, but that he was quite prepared to close his career 'doing his duty.'

"He went down with his ship and kept up the grand tradition of the Mercantile Marine."

WHEN YOU CAN'T SLEEP

YOU SHOULD USE

MILBURN'S HEART and NERVE PILLS

Perhaps too much worry has gotten on your nerves, perhaps you have overworked yourself, or have been excessive in your use of tobacco, but whatever the cause, the nervous system must be built up again before restful sleep can be assured.

Those whose rest is broken into by frightful dreams, nightmares, sinking and smothering sensations, who wake up in the morning as tired as they went to bed can have their old, peaceful, undisturbed, refreshing sleep back again by using Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. John Sloan, Haley Station, Ont., writes: "Over a year ago I was very nervous. I could not sleep at night, and I would faint at the slightest fright. I tried several doctors, but they did me practically no good. I noticed your advertisement, and immediately tried Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and I am proud to say they cured me."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box or three for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Have the kitchen shelves placed a half inch from the wall and you will find it the greatest help in cleaning.

A clean and satisfactory method of mending broken china is said to be to melt lump alum and use while hot.

HUNS AND OTHER BEASTS.

In East Africa Make a Picturesque Campaign.

Reuter's special correspondent with the East African forces relates the following incidents about the work of a South African Squadron of the Royal Flying Corps:

The squadron endured a good deal of anxiety on account of lions. These well-meaning and really quite harmless, but terrifying animals had closed in behind the marching brigades to feed upon the dead and dying animals that fell by the way. These lions were frequently encountered by men passing to and fro on motors, and one or two were bagged.

The corps found difficulty in regard to ground scouts, who would insist upon describing two and three feet high as "short" grass. Such grass is short for East Africa, but it can conceal tree stumps which will rip up the inside out of an aeroplane as it lands at 40 miles an hour with disastrous effect.

In July the pilot T— had to make a forced landing, the crash rendering him unconscious. When he came to be found in the neighboring kraal a native who spoke English, and with this man's assistance, was able to get to Handeni, but the native paid dearly for his simple act of kindness, for a German patrol visited his kraal afterwards and hanged him, together with three of his companions.

In July 20 Intelligence received information that a raiding party of the enemy was marching on the aerodrome. Flying was abandoned for the moment, and the squadron turned to the construction of fortifications. The digging of trenches and the building of blockhouses is no part of the work of a flying corps; nevertheless, trenches were dug, blockhouses were built, and the scouts sent forward by the raiding party must have liked the aspect presented by the aerodrome so little that the attack was never made.

In August a curious incident occurred. One of the squadron motorcyclists, dashing along the road with a despatch, became suddenly aware of a rhinoceros, which bore down upon him, passing close behind him. He got down and hid in the grass. The cycle had been going on low gear, and in all probability the fumes from the petrol and its curious antics prevented the rhinoceros scenting the cyclist and rivetted his attention, for he spent some time in cautious examination of this new inhabitant of the jungle; then he trotted off, and our friend, the cyclist, attempted to regain possession of his machine. To his horror he perceived the rhinoceros returning, and again fled to cover. However, the great beast, which showed signs of having been wounded, disappeared, and as his machine was broken, the cyclist had to make his way to camp on foot, passing another bicycle, which had been trampled out of all semblance of a machine by the enraged animal, its owner being nowhere to be seen.

History of the Muff.

The muff has a history all its own. It began life, so far as can be judged from the absence of any previous reference to it, in the year 1662, memorable for the severity and long duration of its winter. Samuel Pepys records in his diary that both he and his wife wore their "muffes" in St. James' Park for the first time during that year; he does not furnish any particulars, however, as to how the "muffes" were fashioned or ornamented.

The muff, once having made its appearance, had come to stay, and throughout the Eighteenth Century it was as much affected by men as by women, a fact attested my many of the portraits of the day. Professional men of all types adopted it, and even the clergy of the period were wont to carry a muff. So popular, indeed, did it become that its use was not confined to the winter months; dainty muffs of lace and silk were worn even in the summer, and its utilitarian character became merged in the purely decorative. Attempts are made nowadays, from time to time, to revive the summer muff, but the idea has not been adopted to any extent.

In shape and in material the muff has seen many changes. It must have begun life just large enough to accommodate the hands comfortably. Later came the fashion of having a muff to match each silk gown, the muff corresponding to every detail of trimming lace, and so on. With the Georges it gradually grew larger and larger until the early Victorian era sees it of the true "Granny" dimensions, a fashion which of late years returned in almost more exaggerated degree.

A Burglar-Proof Bungalow.

The evil-doer loves darkness rather than light, so the Good Book says, and a Toledo man has found in the saying a suggestion for keeping tramps, burglars, and chicken thieves away from his residence, according to The Popular Science Monthly for February. The house is square and stands on a knoll, so when he installed a powerful nitrogen tungsten light in a reflector at each corner, the whole place presented a brilliant spectacle, not at all attractive to marauders.

Japs for South America.

The Nippon Yusen Kaisha, Japan's largest steamship company, has concluded an agreement with the South American Emigration Union for the transportation of 50,000 Japanese emigrants to South America within four years from 1917. The company has also decided to open a regular quarterly service between Japan and South America with ships of about 6,000 tons each. They will proceed by way of South Africa, but the homeward route has not yet been selected.

Zinc Ore in Norway.

A waterfall in Norway will be harnessed and made to provide 125,000 horse-power for smelting and refining zinc ore.

Syrup from spiced fruit can be used for basting meats. This will give the meat a new and interesting flavour.

Pussy on the Ocean.

The great stage scene of the piece was a shipwreck, and after the vessel had gone down only the comic man and the heroine were to be seen tossing on a frail raft on the boundless ocean.

The comedy merchant had expected that his woebegone appearance would raise a laugh, but even he was astonished at the roar which went up when they saw him.

At last he was able to get a hearing. "I wish," he said to the heroine, "that we could get out and walk home, but it's so jolly wet."

The audience was too exhausted to laugh any more, and the voice of the man in the gallery sounded painfully clear:

"If I was you," he said, "I should do it. There's a cat been hopping about on the waves for the last five minutes, and she don't seem to 'ave suffered much."—London Answers.

A Witty Comment.

None of Dickens' children inherited his genius, but Charles Dickens, Jr., had some of his father's humor. When in Boston a number of years ago he was the guest at a dinner given by a club whose membership included many admirers of his father. The presiding officer in an endeavor to emphasize this circumstance as particularly grateful to the guest by an unfortunate slip of the tongue declared that the hosts were delighted to welcome Charles Dickens the younger not only on his own account, but for his father's. Mr. Dickens in response said that he cordially concurred in the estimate of his father as his superior and always appreciated manly candor combined with critical acumen. The situation was saved by a wit calling out, "Long live Charles the second, who never lost his head!"—Boston Transcript.

Historical Divisions of Time.

For convenience time is by historians usually divided into three great eras—ancient, mediaeval (or middle) and modern. The ancient period is considered to extend from the earliest times down to the fall of the Roman empire in the west in A. D. 476, the mediaeval from that date to the discovery of America by Columbus in 1492 and the modern from that time to the present. Some historians prefer to put the end of the mediaeval period at the capture of Constantinople by the Turks, about forty years earlier than the Columbus event. The dark ages are often held to be coeval with the mediaeval era, but some authorities think that the term should be applied only to the part of the era extending from the downfall of the empire of Charlemagne, in the ninth century, onward.

EUROPEAN WAR PICTURES AND CANADIAN SCENERY

NOW that Lake Louise is getting an almost universal reputation as being one of the beauty spots of the world it may be of interest to go a little into its past history, which is vague enough. Probably this place was known to some of the Hudson Bay people or the early trappers but the earliest recorded instance of a white man's visit to this lake is that of Tom Wilson, who in 1882 was in the vicinity with a pack train. He was startled one day by hearing a noise like thunder and he inquired of an Indian companion, called "Gold Seeker," where it came from, and was informed that it was on the Big Snow Mountain above the Lake of the Little Fishes. This was later called Lake Louise, after one of Queen Victoria's daughters who was to Canada with her husband the Marquis of Lorne. Wilson, accompanied by his Indian companion, visited the lake and was told of two smaller ones higher up to the west, one of which was known to his guides as the "Goat's Looking Glass," now known as Lake Agnes.

Some time before 1890 a small cabin was built of logs, was erected on the shore of the lake and a wagon road opened to connect with the little station at Laggan. In this way the first travellers came to Lake Louise, but in 1892 this log hotel was burned to the ground, and later on a small chalet was built which has gradually been added to to accommodate the ever growing crowd of travellers wishing to see the beauty of Lake Louise or to climb the glaciers and mountains in the vicinity until now the hotel is so large that it can accommodate nearly 600 people.

Swiss guides are maintained throughout the season at Lake Louise in order to make mountain climbing as safe as possible. It is a remarkable fact that there has been only one accident in the vicinity of Lake Louise within twenty years and that was just twenty years ago, before the days of Swiss guides. That accident is recorded in a publication as follows:—"The list of fatal accidents in the Canadian Rockies contains but one name up to the present and that is Philip Stanley Abbott of Boston; a man of long experience in mountain climbing in the Swiss Alps and in the Canadian Rockies; a member of the Appalachin Mountain Club. On August 3rd, 1895, Messrs. Abbott, Thompson, Little and Professor Fay left Lake Louise Chateau and started to ascend Mount LeFroy. The party at 5.30 drew up under an immense bastion and Abbott, who was leading, saw beyond an angle in the bastion a vertical cleft up which it was possible to climb. Unroping, Abbott ascended some thirty feet when Professor Little called to him if it would not be better to try and turn the bastion on the shelf. To this question Abbott replied, 'I think not. I have a good lead here.' These were the last words he ever uttered. A moment later Professor Little, whose attention was for the instant diverted, was conscious that something had happened. Thompson, standing at the base of the cliff, saw Abbott fall backward, then head foremost saw him strike the upper margin of the ice, turn completely over and begin rolling down a steep incline. As the limp body rolled downward two lengths of rope coiled upon it as upon a spool, this checked the velocity of the descent of 900 feet and prevented the unconscious form from falling over the cliff below. Abbott died a few moments after his friends reached the place where his body had been arrested in its terrible fall. Two days later the party returned and recovered Abbott's body now wrapped in a mantle of snow."

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

AN OXEYE SQUALL

By M. QUAD

The brig Dolphin of Nantucket, owned and commanded by Captain Abner Bideford, with his wife Mary on board, was making a voyage from Boston to Cadiz. The year was 1784. There had been peace with England for a year, but in granting the colonies their independence the mother country had insisted on the right to search any American vessel in any water and at any time. The pretense was that English subjects were continually deserting his majesty's service and shipping on American craft. It was therefore Captain Bideford's plan to keep clear of any armed vessel flying the British flag. He had a crew of Nantucket men, every one of whom had served in the cause of liberty, and he began worrying about what might happen before he was 200 miles at sea. His wife saw that he was disturbed, and she said:

"Abner, when we left home I do believe that I forgot to fasten the wood shed door."

"What's that to worry about?" he asked.

"Just as much as your fear that we may be overhauled. Let's wait until we see a Britisher bearin' down on us before we git dizzy headed."

But Captain Abner had just made his noon observation when a sail was sighted to the eastward. There was a feeling from the first that she was a British man-of-war. Half an hour later all doubts were dispelled. The stranger was not only a man-of-war, but he had changed his course to meet that of the brig.

"I told you so!" exclaimed Captain Abner to Mary as he pointed to the distant sail.

"Yes, Abner; you did," she replied.

"And now he'll board and press two or three of the men, even though we haven't got a half a one to spare."

"Waal, it's no use to give up till we have to. I should keep right on and pay no 'tention to him."

There had been a stiff breeze all the forenoon, and the few clouds driving overhead had a squally look to them. Captain Bideford's first idea had been to run away; but, realizing this would provoke curiosity and pursuit, he decided to stand on. As the craft neared each other the man-of-war kept all fast and seemed about to pass on without notice. Of a sudden, however, he fired a solid shot across the brig's bows and hove into the wind.

"That means heave to and be boarded!" shouted Captain Abner as he prepared to give the necessary orders.

"But don't you do anything of the kind!" protested Mary. "He's no more right to stop you than you have to stop him."

"By Josh, then, but he'll blow us out of water!"

"Let him blow! Abner, you're no man if you give up licked to a Britisher who has n'n beaten in war!"

The Dolphin held her course. The British captain brought his big craft around in pursuit and opened fire with his bow chasers. When his shot began falling about the brig, Captain Abner and the crew were for bringing her to, but Mary shut her teeth together and grimly said:

"Abner, if you let that Britisher board you before he shoots away a mast I'll not go back home to hear you called a coward."

So the Dolphin held on, though before she got out of range the shot splashed water on her deck. She would have eventually made a clear escape but for loss of the breeze. When it died completely out, the two craft were three miles apart. The man-of-war promptly lowered a boat with an officer and six armed men to pay a visit.

"Waal, you see that boat comin', I s'pose," said Captain Abner as Mary stood beside him. "If you hadn't interfered, I might have got off without anybody bein' taken."

"If I hadn't interfered, you'd have gone back to Nantucket to be sneered at by everybody in town. Just you watch and wait. It looks bad, but sunthin' may turn up."

The boat came on with long, regular strokes and in half an hour was alongside the brig. The lieutenant in charge came over the rail, followed by three marines with loaded muskets. He had hardly touched the deck when he sang out:

"You impudent blackguard of a Yankee, but why didn't you heave to when we fired a gun?"

"Because we didn't feel like it!" answered Captain Bideford, who had all his coolness now that the crisis was at hand.

"What! What! More impudence! My turkeycock, but you need a lesson in manners. As a beginning I order you to douse that rag!"

"I shall do nothin' of the kind. If you want to make a prize of this brig, go ahead and haul down her flag. If not, then take yourself off."

"Oh, you won't muster your crew, eh?" sneered the lieutenant. "It is as we suspected—too many British deserters aboard! Well, I'll soon weed them out without your help. Here, you Yankees, muster at the mast!"

Had the crew been backed by the captain they would have refused to line up on the deck; but, receiving no encouragement from him to resist, they shambled aft to the mainmast and got in line. They were six able seamen, the mate and cook not being included in the muster. The lieutenant impressed five out of the six.

It was an outrage to make his blood boil, and yet Captain Bideford realized that it was helpless. There was force enough behind the officer to back him up in whatever he wished to do. The men looked appealingly at the captain, but he turned away in sorrow and despair.

For the last ten minutes Mary Bideford had been watching the sky and the British man-of-war and had been seemingly oblivious of what was going on beside her. She now turned to the captain and quietly said:

"Just sort of carelessly squint into the southeast and tell me what you see."

"By gosh, but it's an oxeye squall, or I'm no sailor!" whispered Abner after a look.

"That's what it is, and they see it aboard the frigate and have run up a flag of warnin'. The men in the boat can't see it, as they are on the wrong side, and the officer is too busy with his own

PUBLIC OPINION

CITY OF BAPAUME.

(Boston Transcript.)

Small though it be, Bapaume has always been a strong place. It is associated with the earlier feats of the great military engineer Vauban, and his success in fortifying it in 1641 established his fame so that he passed from triumph to triumph until he became Marshal of France. It has no doubt fortifications of a far different sort to-day but those who are superstitious will regard the omens as good, for in the Franco-Prussian war one of the all too few victories to which the French could lay claim was gained here in 1871.

Y.M.C.A. WORK WITH THE TROOPS.

(Chicago Tribune).

The generous gifts of Mr. J. Ogden Armour and Mr. James A. Patten, who each contributed $10,000 to the fund to be raised for Y.M.C.A. work with the troops, we hope will call attention to this worthy cause and stimulate donations.

The Y.M.C.A. demonstrated its usefulness during the last mobilization, doing a fine service in providing the men with clean entertainment, places of wholesome resort, caring for mail, and doing other services ameliorating the lot of the soldier in the field. The need for relaxation and amusement is acute in any army and it is important to have it provided under the right conditions. The Y.M.C.A. policy displays the wisdom of the serpent as it has the innocence of the dove. It does not frighten young men away by thrusting religious instruction upon them, though it provides it for those who will accept it. The result of this tact is that it is able to do a real service in its own way.

If we bring a million or two million men into the field, the Y.M.C.A. work will be a useful factor in protecting men from demoralizing influences and in keeping up the spirit of the troops.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

BOY'S RUSSIAN DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

No one will question that this little fellow is comfortable in the Russian dress he wears, and at his age comfort is everything. However, the Russian effect is admittedly one of the season's most popular styles. Although called a dress the model illustrated is all a boy's own.

The high neck, right side closing from shoulder to hem and neat fit across the chest and back with plenty of fulness below are points worth noting. The sleeves are fitted at the lower part with three under box plaits, and this treatment makes unnecessary the use of cuffs. The embroidered ornament is a pretty decoration; it may be worked by hand or bought and sewed on.

The model is suitable for morning or afternoon wear, according to the material employed. Cotton covert cloth, gingham or St. Nicholas cloth will be fine for a play garment. Linen may be considered for better wear and wool mixtures if you would rather have them. Several of these little dresses can be cut out and finished in a very short time. To French fell the seams, sew in sleeves, make buttonholes and sew on buttons is no more work than it sounds. Think of the satisfaction and saving that using the pattern means!

The dress pattern No. 8,058 cuts in sizes 1 to 2 years. To make in size 2 requires 1⅝ yards of 36 inch material.

To obtain the pattern send ... to the office of this publication.

THE CRISIS

"... in the nation's honour, heed! Acquit yourselves like men. As workers on the land, do your duty with all your strength!"
—LLOYD GEORGE.

France, England and Italy in peace times depended, not upon America but on Russia, Roumania and Bulgaria for most of their bread stuffs. With these sources closed the crisis of the hour demands that we see that our soldiers and the Motherland are fed.

Everyone in Great Britain has been put on limited rations, meat is prohibited one day a week and the making of cakes and pastry has been stopped. Further restrictions are anticipated.

Bread has gone to 24c per four-pound loaf in England, for the first time since the Crimean War.

Lord Devonport, British Food Comptroller, purposes taking authority to search the houses of Great Britain to prevent food hoarding.

Forty million men are either killed, wounded or on active service.

Twenty million men and women are supporting them by service in other war activities.

One million tons of food-carrying ships have been torpedoed since February 1st, 1917.

Germany's hope for victory is in the starvation of Britain through the submarine.

Canada's sons will have died in vain if hunger compels the Motherland's surrender.

The land is waiting—the plough is ready—will we make the plough mightier than the sword?

Will we help the acres to save the flag?

World-Hunger Stares Us in the Face

David Lubin, representative of the United States to the International Institute of Agriculture—maintained by forty Governments—reports officially to Washington that the food grains of the world on March 31st, 1917, showed a shortage of 130,000,000 bushels below the amount necessary to feed the world until August, 1917. He declares it is beyond question that unless a greater acreage is put to crop in 19.. there will be WORLD-HUNGER before the 1918 crop is harvested.

The failure of the grain crop in the Argentine Republic, which is ordinarily a great grain-exporting nation, resulted in an embargo being placed, in March, 1917, upon the export of grains from that country to avert local famine.

The United States Department of Agriculture, in its official report, announces the condition of the fall wheat crop (which is two-thirds of their total wheat crop) on April 1st, 1917, to be the poorest ever recorded and predicts a yield of 244,000,000 bushels below the crop of 1915. The 1916 crop was poor. Even with favourable weather, the wheat crop of the United States is likely to be the smallest in thirty-five years, not more than 64% of the normal crop.

Under date of April the 10th, Ogden Armour, executive head of Armour & Company, one of the world's largest dealers in food products, stated that unless the United States wishes to walk deliberately into a catastrophe, the best brains of the country, under Government supervision, must immediately devise means of increasing and conserving food supplies. Armour urged the cultivation of every available acre. The food shortage, he said, is world-wide. European production is cut in half, the Argentine Republic has suffered droughts. Canada and the United States must wake up!

People are starving to-day in Belgium, in Serbia, in Poland, in Armenia, in many quarters of the globe.

Famine conditions are becoming more wide-spread every day.

On these alarming food conditions becoming known, President Wilson immediately appointed a Food Comptroller for the United States. He selected Herbert C. Hoover, to whom the world is indebted as Chairman of the International Belgium Relief Commission, for his personal direction of the distribution of food among the starving Belgians.

Mr. Hoover is already urging sacrifice and food restrictions, for, as he states, "the war will probably last another year and we shall have all we can do to supply the necessary food to carry our Allies through with their full fighting stamina."

The Problem for Ontario

1. The land under cultivation in Ontario in 1916 was 365,000 acres less than in 1915.
2. Consider how much LESS Ontario produced in 1916 than she raised in 1915:

	Year	Acres	Bushels	1916 DECREASE Acres	Bushels
Fall Wheat	1916	704,867	14,942,050
Fall Wheat	1915	811,185	24,737,011	106,315	9,794,961
Barley and Oats	1916	539,866	12,888,989
Barley and Oats	1915	553,318	19,893,129	24,432	7,004,140
Peas and Beans	1916	95,642	1,248,979
Peas and Beans	1915	126,943	2,048,049	31,401	799,070
Corn	1916	258,832	12,717,072
Corn	1915	309,776	21,760,496	51,443	9,043,424
Potatoes and Carrots	1916	189,928	7,408,497
Potatoes and Carrots	1915	173,984	13,267,023	34,411	5,858,594
Mangel-Wurzels and Turnips.	1916	42,796	9,756,015
Mangel-Wurzels and Turnips.	1915	30,799	25,356,309	3,996	15,600,308

Other crops show as critical a decline.

3. Reports from Ontario on the condition of fall wheat for 1917 are decidedly discouraging.
4. As there is an average of not more than one man on each hundred acres of farm land in Ontario, the prospects indicate even a still smaller acreage under cultivation in 1917 unless extra labour is supplied.

Is It Any Wonder that Food Production is the Greatest Problem the World Faces To-day?

Owing to destruction by submarines, ocean ships are scarce.

It is much easier to protect shipping between Canada and England than on the longer voyages from India or Australia.

One vessel can make twice as many trips from Canada to Britain as from India, and four times as many as from Australia.

Therefore, every ton of food stuffs grown in Canada is worth to the Motherland two tons grown in India or four tons grown in Australia.

Is It Any Wonder That the Call to Canada is So Urgent?

If this country does not raise a big crop this year, not only will the people of Canada suffer by the Motherland and her Allies will suffer and their military power will be weakened if not paralyzed. Therefore, the right solution of the present war problem comes back to the farm, as to a foundation upon which our whole national and international structure must be built and maintained.

The farmers know that they are the last reserve, and that the soil in which crops are grown is the strategic ground on which wars are decided. To their care is entrusted the base of supplies.

To enable the farm to do the work two factors are essential. The first is Time. Whatever we are to do must be done at once. Nature waits for no man. The second is Labour. Many farmers cannot plant the acres they would because they cannot get the necessary help. Many are afraid to increase their acreage because they fear they would not be able to cultivate and harvest an unusual crop after they have raised it. If they are to do the work that is essential for them to do, the last can in each city, town and village must be mobilized at once.

Every man not on Active Service can help. In every city, town and village are men who, by their training on the farm, or by their present occupation, can readily adapt themselves to farm work. These can render no greater service to the Empire at the present time than by answering the call of the farm. Capable men and boys willing to learn should not allow their lack of farm experience to stand in the way.

Can the employer render a more signal service in this crisis than by encouraging these men to help the farmer to cultivate every available acre, and by making it easy for them to go?

Ontario's farm lands are waiting—the implements are ready—the equipment is complete—the farmer is willing—all he needs is labour.

So short is the world's food supply that without increased production many in Canada must go hungry, and even with enormously increased production we cannot expect cheap food. The world is waiting for our harvest.

If peace should be declared within a year, the food conditions will be no better, for the accumulated hunger of the Central Empires must be met. This will absorb a large part of the world's supply.

We do not know when this war shall cease. It is endless, its lengthening out has paralyzed the thought and conception of all men who thought about it and its possible time of conclusion. Three months—six months, we said; nine months, a year, we said; and yet two years and eight months have passed their long, dreary and sanguinary length and there is no man who can tell how long this gigantic struggle may yet last.

Lloyd George, in a letter addressed to farmers throughout the Empire, said:

"The line which the British Empire holds against the Germans is held by those who work the land as well as those who fight on land and sea. It if breaks at any point it breaks everywhere. In the face of the enemy the seamen of our Royal naval and mercantile marine and the soldiers gathered from every part of our Empire hold our line firstly. You workers on land must hold your part of our line as strongly. Every full day's labour you do helps to shorten the struggle and bring us nearer victory. Every idle day, all loitering, lengthens the struggle and makes defeat more possible. Therefore, in the nation's honour, heed! Acquit yourselves like men, and as workers on land do your duty with all your strength!"

So, for the honour of Canada's soldiers in France—and for the glory of our New-born Nationhood—let it be said of Ontario's citizens that, in the hour of our greatest need, their response was worthy of their sons.

We owe a great debt to those who are fighting for us.

TURNING MANY SHIPS INTO ATLANTIC TRADE

All Available American Vessels to Carry Supplies to France, Russia and Italy.

WASHINGTON. — All available American transatlantic tonnage for the time being will be used to transplies to Russia, France and Italy, under an agreement about to be made by the American Government with the Allies. Great Britain has assured the United States that she can carry enough supplies in her own ships to meet the needs of the United Kingdom and perhaps spare some vessels to supplement American tonnage in supplying the other countries.

No general agreement as to apportionment of shipping among the countries most in need has been worked out, but a definite programme probably will be decided on in the near future. In the meantime the Shipping Board is putting the repaired German ships into service as fast as possible, chartering them to the allied governments for single trips.

The government is besieged with requests for tonnage to take coal to France and Italy and general supplies to Russia.

RAILROAD MEN MUST KEEP FIT

There is a splendid fraternal spirit among the men who earn their living on the railroad. Good news is passed along from man to man, and it was in this way Mr. Frank Ide, a well-known Buffalo Pullman car conductor, learned how he could free himself of terrible pains in the groin and back and painful urination from gravel, the result of his kidneys being out of order.

He treated for two months, when one of his railway friends whose life had been despaired of, but who had made a very quick recovery through using Gin Pills, strongly recommended Mr. Ide to try them, and as he says, "The pain left me entirely. I feel as well as I ever did in my life. I recommend Gin Pills to everybody in any way troubled with kidneys or bladder".

Not only do Gin Pills assist nature to cleanse the system through the kidneys, but they stimulate the bowels, quickly relieving constipation.

All good dealers sell Gin Pills at 50c. a box or 6 boxes for $2.50. Free sample upon request to the National Drug and Chemical Company of Canada, Limited, Toronto. 95

The rector of a church in Maryland was in his study, hard at work on his sermon for the coming Sunday, when a visitor was announced. She was a muscular woman, and when the minister had brought forward a chair she flopped into it and opened up bluntly, as follows:

"You're Mister Jones, ain't you?"

"I am."

"Maybe you'll remember marryin' a couple of strangers at your church a month ago."

"What were the names?"

"William Perkins and Elizabeth Jones," said the woman, "and I'm Elizabeth.

"Are you indeed? I thought I remembered your face when you came in, but—"

"Yes," continued the visitor, "I'm her, all right, an' I thought as how I ought to drop in an' let you know that William has escaped!"—New York Times.

FRENCH HOLD ALL GAINS MADE IN NEW ADVANCE

Have Gained Full Possession at All Important Moronvilliers Crests in a Double Advance That Was Completely Successful. No Major Actions on British Front but Scattered Raids Were Carried Out and British Guns Do Work. German Ammunition Dump Is Exploded.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

Special to The Examiner:

GERMAN ATTACKS ON THREE SECTORS ARE REPULSED.

PARIS (French Official Statement), May 22.—In the Champagne the enemy, after bombarding the positions which we captured yesterday north of Monte Cornillet and at Sasque and Teton, made infantry attacks against these three sectors. He was repulsed everywhere and suffered considerable losses without obtaining any results. The number of unwounded prisoners taken by us in the operations of yesterday reached 1,000, of whom twenty-eight are officers.

There was intermittent artillery fighting on the remainder of the front. On the Vauclere Plateau the artillery fighting was violent.

"Enemy surprise attacks at various points were repulsed. In the course of raids in the German lines we took fifteen prisoners."

Special to The Examiner:

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, May 22. — Since Sunday Germany has lost more than 15,000 men in killed, wounded and missing, in the fighting by which the French had to-day gained full possession of all the important points on the all dominating crests of the Moronvilliers' crest.

The figures are those of headquarters. They give an adequate idea of the full extent of the victory achieved in the latest French double advance. General Nivelle's men are now in command of all important points between Mounts Cornillet and Teton. They are within half a mile of Moronvilliers itself. From where the French lines were pushing forward to-day there is a clear way down the Valley of the Suippe.

The new positions were attained after fierce fighting in an advance simultaneously executed on both the eastern and western extremities of the Moronvilliers' crest.

LOCAL BOARDS TO SELECT THE DRAFTS

Conscription Measure To Be Introduced Into the House at an Early Date. All Male Citizens From 18 to 40 or From 20 to 45 May Have To Be Enrolled

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, May 22.—The Government's conscription plans are rounding into shape, and the measure will be ready for introduction into the House at a very early date. It is realized that the bill as introduced into the House may undergo many changes before it comes out a finished product. The enrollment of all citizens between the age of 18 and 40, or 20 and 45 will be required, and selection will fall to local boards which will be appointed. The powers of these boards to decide who shall go and who shall stay, will of necessity be very elastic. Representatives of the Trades and Labour Congress had another long conference with Premier Borden to-day, but are still antagonistic to compulsory enlistment. It would appear that the Premier's announcement has had the effect of impressing upon the youth of the country the fact that their services are needed, as a tremendous revival in recruiting is reported from all parts of the Dominion.

Special to The Examiner:

NEW YORK, May 22.—An unsuccessful attempt on the life of Minister of War Kerensky in Petrograd was reported to-day in a despatch to the Jewish daily Forward. All participants were arrested. Rumours are that the plot was arranged by supporters of the old regime.

Special to The Examiner:

MADRID, May 22.—Ten persons were killed and fifty injured in serious food riots at Lisbon Sunday, according to word received here to-day. Troops had difficulty in quelling the disturbance. A number of bakeries in the city were sacked by the townspeople. A further despatch from Badjos to-day declared that the rioting is spreading all over Portugal, several provinces reporting disturbances. The strict censorship is preventing details.

Special to The Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, May 22.—The Holland-American Line steamer Ryndam, the first neutral vessel to take advantage of England's recent announcement that the route to Holland was comparatively safe from submarine attacks, arrived at Rotterdam to-day.

Special to The Examiner:

LONDON, May 22.—British forces spent to-day consolidating their newly won positions on the Hindenburg line and in scattered raids aimed to discover the strength and nature of the opposing German forces. Field Marshal Haig's report revealed no major fighting actions, but showed an effective shelling by British guns. "On the Arras-Cambrai Road northeast of Queant yesterday afternoon a large German ammunitions dump was destroyed," he said. "The shock of the explosion was felt a great distance behind our lines. Northeast of Epehy and north of Armentieres we carried out successful raids during the night. East of Bullecourt, south of the Arras-Cambrai Road and west of Lens, the enemy artillery was active all night."

Special to The Examiner:

WASHINGTON, May 22.—Shells which were made during the Spanish-American war in 1898, have been put on armed American merchantmen to be used in resisting submarine attacks. This came to light to-day when Admiral Early, Chief of the Ordnance Department, submitted to Secretary Daniels a report on an accident which caused the death of two American nurses on the armed merchantman Mongolia.

PETROGRAD, May 22.—Minister of War and Marine Kerensky, Russia's "Garibaldi," left the capital to-day for a brief visit to Finland. From there he will go to the front. His visit with the troops is to explain the exact governmental situation, and to urge them to unyielding efforts against Germany.

HEAVY FINE OF $500 AND COSTS IMPOSED FOR SALE OF LIQUOR

Alfred Switzer, Bartender of the Montgomery House, Was Found Guilty by Magistrate Dumble This Morning

POLICE RAIDED HOUSE

Alfred Switzer, late bartender at the Montgomery House, was fined $500 and $2.60 costs, or six months in jail, by Magistrate Dumble, this morning, on a charge of keeping liquor for sale. He failed to respond when his name was called in court, this morning, and it was assumed that he had betaken himself to parts remote from Peterborough. Detective Newhall testified that he delivered a summons to the defendant's home on May 18th, and on the following day his wife stated that he had gone away.

Sergt. Kidd stated that he had met Switzer and told him that he had a warrant to search his house for whiskey. The latter told the officer to go as far as he liked. Sergt. Kidd, accompanied by P. C. Dainnard, searched the Switzer home, and found nine bottles of Gooderham and Worts whiskey. The bottles were produced in court, wrapped in paper as they were taken from their container.

Garnet Innis testified that at various times he had bought whiskey from Switzer, paying two dollars a bottle. Altogether he had purchased half a dozen bottles from Switzer.

Detective Newhall offered evidence regarding the number of cases of whiskey Switzer had received, but Magistrate Dumble decided that the Dominion Express Company's records could not be accepted unless produced and supported by the agent. Between March 5 and May 15, Switzer had received in his own name seven cases of "G. and W." or eighty-four bottles.

On the evidence, the Magistrate found Switzer guilty, and on Chief Thompson's suggestion, raised the usual fine from $200 to $500, as a probable deterrent to others who may be tempted to follow the illicit traffic. The maximum fine that may be imposed for keeping liquor for sale, is $1,000. When Mr. Switzer returns to the city he will have the choice of paying the $502.60 or spend six months on the hill.

DON'T MISS THIS!

Harry Zacks' big three days' sale of Furniture offers an opportunity for adding some badly wanted pieces or new furnishings to the home, that should be appreciated.

He has made extreme price reductions, in many cases offering the goods at a third less than regular price, and with the big choice of articles his stock represents, it should interest every one with a home need of the kind. Sale ends to-morrow (Tuesday) night.

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld., May 21.—A selective conscription law in Newfoundland, along the lines of that now in force in the United States, and proposed in Canada, will probably be introduced at the annual session of the Legislature which opens May 29. Such action was forecast to-day in a statement by Premier Sir Edward Morris, who returned yesterday from England, where he had been for three months attending sessions of the Imperial War Conference. In speaking with newspaper men to-day Sir Edward announced that he would immediately take up with the leader of the Opposition the question of concerted action to secure enough men to maintain the Newfoundland regiment on the firing line until the end of the war.

The Newfoundland regiment has been in the thickest of the fighting on the continent. At Gallipoli it received special mention for gallantry and more recently in the Arras fighting an official announcement from British headquarters paid tribute to the Islanders for winning and maintaining against violent counter-attacks particularly important post.

WINDSOR, May 21.—Recruiting in Windsor to-day took a decided jump, fifty men being attested for the C.E.F., while many other, urged on by the shadow of conscription, sought information regarding different units before leaving their present positions.

The majority of the recruits were British-born, but citizens of the United States, principally from Detroit, who desire to get in the trenches with as little delay as possible, caused an influx of eligibles also from the American side of the river.

A notable enlistment was that of Gordon MacDonald, formerly of Glasgow, Scotland, who claimed to be a cousin of Major-General Sir Hector Alexander MacDonald, the famous British General. MacDonald chose the artillery branch.

Lieut.-Col. Walker, of the 57th Regiment C.D.F., is in Lindsay this afternoon in connection with a C.E.F. re-inforcing company which had just been authorised with headquarters at Lindsay; but under Col. Walker's command for purposes of pay, rations and discipline. The company is to supply re-inforcements for the 2nd Eastern Ontario Battalion and the appointment of a captain and two lieutenants is authorised.

While the announcement of conscription has not resulted in a rush to enlist, such as is reported from Toronto and other centres, there was a noticeable revival in recruiting yesterday in connection with the artillery. The 74th Battery were successful in attesting three recruits yesterday afternoon and the Cobourg Heavy Battery secured several men while a number of other applicants were rejected.

So far Lieut.-Col. Walker of the 57th C.D.F. has noticed no increased interest in recruiting in as far as his command is concerned.

"Young men should remember that we are recruiting for the C.E.F. as well as for home defence," remarked Colonel Walker this morning. "We have authority to organise a C.E.F. company and are ready to take on recruits for overseas. They will be uniformed at once and pay and allowances start immediately."

CAPT. J. H. BURNHAM SCORES THE PENSIONS

PTE. CECIL S. WATSON, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Watson, Norwood. He went overseas with the 93rd Battalion and was transferred to the 18th at the front. He has been nearly nine months in the trenches.

Member for West Peterborough Severely Condemns the General Treatment of Returned Soldiers and Criticizes the Provision Made for Them

PENSIONS TOO LOW

OTTAWA, May 21.—Parliament sat up suddenly this evening when Captain J. H. Burnham, Conservative member for West Peterborough, who recently returned from overseas, launched a smashing attack on the Government's Pension Board to deal with returned and disabled soldiers, and upon the general treatment of those who had fought Canada's battles and their wives and dependents.

RESENTS BLAIN'S "IMPERTINENCE."

Captain Burnham was very much in earnest. When Mr. Richard Blain of Peel rose subsequently to smooth over the situation, assured the country that everything was lovely, and hinted that the Peterborough man had spoken without due and sufficient investigation, Captain Burnham was on his feet in a moment.

"What I said is true," he declared, "and I have nothing to take back. What is more, I resent the impertinence of the member for Peel."

MOVES FOR ADEQUATE PROVISION.

Captain Burnham submitted a resolution calling for legislation to adequately provide "for those who have fought for their country so that they may not be compelled to resort to canvassing or other unsuitable measures to eke out a livelihood, which should be provided by the country for those practically disabled and unable to find suitable employment," and further, that pensions and other provisions, on behalf of soldiers and their families "should automatically rise or fluctuate as prices do."

HOPES FOR LARGE INCREASE

Captain Burnham vigorously attacked the memorandum regarding the Government's decision with respect to pensions. He understood a pension bill would be brought down which would be a considerable improvement on the original proposals. He hoped for a very large increase, for the prices of necessaries of life had increased one hundred per cent. Regarding wounded soldiers, he hoped there would be provision that if wounds broke out afresh or illness developed as a result of their service they would be properly taken care of.

PENSIONS ALTOGETHER INADEQUATE.

Captain Burnham detailed some of the pension schedule. For total deafness a soldier received only $280, while for partial deafness of both ears he received a gratuity of merely $100. The pension given for disability amounting to 80 per cent. and less than 100 per cent. was only $384; for 60 per cent. and less than 80 per cent. it was only $260. Pensions of such size would never, he said, put soldiers in the position they occupied before the war.

Capt. Burnham asserted likewise that widows and orphans were not adequately provided for. He recommended the appointment of a number of returned soldiers to investigate cases of want in the families of soldiers. He approved the recommendations of the War Veterans' Association in Winnipeg, of a pension on the basis of $100 per month for total disability. Capt. Burnham caustically criticised the Dominion Pensions Board, declaring that it was so tied up with red tape that it was difficult to secure any information from it. In

One of the Worst Fires in the History of the South Finally Under Control After Leaving 10,000 People Homeless

SIXTY WERE INJURED

Special to The Examiner:

ATLANTA, Ga., May 22.— Having burned through the heart of Atlanta's residence district, making 10,000 persons homeless, and destroying at least three million dollars' worth of property, one of the worst fires the south has ever known, was finally gotten under control here early to-day.

There was only one death, from shock. Sixty persons were injured. The cause of the fire, which started in a storage house, is unknown. The fire authorities believe it was incendiary.

JULES BRAZIE TALKS OF THE PETERBORO MUSIC

Praises the Grand Opera House Orchestra for Its Work

In conversation with Mr. Jules Brazil, who arranged the music for "The Crisis," the Examiner learned some interesting facts regarding the music to a big film production like the Crisis. Mr. Brazil, by the way, is the well known composer and arranger of the songs which have been hummed and whistled during this great war, and is at present in Peterborough completing the musical score for 'The Crisis.' He stated that film producers demand every action of a picture to be musically interpreted, consequently the setting of a score to a picture like 'The Crisis' gives scope to adapt works from the big master musicians and then at times old airs that cannot be found in manuscript to-day. Suiting picture music calls for a knowledge of every form of music, gay and sombre. A mind for quick adaptation and always selected so as not to detract the mind of the audience from that which they perceive, but on the other hand supplement musically the thought of the screen. He expressed his delight at the splendid performance the Grand Opera House orchestra gave last night. They, and with little reproach, played the score of 51 numbers almost without a hitch. Some of the numbers written for strings, being rendered exquisitely.

WHO MAY VOTE.

A long and interesting discussion took place in the House recently upon a resolution declaring for the principle of giving the vote to every enrolled British subject who enlisted with the Canadian forces for overseas service, and who was a resident of Canada at the time of enlistment. The point of difference arose over the fact that many of the Canadians who enlisted were under twenty-one years of age, the statutory standard of manhood, for the purpose of voting. The contention that a soldier under 21 had no right to the use of the ballot, was met with the statement that the young man who was old enough to fight was old enough to vote. It is true that there is the risk that he may vote for the wrong man, but the fact that he is fighting for the right cause is a sufficient set-off.

It was doubted by some members who spoke on the subject that a lad of eighteen, though a plucky fighter in the war, had not the judgment and knowledge of political subjects to enable him to exercise the franchise intelligently. But it should not count as an argument against his being given the vote. In practical politics the average voter's intelligence and knowledge of political subjects does not count. Is it not a fact, that nine-tenths of the electors of Canada, of both parties, poll their votes without thinking of anything but the party complexion of the candidate. Is it not a fact that nine-tenths of the votes given by members of parliament and legislators are given, if not without intelligent understanding of the matter at issue, with cavalier indifference to the merits of the subject under discussion, and in the interests of or concerned interests of the respective parties, the public interest being a subordinate or disregarded consideration.

A soldier of 18 may not be well acquainted with public matters as he might be, but it is absolutely certain that he has as much knowledge and intelligence as his fellow soldiers of statutory age, or as the average voter at home. He may easily, however, think more deeply than we think he does. This war has had a tremendous developing influence upon our young men who are fighting. Young chips of officers who at home were doubtfully qualified to captain a hockey club, have, under the responsibilities of command, and the demands of the situation, taken on highly developed qualities of character and resource and action to a degree that has advanced them to manhood's estate with a jump; and the same applies to the Canadian Tommy generally. The war has made boys men.

It is also held that giving the young soldier of 18 a vote would be unjust to the young man voter of twenty-one or over, by putting him on an equality of franchise. The young soldier under 21 can't be placed upon any moral equality with the young man of 21 who stays at home. By virtue of his services he is superior to the stay-at-home, who, if fit for service, deserves to have the franchise taken from him. A young man being bodily fit, who will not fight for his country, does not deserve a voice in governing it.

THE SUBMARINE AND BRITISH TRADE.

The submarine menace is worse than a menace; it is a damaging and dangerous fact. It is exceedingly bad, apart from its unbelievable atrocity. It has threatened, and still threatens, and what is worse, has in many ways jeopardised Britain's food supply, and put us on our mettle to produce to the utmost point of strenuosity. But bad as the situation has become, there has come justification of our faith in the British navy; our faith that Britannia would show that she rules the waves. To-day's despatches contain a statement of Kennedy Jones, the British Food Controller, that "the German submarines are being mastered." "We have been able," he said, "thanks to the ingenuity of the Admiralty and the courage and skill of our sailors, to make attacks by a new method on the German U-boats, which so far have been attended with success." This, combined with the fact that destroyers of our United States and Japanese Allies, are operating and cooperating in the western waters of Europe, give further assurance or hope that we shall overcome the undersea methods of Germany. Still there is need for more production on this side of the water. Though there is grain supply in Britain to last twelve weeks there is still necessity for economy and continued supply; for with the present stocks and the proceeds of the next harvest there will only be food supply for half a year's consumption. Therefore we must produce food and build ships to carry it, and thus help to save the situation, which though serious is not hopeless, nor as bad as could be expected from the destruction of nearly three million tons of British shipping since the war began.

In spite of submarines, ships go from and return to British ports from and to, all ports of the world. To show what a wonderful "nation of shopkeepers" Britain is, even under the wastage of submarines, British trade—in and out—seems to be increasing. The new submarine campaign began in February of this year. In that month, in spite of intensified submarine activity, British imports reached a value of 355 million dollars. In March they increased to 405 millions, and in April to 450 millions. In February the exports were 185 millions, rising to 215 millions in March, and falling off, as compared to the previous month, to 215 millions in April.

Though the submarines have had a very disturbing and serious effect, it seems certain that they will have to do a good deal more, instead of a good deal less, as they are doing, before they can do what the best judges in Britain say cannot be done—starve Britain. The decreasing power of the submarine is a hopeful sign; for the submarine represents Germany's last desperate effort, and its prospective failure, taken with the hammering down of the Hun on all belligerent fronts, gives not only hope but assurance that the victory is coming to the cause of the Allies.

The difficulty of garbage collection can be largely solved by the housewife herself—save and economise to the last bit, so that there will be no garbage.

FOOD CONTROL CONSCRIPTION.

Recruiting is not the only thing that needs the iron hand of government regulation. The food situation is serious. Governments are given power to do things for only one purpose—in the interests of the people, that make and unmake governments. In some things, as in dealing with the food "hold up," the people have no power or authority to take action — they can only suffer. There has long been demand for an official and efficient food controller, such as there is in all the countries that are at war.

There is no doubt that there has been conscienceless exploitation of food essentials. It would be interesting to know by what process the grain speculators got wheat up to $32.50 or $3.00 per bushel. The farmer is not to blame, because he got less than a third of the price artificially "boosted." This condition and the general condition of high prices and artificial scarcity of food products, has an origin, as it should have an ending. The United States is considering legislation giving the government wider powers in the matter of food control.

A food controller, backed by government authority conferred by suitable legislation, could get at the root of the matter and give relief. Something large, something direct, something drastic, should be done. Parliament will no doubt give power to the government to take possession of the manhood of the country. Will Parliament give the government power to take possession of the food situation? Doubtless, if the government asks the power. So far there has only been government trifling with the matter. In the matter of potatoes, the Minister of Agriculture thought he had done enough by sending out telegrams and getting in reply vague guesses as to the quantity in the country. Then when he found, as he thought, that there was a surplus of potatoes in the country, that should have been put on the market to ease the prices and bring them to the consumer, he allowed potatoes to be shipped out of the country. Wouldn't a properly authorised food controller be able to do something, the something that is urgently demanded? How are the workers to be adequately fed and kept fit to answer the government's call for increased production in everything, if they can't get food at living prices.

We were told by some members of Parliament only the other day—that the masses were never so well off, and are banking their surplus earnings. Alphonse Verville, the Labour member in Parliament, promptly pricked the bubble. He showed that only a few highly skilled men were earning big munition wages—$8, $10 and $15 per day. He says the average daily wage is only about two dollars and a quarter. He says that "the astounding prosperity observed by millionaire philanthropists is confined to the millionaires." He declared that "hundreds of thousands of families are living on seven hundred dollars a year or less—below the poverty line; and no wonder when we consider the high cost of every item of living. And all this with the buying power of a dollar reducing $700 to $375.

It is no wonder that the people are chafing under the rule of a government that in this matter does absolutely nothing to help; doesn't move a finger to enforce the Combine Act and jail the offenders who are raising prices "in restraint of trade." This indignation has no party flavour. The man on the street, the hottest under the collar, is the man that helped put the government in power—good Conservatives, or, rather, bad Conservatives, for they begin to "kick." Even the Mail and Empire denounces the "grasping man who will exploit even patriotism for his own profit, and it calls for increased taxation of such patriots." The organ's economical panacea for all evils in the body politic is taxation; when something should be done. The government is to blame—not for the high prices themselves, but for failure to grasp the situation and discipline the authors of high prices, and remove natural food resources from the grip of manipulators and exploiters of the bread and butter of the masses.

Will the "selective draft" be a drawing card?

Reminiscences of a "Rebel"

Mackenzie, Journalist and Patriot

George Montagu of Buffalo, recently gave us eight unpaid subscription bills for "The Messenger," dated 1859, in the handwriting of the publisher, the late William Lyon Mackenzie. These with others had been sent to Mr. Montagu to collect, and the delinquents' names, if published, would astonish acquaintances. The amounts range from $1.75 to $5.70, and indicate that even at that early date subscribers carried around in their pockets a part of the working capital of the printer.

A great deal has been heard about Mr. Mackenzie—his fight against the Family Compact, the reforms he had introduced, his connection with the rebellion of 1837—and being an expert printer, as well as an athlete of some note, the report of his coming roused curiosity to see him. The wish was gratified, when one day in 1853 he walked up the stairway of the Independent, handed the "devil" a quarter, and shook hands with the proprietors, Weatherby & Brownson. Having come to canvass the county, (Haldimand, which he represented many years) he was advised to rent a hall himself so that he could control his meeting. Brown & Mylne's hall was chosen. It was densely packed, the audience standing, and when they voted for a chairman, instead of a show of hands the crowd divided, the strong pulling the weak to their side. Amidst much noise and confusion a chairman was appointed. When the noise became intolerable, Mr. Mackenzie was compelled to inform the crowd that he had rented the hall and those who attempted to stop him would be put out. There were many interruptions, but the speaker, good at repartee, had a ready answer. Somebody yelled out, "Hurrah for a rope to hang Mackenzie with," and the instant rejoiner was, "The rope used to hang your grandfather will do!" which created a hearty laugh, and silenced the one interrupting.

After a powerful and convicting address Mr. Mackenzie started for his hotel, the North American, kept by Thomas Jefferson Wiggins, situated on the bank of the river just west of Cedar street. He was followed by a shouting crowd, which became more demonstrative, turning into Front Street, when chunks of clay, brickbats, etc., began to fly. Mr. Mackenzie did not run but kept up a good pace, although jostled and pushed off the sidewalk, and his tall hat knocked off as often as he would put it on., He kept his feet. When the crowd reached the hotel there stood mine host Thomas Jefferson Wiggins, with a gun, declaring that the first one crossing the threshold after the pursued would be a corpse. As Mr. Wiggins was known to be a good shot, and a man who generally kept his word, that settled it. Mr. Mackenzie won that election and others following.

Politics are not as bitter now as then; we all appreciate the beneficial measures fought for by the patriot, and "rebel," which was a common byword, and applied to Reformers, is now seldom heard. However, it is said there are more politics to the square acre in Dunnville than any place of its kind in Canada—and we believe it.—Dunnville Reform Press.

closing, he maintained that the Government should be in a position to say to the soldiers being sent to the front that their families would be provided for.

CASES INADEQUATELY COMPENSATED.

Hon. Frank Oliver vigorously supported Capt. Burnham. In his contention that the Pensions Board was not doing justice to soldiers or their dependents, he desired to enter protest against its methods of procedure. Mr. Oliver read a list of cases from The Toronto Telegram showing a number of soldiers who had received totally inadequate compensations for serious injuries received.

SCORES "CONFIDENTIAL" ATTITUDE.

In this connection he quoted a statement given out by the Pensions Board to the effect that all information in regard to pensions was confidential, and that too much had appeared in the newspapers concerning this matter. Such attempted censorship Mr. Oliver ruthlessly attacked. The Board was a mere creature of the Government, and had no right to keep such information from the people. The attempt to do so was an insult to Parliament and the public. It was just as bad, said Mr. Oliver, as that form of censorship used for the purpose of deceiving the people and protecting incompetency in connection with the conduct of the war.

OVER-GOVERNMENT BY COMMISSION.

For the past five years there had been altogether too much government by Commission in Canada. The Pensions Board was probably the poorest sample, and the time had arrived when the Government should be reorganised and brought more into touch with public opinion.

GLARING INJUSTICE SPECIFIED

Mr. Oliver said he proposed to give specific instances of unfair treatment. He was going to "dare" to use names, and was also going to dare the Pensions Board or the Government to interfere with anyone because he was doing so. He then proceeded to give details in the cases of John Shorley and Pte. Malley of Edmonton, who were advanced to non-commissioned officers in England. They were sent to the front in drafts, and were there severely wounded. They were reduced to their former rank of private to receive pensions as privates.

Non-commissioned officers remaining in England and out of danger retained their rank, and would receive full pension therefor, while those who went to France and were wounded lost their rank and were reduced in the pension scale.

UP TO THE GOVERNMENT

In closing, Mr. Oliver declared that it was up to the Government to see that the Pensions Board carried out the intention of Parliament, or reorganise that institution.

BLAIN ATTEMPTS DEFENCE OF BOARD.

Mr. Richard Blain of Peel defended the Pensions Board. He described the pensions and allowances provided as generous and liberal. He had no hesitation in saying that the criticisms of the previous speakers were not well founded. Mr. Blain said he had called a meeting of the dependents of soldiers in his constituency, more than 300 being present, and not one had a serious complaint to make. When Mr. Blain suggested that Captain Burnham spoke ill-advisedly, that gentleman jumped to his feet and bluntly told the member for Peel that he regarded his remarks as "impertinent."

COL. TAYLOR SUPPORTS MR. OLIVER.

Colonel J. D. Taylor, Conservative member for Westminster, made the Peel member's position more uncomfortable, by rising to agree with Mr. Oliver in regard to the non-commissioned officers being compelled to revert to the rank of privates for pensions. He knew this to be a fact by the experience of his own regiment, which he took to England. Colonel Taylor said he had already complained of this treatment to the Minister of Militia, and that the latter had promised to make a reform.

MR. HAZEN SPEAKS FOR COMMITTEE.

Hon. J. D. Hazen, who had been Chairman of the Pensions Committee a year ago maintained that this committee had worked hard and unanimously. They recommended the appointment of a Commission, and the Government acted upon this recommendation. Mr. Hazen was aware the board was not infallible, but that most of the trouble was due to the difficulty of getting the machinery smoothly started. The board had suggested some changes, which would be embodied in a new pension act to be introduced this session. The bill would be sent to committee for non-partisan consideration.

BILL ON COMMITTEE'S RECOMMENDATIONS.

Premier Borden said that a year ago the matter of pensions had been taken out of politics and the Government had not interfered since. A committee of members of both political parties had the matter under consideration, and legislation would be brought down this session to give effect to the approaching report of the committee the Premier suggested that the debate be adjourned, to be resumed later if necessary.

ILL THROUGH NEGLECT

There are many people—including most women—who will take far more trouble about anyone else's health than their own. This sort of unselfishness is not really kind—it is not right. A person in bad health is always a burden in some way or another. To save others from becoming a burden, and allow one's self to become an invalid, is neither wise nor generous.

Science shows that nine-tenths of the ills that afflict mankind, and women especially, are due to poor, thin, watery blood. This is the condition which doctors call anæmia, and it can only be overcome by making the blood rich, red and pure. The remedy is in your own hands—if you continue to suffer you have only yourself to blame. New blood will put an end to many ailments, headaches and backaches that afflict so many women and the feeling of constant tiredness and indisposition to exertion so many men feel, without thinking they are really unwell. The very best remedy in the world for this condition is Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These actually make an abundance of new, rich, blood, and this new blood makes weak despondent men and women vigorous and healthy and strong. If you are unwell, if you are feeling "out of sorts," give this tonic medicine a trial, and see how quickly you will recover your old time energy and good health."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., of Brockville, Ont.

PLANS ARE ALL READY

Ottawa Military Authorities Have All Debated in Regard to Conscription Arranged and Are Waiting for the Bill.

THE EXEMPTION QUESTION

TORONTO, May 21.—Just how the men will be drawn into the ranks from civil life under Premier Borden's "selective conscription" — the manner and the speed in which they will be selected— is the question of the day which is being discussed throughout the Dominion. Military men, although they hesitate to discuss their opinions, are practically unanimous that the plans for selecting the drafts out of all the military districts, have already been cut and dried by the Ottawa military authorities, who are now merely waiting for the passage of the Conscription bill through both Houses of Parliament.

Although nothing definite has been announced as to how a call for men would be made at the beginning, it is pointed out on all sides that a general call for all Canada, which took no account, directly or indirectly, of the voluntary enlistment record of each military division would be manifestly unfair.

Government Has All Details Settled.

"What classifications do you think will be made of the civil population to get the men under conscription?" Col. Bickford was asked.

"Personally, I believe the whole scheme has been cut and dried by the Militia Department of Ottawa. It is their duty in time of war to look after such things, and I believe they have it all drawn up now. They are merely waiting for the bill to be passed. We have evidence all over Canada which goes to show that the Government was preparing for conscription by the great numbers of N. C. O.'s who have been detailed. During the past two months the men have been receiving special training."

"What classes of the male population do you believe will be exempted from military duty?" "It's all a matter of common sense. If a man in his position is seen to be of more service to his country, than if he were sent to the front he will be permitted to remain here. This applies to men in all walks of life, provided they are not over the military age—which, too, is not definitely known."

"Do you think there will be general call for men throughout the entire country or will the call be made for so many men in each military division?" "It all depends upon the condition of the census figures. It might be necessary to take another census and then have the men all registered, after which the Government would proceed to call on the men."

Leave Selection to Present Staffs.

"The fact that men have been conscripted will not deprive them of the same good training as others have had," one officer stated. "They may be taken to England as soon as the transportation facilities are available, but with each man will go a record of his training. It is likely that the men will go in drafts and before they reach France each will have the same length of training."

One officer is of the opinion that the Government will set up a civil organization to register all the men in the Dominion, and after the registration has been completed with a full statement of the facts surrounding every male in the country, the actual drawing of the men for service will be left to the present military staffs and their organizations.

"How do you think the women will be affected by conscription?"

"They will no doubt have to replace many men but there will be no compulsion in connection with them, of course."

"Suppose it is found that a physically fit man is a specialist of some kind, performing a necessary duty in the interest of the country, would he be taken?" "No. I don't think so, but it is different in every individual case. He may be taken and he may not."

It is generally conceded that eligibles now working in munition plants and other factories will be combed out and sent to the front. Only those who are not eligible for service or are specialists in some branch of the work will be retained.

WELCOMED BY WINNIPEG

Cheering Throngs Show Manitoba's Delight Over Conscriptive Scheme.

WINNIPEG, May 19.— With bands and parades this city showed its enthusiasm over the arrival of conscription, and it is thought that Winnipeg's attitude well represents that of the west. The hotels on Saturday night were thronged with cheering and singing crowds. Scores of telegrams were sent to Sir Robert Borden by all sorts of organizations, such as the city council, the board of trade, the grain exchange, the returned soldiers' association, the war veterans' association, the creditmen's association, and the Daughters of the Empire. They all assured the Premier that the west was ready to the last man and the last dollar.

There is, however, some misgiving as to how the enforcement of the draft scheme will affect the military eligibles from enemy alien races. It is believed that in Military District No. ten those naturalized will be treated exactly like the native-born. Otherwise the number of aliens left would be so large proportionately to the Canadian-born as to constitute a grave problem even in Manitoba, though not so serious as in the two more western prairie provinces.

Today there are still fewer unsold sets of the popular "Handy Volume" Issue of the new

printed on genuine India paper

Today we have even less to say than yesterday—it would be useless to say any more when there are so few sets left

Action is the all-important thing of today. A decision to buy NOW—sending your first payment of $1 today, will make the Britannica an actual fact in your home. It will bring to you, to your wife, to your boys and girls, a reliable, authentic source of Knowledge, Culture, Education and Efficiency that will astound you as you grow to appreciate its wonderful usefulness in everyday affairs.

Saturday next—only 4 days off—this sale will end, because every set of the Britannica, printed on genuine India paper, will be sold. And we simply can't get another set—there is no more India paper to be had; no more can be manufactured, because the war makes it impossible to secure any more flax from Belgium, Ireland or Germany, and hemp from Russia, for the making of this beautiful thin and tough paper.

Today you are reasonably sure of getting a set—if you order it immediately. Tomorrow your prospect of securing a set will be less. And the next day you may be TOO LATE! (This advertisement was prepared and sent out to newspapers from Maine to California ten days ago. This was necessary to have it appear in all the cities of the United States and Canada on the same day. Our estimate as to how long the sets on hand would last was made 10 days ago and, of course, it is quite possible that the last set will be sold before next Saturday.)

It is NOW—or never, if you want one of these last India paper sets of the Britannica. You must decide YES—or no for all time—for, when the last of these sets is sold, it will be the last India paper set anywhere in the world.

If you don't know NOW how useful and helpful the Britannica would be to you, you haven't time to find out. But if you do know this, then—

Act!

A Wonderful New Volume

THE publishers of the Encyclopaedia Britannica announce that they have made arrangements for the issue, as soon after the end of the war as possible, of a new [illegible] a full and authoritative history of the war.

The new volume will be written by scholars and experts of the same high character as those who wrote for the Britannica already and by many of the own contributors. It will be absolutely impartial, excluding all partisan feelings and prejudices. It will contain

1. A judicial account of the real causes of the war, the progress of the struggle, and the results all over the world; with maps, as necessary, to show changes in boundaries.
2. The lives of the new leaders, whether civil, military or naval, in the belligerent countries.
3. The results of the war, outside the sphere of fighting, the progress of surgery, the prevention of contagious diseases, the new scientific discoveries, etc.

The new volume will bridge the gap between the days of peace before and after the war. It will be printed and bound to match the Britannica, and the publishers guarantee that no matter how difficult and costly the supplementary volume may be from the editorial point of view, the price of it to all who purchase the Britannica during the present sale will not be more than that of a corresponding volume of the Britannica.

THE LABOUR ATTITUDE

Leaders Will Hold Premier Borden to His Statement of a Year Ago

OTTAWA, May 21. — The exact form of the Conscription Act or how it will be enforced has not been decided. While a central board or commission, consisting of civilians, seems probable, the whole initial process may be vested in the military authorities, giving them power to register everyone and eliminate those who are needed more at home, and allowing for appeals to county judges by those dissatisfied with the disposition of their cases. There is also some doubt as to whether the minimum age will be 18 or 20, and the maximum 40 or 45. The experience is that a good many young lads sent to England had to come home because of inability to stand the pace.

Some Opposition.

Some Liberals apparently are going to support the Government proposals as they stand. A few French Conservatives may oppose them. It is quite apparent, however, that there will be some form of oppositions nd others are already wiring Liberals. Certain labour organizations and others are already wiring here about it, but the majority of messages from outside are favorable.

So far as can be judged to-day, the Liberals in the main are likely to call for one of several courses, a referendum, on the ground that there is no mandate for conscription, a national or coalition Government or conscription in the broad sense of wealth, of labour for vital industries and of food holding and producing establishments, as well as for military purposes. The opposition may turn out to be trifling. A fair unanimity is hoped for, though prospects for it are not exactly reassuring. No stock is placed in a Montreal report that Sir Wilfrid Laurier will resign over the issue.

Labour Attitude.

Unless Premier Borden can demonstrate that conditions have so radically changed from a year ago, and that the existence of this country is in danger of destruction, organised labour, as represented by the heads of the Dominion Trades and Labour Congress, will continue to oppose conscription. That was labor's attitude at the last Dominion Congress in September last year, and according to J. C. Watters, president, who returned from Washington, to-day, and Jas. Simpson, Toronto, vice-president, who is also in the city.

According to the views of these men expressed to-day, labour will oppose conscription unless the Premier has material to back up his plans that the labour men have hitherto been unware of. The labour leaders say they will hold Sir Robert to his unequivocal statement a year ago that he wa opposed to conscription, and that only if Canada was in danger of destruction would it be brought in.

Conscription of Wealth.

"In any case it is highly probable the Labour delegates will ask that before ny conscription bill is passed that the country will be asked to record its opinion on the matter. Mr. Watters and Mr. Simpson both declared that since Australia had followed that plan, Canada should. It is equally certain that if conscription is to became law in whatever form, the congress heads will ask for conscription of wealth as a natural corollary of conscription of men. They are to have a conference with the Premier.

CONTROL OF GARDEN INSECTS HOSTILE TO GREATER PRODUCTION

The Entomological Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture will issue early in May Circular No. 9 on "Common Garden Insects and Their Control." This publication includes an account of the more important insect pests of the vegetable and flower garden. It has been prepared for wide distribution at this time when everywhere throughout Canada efforts are being earnestly made to increase the production of vegetable foods, etc., in back yards, vacant lots and other areas near cities and towns. The remedial measures for controlling the common destructive species and also formulae for the making of the chief insecticides are given. For easy reference the insects are grouped under the crop of flowering plants they infest. Gardeners will find this publication a most useful means for solving many troubles that will arise. Application for this Entomological Circular No. 9 should be made to the Chief of the Publication Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. Insects concerning which further information is desired should be sent with a covering letter to the Dominion Entomologist, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. Packages and letters so addressed up to 11 ounces in weight may be forwarded free of postage.

NOTICE

To whom it may concern:

To you, whose chief desire and ambition is the glory of God and the salvation of your fellowman:

Your part to do for the present time, "in the greatest revival America has ever known," is—

To sacredly tithe your income and time, spending your time tithe in prayer to, and waiting upon God.

To be well assured that Jesus saves you from the guilt and power of sin.

To be thoroughly conscious that you are living in obedience to the law of the Spirit.

Being fully surrendered to Jesus, to apprehend, or take possession of, the power purchased by Jesus Christ, and promised by God the Father, even the gift of the Holy Ghost.

To help send a copy of this to some one person in every city, town, village, hamlet, and countryside of America.

The daily time to be tithed would be the balance of the day left, after deducting the time spent in wage-earning business, etc. Thus, if you spent ten hours in an earning capacity, earning a certain amount, and you tithe that amount, you then would have fourteen hours of time to tithe, which tithe would be eighty-four minutes.

"Victor."

Quaker Oats Factory To Cost $1,500,000 at Outset

Will Be Eight Stories High and Comprise All the Mills, Warehouses and Other Departments City Asked To Build Bridge at Hunter Street

PREPARING FOR THE VOTE

The new Quaker Oats factory will be an immense spreading structure, eight stories high, to be erected at an initial cost of $1,500,000. This statement was made by Mayor Duffus last night, who said he had just seen the plans. If the ratepayers could imagine the extent of the proposed establishment, or could see the plans, at the same time realizing what this industry meant to Peterborough's development, His Worship stated that they would be filled with a great pride that this factory intended to re-locate here.

The meeing last night was largely attended, and it was the consensus of opinion that the ratepayers would give the bridge by-law an overwhelming majority. It was pointed out that the Quaker Oats Company are asking no bonus in rebuilding here, that a new bridge at Hunter street is practically necessary now, and was under consideration before the fire of December 11th. Moreover, the present dilapidated and flimsy span, in the ordinary course of improvement, would have to be replaced in a year or two. And the by-law does not bind the city to immediate rebuilding. In fact the overhead bridge will not be built for two or three years.

Through the Council, the city has agreed to provide an overhead bridge at Hunter street and an ordinary level bridge at London street. Upon the understanding that the people of Peterborough would endorse the Council's guarantee, the company announced its intention. It is to show the Quaker Oats company that this city appreciates its recent decision that the Greater Peterborough Association is anxious to make the coming vote as large as possible. The desideratum is unanimity, if possible.

At last night's meeting the details of organization in the east and north wards were reported, and it was announced that the south and west wards will arrange their plans to-night. A house to house canvas will be made in order that every rate payer may be impressed with the desirability of casting his vote in favour of the bridge by-law.

All the Mills Here

Mayor Duffus stated that the Company will bring all their departments here, providing the city passes the by-law. London, Sudbury and other towns had gone the limit to move the company, and it was yet possible that if the by-law were not carried some of the mills might be opened in other places. Hence, the ratepayers should unite to show the Company that Peterborough wants the entire plant, and to demonstrate by a great majority that the city greets them in their return.

Mr. Reg. Turner suggested that a cut of the plans be obtained and inserted in the local newspapers.

Ex-Mayor Bradburn said he was willing to take one of the sub-divisions in the West Ward, and remain there all day. He recommended that the men at the polling places should be known to the sectors in those districts.

Long-Term Debentures.

Mr. Bradburn supported the Mayor's idea that the debentures be made to run thirty, instead of twenty years. He would make them forty or fifty years. "I'm not going to be here fifty years hence," said the ex-Mayor, "but the bridge will, and I believe the people of that time should share in the cost of its construction.

Mr. Hartley Confident.

Mr. J. J. Hartley was sure the by-law would carry by a large majority. People who were indifferent, who never voted on by-laws should be influenced by the importance of this one, and urged to cast their vote.

Mr. Joseph Begley pointed out that the Quaker Oats factory would be erected in the heart of the city and its employees would live in the city and not in the suburbs, as in the case of some other local factories. It would tend to raise the assessment and otherwise benefit the city.

Mr. Denham said the Company had agreed to reassemble all its departments in Peterborough providing the bridges were erected. If the city failed in this the Company was at liberty to consider the offers of other cities. Mr. Denham's remarks were interpreted as a caution that it is very necessary that the by-law pass if the factory is to locate here. The Company has land in London, and a lease in Sudbury, and a subsidiary plant in Saskatoon. But the tentative plans at present provide a composite building for Peterborough to include flour, rolled oats, puffed rice and other mills with great elevators and the other departments.

A personal letter signed by the Mayor will be sent to each elector who votes in every ward in which he holds property.

A MEETING OF TEXTILE WORKERS

Miss Mary Kelleher, general organizer of the United Textile Workers, gave another stirring address last night in the Labour Hall, and a number of new members were added to the Textile Union. Miss Kelleher impressed again upon the audience the fact that better conditions, better hours and better wages could be accomplished by organization. She said the employers were busy trying to prevent the Union from becoming a powerful body, though they themselves formed organizations for their own protection.

Miss Kelleher will give another address in Labour Hall next Monday.

WILL USE SAMPLE CONCRETE POST

Suitable Light Will Be Placed at Entrance to Little Lake Cemetery.

Some time ago the Peterborough Utilities Commission received from Ottawa a sample of electric light post that was constructed of reinforced concrete. For some weeks the post occupied a position at the rear of the office of the Commission. Now it is proposed to erect the post of the small plot of ground at the entrance to the Little Lake cemetery. A suitable light will be placed on top of the post and the whole will harmonise with the stone work of the entrance gates. Some time ago the Fire, Water and Light committee authorised the erection of a light at this particular point.

British Are Secure in the Possession of the Famous Hindenburg Line

All Human Courage Oozed from the Germans as They Hid in Their Dugouts and Tried To Deafen Their Ears and Souls to the Thunder of Explosives

NEW YORK, May 22.—The Associated Press says:

As they rest the British are secure in the possession of all the famous Hindenburg line, except about 2,000 yards of it directly west of Bullecourt, where another heavy battle must be fought before the enemy can be dislodged and sent eastward.

War Correspondens' Headquarters, May 22.—The lull between battles ended by our corps of English and Scots attacking that portion of the Hindenburg line which goes between Fontaine-les-Croisilles and Bullecourt. For a week past our heavy guns have been bombarding it, hurling thousands of heavy high explosives into the defences, so that the trench system, which was perfect and strong early in May with good parapets and traverses and dugouts protected by broad belts of wire, became a mere mass of shell craters and upheavals of earth with no trace of the line. It was photographed by the young gentlemen in the clouds. The German garrison here, mostly from Posen and Breslau in the 46th Reserve Division, were caught in this hurricane of shells, and their only chance of life—and that not a good one—was to stay below in the deepest dugouts economising their rations, for no other food could reach them, and trying to deafen their ears and souls to the trunder of explosions above their heads and the quaking of the earth about them. This they did, as we know from our prisoners.

All human courage oozed from them, they became living fears and wrecks of men, according to that physical change which is wrought on men imprisoned under intense shelling with its continual concussion. Yet when our troops went forward other Germans came up through the communicating trenches and out of the machine-gun emplacements and fought fiercely. From dug outs in which the first line troops had taken refuge our men brought many prisoners, the most in the morning and 170 in the afternoon, while the fight went on. That was in the front lines of the Hindenburg trench system. Farther back in the support lines our men were held up a while by isolated machine guns and snipers.

Penetrate Second Line.

A second attack, made in the evening penetrated the enemy's second line in this network of trenches. They have now taken something like 3,000 yards of the Hindenburg line on the left of Bullecourt, and on the right of that heap of ruins we hold about 600 to 800 yards captured by the Australians in desperate fighting, which have been described, and held against a long series of counter attacks.

Against our English troops in this new fighting there have been up to now no counter-attacks, except that some bodies of men were seen massing eastward. They were caught under our gunfire and smashed in our bombardment Sunday evening. Several sectors of the front rose at times to the intensity of drum fire, with that awful laboring and pommeling from heavy howitzers which is like the big drums of war to the rattle of lighter kettle drums, which are the field batteries. There was summer lightning in the sky, which later, when darkness crept over the battlefields and over all the woods and orchards of the villages behind, flashed with short, sharp stars of light, so like the gunfire at night that it is difficult to distinguish them from shell-bursts, except they were south and west as well as east and north, and we seemed to be encircled by battle.

LAST CHANCE THIS WEEK

Supply of India Paper Edition of Encyclopaedia Britannica Is Limited

Editor, Examiner.

Dear Sir,—In England, a few years ago, during a campaign of advertising which I undertook for the new Encyclopedia Britannica, Mr. Arthur J. Balfour, then Prime Minister, said to a friend of mine that he had never seen these advertisements. Yet, day after day, in every important newspaper in Great Britain, I was using three, four and five columns, which, in England was a much larger space than any other advertiser used at that time. The British Statesman, engrossed as he was in affairs of state, had little time for reading anything in the English newspapers except such parts of them as dealt with matters in which he was professionally concerned. He had not noticed the Britannica advertisements, because, like many another busy man, he read his newspaper only for certain things, and he knew where to find them.

Now, Mr. Balfour's personal indifferance to newspaper advertising is that of thousands of other busy people here in America. They do not see the Britannica advertising because they don't read their newspaper all through.

The point of this observation has to do with the condition of affairs in the sale of the Encyclopaedia Britannica at the present moment.

I arranged for the editorial organization which created the new Encyclopaedia Britannica, and when the work was ready for publication both in this country and in England, I issued the book in two forms — one printed on thick paper, which was the usual form in which the Britannica had always appeared, the other printed on India paper. My object in using this remarkably thin paper was to so reduce the bulk of the volumes that people could hold them and use them just as they would any other book—that is, without the slightest effort. I recognized that the use of India paper was a tremendous innovation. It was an experiment pure and simple. Some of my friends in the publishing world in London laughed at the idea; others said it was certainly worth trying out, but none said it would be successful.

We let the public decide the question for themselves. We offered to sell the book in other form, and you can judge of the success of this entirely new way of issuing the Britannica by the fact that our records show that 97 per cent. of our subscribers purchased the Britannica printed on India paper. The other 3 per cent. were libraries.

We now find it impossible to get any more India paper on account of the war. Therefore we have to announce the end of the Britannica printed on India paper. Hereafter any one who wants the Britannica will have to be content with the thick paper.

Now, what I have said above would not justify you in printing this letter were it not for the fact, admitted by all scholars, that The Encyclopaedia Britannica is an educational work. If its publication is to be continued, and if we are compelled by circumstances over which we, as publishers, have no control, to issue it on thick paper, it is a question whether it can be made a commercial success, in view of the overwhelming preference on the part of buyers for the India paper volumes. For this reason I hope that you will publish this letter as a matter of public interest to your readers, so that they will not fail to be apprised by the facts which they may altogether miss if our advertisements in your paper are the only means by which they can learn them. If any of your readers are expecting to buy The Encyclopaedia Britannica at all, and wish to have it on India paper, they would order their sets before Saturday next.

Yours very truly,
H. E. HOOPER,
President.

GARAGE BUILT AT THE REAR OF CITY HALL

Building—Will Shelter the New Car Purchased for Board of Works Department

The new motor truck for the use of Street Commissioner Evans of the Board of Works Department, will be housed at the rear of the City Hall where a garage has been erected. The car will be placed in commission as soon as the truck body is completed. When the car arrived it was equipped with a roadster body. This will be removed and a truck body substituted so that the Commissioner will be in a position to move a small squad of men from one place to another as well as carry a quantity of tools. The side doors of the car will identify the car as belonging to the Board of Works Department of the city.

"THE CRISIS" A WONDERFUL PRODUCTION

Film Version of Winston Churchill's Novel Presented at The Grand. Music is Delightful.

A stupendous film, a wonderful production, a thrilling story, a pleasing love theme. Such is the way one could briefly describe 'The Crisis,' the gigantic film production which was greeted by a large and representative audience at the Grand Opera House last night. Peterborough has seen "A Birth of a Nation, "Intolerance" and "The Whip," and they were pronounced wonderful pictures, but after one has seen 'The Crisis,' they are bound to admit that it is indeed the greatest historical film yet put before the public.

The Story.

The story of 'The Crisis,' told in Winston Churchill's book, has been elaborately photo dramatized by William N. Selig, and is a masterpiece in photo play. The story of 'The Crisis centres round the border of the city of St. Louis, where the questions of slavery and state sovereignty caused continued disturbance during the period preceding the Civil War. The light-hearted, aristocratic Southerners meet the stern and serious minded people of the North and trouble results, yet out of all this a romance springs up. Col. Comyn Carvel and Judge Silas Wipple had been bosom friends from youth, yet during their friendship existed a long storm of hostile opinions. Carvel, politically, was heart and soul for the Southern cause, Wipple the North, with an ardent fervour. They met regularly, they wrangled regularly and always parted where they commenced their arguments, but one Virginia Carvel, the lovely doughter of the Colonel, made the waters of friendship tempestuous. From Boston came Stephen Brice to study law in Wipples' office. Brice was a young Puritan in training, but broad minded. Brice and Virginia met peculiarly at the slave auction ,where Clarence Colfax, Virginia's lover, was trying to buy a slave as a gift to his sweetheart. A beautiful quadroon girl was put up under the auctioneer's hammer, with a broken-hearted mother beside her. The sight touches Brice's heart, and determined to save the girl from eternal separation from her mother, stepped in, outbid Colfax and bought the girl, whom he took home to his aged mother. Virginia saw him, gave him a piercing look and the exchange of hostile glances settled their fate. Through the friendship of Carvel and Wipple, Virginia and Stephen naturally met. She did every thing to humiliate Brice, whilst he made his powerful nature felt. They loved each other, but there was no truce in their warfare. The predominating character of the theatrical part was the "great heart," Abraham Lincoln, whose election immediately brought on the Civil War. Then is witnessed the most realistic battle scenes ever screened, endless armies, tons of explosives, daring feats, thrilling moments, are placed before the eye with great intensity. But the weight of all this woe is too much for Judge Wipple, his health breaks and ultimately he dies. His death bed scene being the most touching incident ever witnessed, whilst Col. Carvel ends his life on the battle field fighting for the Southern cause. The great Lincoln eventually brings Brice and Virginia together and bestowing them with Lincolnian philosophy, his influence unites them, and again the old Carvel home is graced by their presence, and the picture closes where they both pay their respects to the dead body of their reconciliator, Lincoln, and here concludes the mightiest picture drama ever screened.

Superb Music.

And to say that the music fitted the production is putting it mildly, for it is a long time since a Peterborough audience have heard such a beautiful selection of orchestral music by the great masters so admirably fitted to the endless change of action in the play. One minute one would hear a beautiful Beethoven sonatina, the next minute a soothing air of the South, followed by a ponderous prelude which the episode of the play would call for. Whilst one cannot single out any particular one of the beautiful numbers, the most touching part was the singing of Lead Kindly Light at the death of Judge Wipple. Musically, 'The Crisis' is a treat in itself, and the splendid score is a masterpiece of detail and clever musical selection and the credit of all this is due to Mr. Jules Brazil, the well know composer and arranger. He was observed in the orchestra as director which, by the way, had never been heard to play so well as last night. The way they executed the difficult score was most creditable.

WHAT SHARE WILL ONTARIO HAVE TO GIVE

Will This Province Again Have To Bear the Brunt of Raising Required Troops?

Special to The Examiner.

TORONTO, May 22. —The leading point in all discussions of the application of conscription is what apportionment as between provinces will be made. In other words, will this province get credit for the voluntary enlistments it has already made, or will it, on account of its population, again have to bear the brunt of raising the troops required? There are, among others, three ways in which drafts from the province to make up the 100,000 men needed, might be called upon. First, the hundred thousand might be assigned to the various provinces on the basis of population. This system would make no allowance for previous enlistments. Ontario would be called on for 34,720 more, and Quebec 27,770. Second, a flat percentage of the remaining men of military age, the precentage being large enough to supply the 100,000 men required, might be called upon. This would make a small and indirect allowance for previous enlistment. Ontario would give 31,200 more and Quebec 28,800. Third, the total Canadian force of 500,000 men might be assigned fo the various provinces, the number already enlisted deducted and each province drafed upon respectively for its balance. This would make full allowance for previous enlistments. Ontario would give from 8,000 to 16,000 more and Quebec 27,943. This would obviously raise more than the required one hundred thousand in all Canada.

FIVE PETERBORO MEN WERE FINED

Defendants Journeyed Into the Country for a Spree

This morning before County Police Magistrate Langley in the County Police Court, five Peterborough men pleaded guilty to a charge of being found drunk in a public place, namely, at Buckhorn. A fine of twenty-five dollars and costs was imposed in each case. The costs in each case amounted to five dollars and eighty-five cents. The charge was laid by License Inspector Stewart. Mr. G. W. Hatton appeared for the Crown.

The alleged offence occurred on Sunday, May 6th, and six days later Inspector Stewart learned of the affair. He immediately went back to the north country and collected the necessary evidence, even though the case was then six days old. "A man who wants to get drunk in a public place might just as well get drunk in Peterborough as go into the country," said License Inspector Stewart. "He will get caught just the same."

Inspector Stewart made it plain that he would run to earth all such infractions of the Temperance Act. A number of young men are under the impression that they can load a cargo of liquor into an automobile and journey into the country for a spree and get away with it. Inspector Stewart is determined to put a stop to such pastime.

He is a graduate of the University of Toronto School of Science and has been with the local company since graduation. He is a son of Mr. M. J. Kirn, Chief Engineer, Quaker Oats Co., Peterborough, Ont.

Charged With Theft of 24 Fence Rails

John Doig, charged with stealing twenty-one cedar fence rails from Mr. John Duignan's property in North Monaghan, appeared before Magistrate Dumble this morning. Judgment was reserved for a week.

Mr. Duignan stated that the land was 8 1-2 acres, west of Park street and south of Lansdowne street, in North Monaghan. The rails were taken from the west end of the fence. It was rebuilt last summer and tied with wire. To replace the fence as it was would cost $10. Witness stated that he had found pieces of cedar rails in front of Doig's house and chips at his back door that Mr. Duignan judged were from rails cut up. There was also one cedar rail twelve feet long uncut.

Wm. Seaman said he knew nothing about the rails. Detective Meagher corroborated the evidence respecting the rails in Doig's yard.

John Doig said that at John O'Connell's property he had put on his waggon 8 or 9 chunks of round poles. He did not know that any rails were included. He denied that any one had seen him take rails from Mr. Duignan's place.

Peterborough Will Hold A Big Celebration on 1st of July

Under the Auspices of the Greater Peterborough Association—The Committee Has Plans Outlined Already for Dominion Day

ASSOCIATION IS ACTIVE

The first general meeting of the Greater Peterborough Association last night disclose its accumulated strength, its recent activities and its possibilities of realising the high hopes in which it was begotten. For the most part, the subcommittees have applied themselves to the responsibilities allotted to them and by the work already accomplished or approaching accompliahment have developed a morale that should carry them into further undertakings. It seemed from some of the reports that there is a little danger of duplication of overlapping of effort but this should be obviated when further experience emphasizes the condition if they really exist.

The Association presented itself last night as an actual and potential asset to the city, an organization that is just finding itself and the scope of its interests and endeavours, and the individual members appeared eager to assume a share of the counsel that is so necessary, but also of the material details in the performance of which the organization will be tried and tested.

Mayor Duffus presided with S. R. Armstrong as secretary and the Council benches all but filled to capacity. Among those present were the following gentlemen:—E. B. Fowler, E. H. D. Hall, C. G. Graham, G. O. Cameron, W. R. Breyfogle, Reg. H. Turner, W. H. Bradburn, W. H. Denham, B. D. Hall, W. S. Campbell, J. M. Brooks, R. Denne, G. H. Logie, T. H. Hooper, C. H. Pennefather, H. E. Stenton, John McCann, M. H. Gainey, R. L. Dobbin, M. J. Maher, G. H. Roper, W. Stocker, T. F. Matthews, M. S. Donoghue, F. Linton, J. J. Hartley, Wm. Stevens, J. J. Turner, B. F. Ackerman, W. G. DOMINION DAY CELEBRATION

Mr. Denne reported that the Sports and Holidays committee had outlined a programme for the celebration of Dominion Day. It was proposed to stage the events at the Exhibition Grounds and donate the proceeds to the Peterborough Health Association. The list of attractions were tentatively arranged but they would assure a big day for the city and by advertising it in surrounding towns it was believed that many visitors would be drawn here. Mr. Matthews was trying to secure an aeroplane, and it was hoped that an armoured car would also be obtained. Mr. R. H. Turner moved seconded by Mr. Logie that the report be adopted and that the slogan of the Motor Show be adopted "A Going Concern."

WORKINGMEN'S HOMES

Mr. G. O. Cameron, secretary of the Industrial and Labour committee reported the work done in connection with the ward organization for getting out the vote on the bridge by-law. He also stated that the question of providing homes for workingmen had been opened and was under consideration. Ald. McIntyre supplemented this report by stating that he had been asked for figures by Mr. W. G. Morrow on a type of dwelling and was now working on the estimates.

TRANSPORTATION COMMITTEE

A comprehensive report of the activities of the Transportation Committee was presented by Mr. W. S. Campbell. He mentioned the efforts made to obtain improved freight and passenger service for this city, the opening of communication with the Government regarding extensions to the street railway, and the movement for the early completion of the Trent Canal and the opening of the section from Peterborough to Lake Ontario. Mr. Campbell stated that the Provincial Government would send a representative to the June session of the County Council to discuss public work on county roads.

Referring to the report, Mr. Breyfogle stated that freight service was handicapped by the inability of the railways to take care of the rising costs of operation. Their request for a fifteen per cent. increase in rates was to be considered in the near future and Mr. Breyfogle believed that it should be supported. With the increased funds the railways would be able to hold their men and provide the service that factories and merchants needed.

Mr. Denham said he could see no reason why the C.P.R. did not transfer from the Lake shore line a Sunday train through Peterborough. It would provide a service that would be greatly appreciated in Peterborough.

CIVIC IMPROVEMENT.

Mr. Logie stated that the Civic Improvement and Good Roads committee had not held a meeting but that work was under way.

PUBLICITY COMMITTEE.

An allotment of money and stationery for correspondence was required by the Publicity committee, Mr. Reg. Turner suggested.

He presented an estimate of the cost of a sign to be erected at Welcome on the Kingston road directing tourists attention to the Peterborough road and the Kawartha Lakes district. His report included data of the cost of advertising labels to be sent out by local concerns on shipments of goods. Mr. Turner and Mr. Weddell were instructed to confer with the Manufacturers Committee of the City Council.

Mayor Duffus stated that $500 had been appropriated for advertising in United States magazines and $200 in Canada. Other information was being prepared regarding signs at the local stations and at the corner of George and Charlotte streets.

EDUCATIONAL COMMITTEE

Mr. Pennefather, secretary of the Educational Committee, stated that a meeting had not been held. He expressed his desire to open in Peterborough a movement for the protection of bird life similar to that carried on in many cities of the United States and Canada. He believed it would result in the saving of thousands of dollars for the farmers, and would have a good effect upon the youth of the city in creating a new interest and love for birds.

THE INDUSTRIAL EXHIBITION

Mr. J. J. Hartley stated that he had been unable to call a meeting of this committee but would do so. Mr. Denham remarked that the Exhibition could be made of great value to the city, but manufacturers and merchants could not be expected to display their goods in buildings that were altogether inadequate.

Mr. Logie stated that the sooner permanent grounds and buildings were provided the better for the city and the Exhibition.

The Mercantile committee had not yet met. Mr. M. J. Maher stated, because of the absence of Mr. Thos. Barrie, the chairman. When he returned from the West it would begin its activities.

LES DARCY IS VERY ILL

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 21.—Les Darcy, the Australian boxer, was barely alive to-day, according to his physician. "Darcy is likely to die at any moment, but at the same time his wonderful vitality may pull him through," the physician said.

Darcy's condition is due to an infected tooth and tonsil trouble, which resulted in blood poisoning, spreading throughout his system.

He leaves to mourn his loss his parents, four brothers, John W, Douro, William of Standard, Alberta, Patrick W. and Francis at home, and two sisters, Irene of Toronto and Lillian at home.
The funeral will leave the family residence, lot 12, concession 4, at 8 o'clock on Wednesday morning for St. Joseph's church, thence to St. Joseph's cemetery, Douro.

MRS. J. B. HUNTER.

In the death of Eliza J. Stratton Hunter, widow of the late Dr. J. B. Hunter, a beautiful and beneficent life and personality pass out of Peterborough. Her death, away from home, was sadly sudden, and took place in Toronto, and followed on a minor surgical operation, on Thursday of last week, from which she was making good recovery, but complications supervening, the end came as suddenly as unexpectedly.
The late Mrs. Hunter, second eldest daughter of the late James Stratton, was born at Millbrook, in 1855, removing in early life to Peterborough, where, with the exception of her seven years of married life, she has since lived. In 1884 she was married to Dr. J. B. Hunter, and lived for a time in Minnedosa, Manitoba, subsequently taking residence in Detroit. On the death of her husband, in 1891, Mrs. Hunter came to reside at the old home, Ardyn, Gilmour street.
Few, if any persons, who lived in this city, have as deeply impressed the high quality of their lives and characters upon the home and the community as Mrs. Hunter has done. As a loving mother and faithful friend her discharge of duty was of a part with her beneficent relations to society and her fellow-citizens. She was a neighbour in the full Scriptural sense of the word, loving others as herself in a way that will make her memory blessed by her abounding kindness. She was a member of the Murray Street Baptist Church, prominent by her devotion to its interests, and active in promoting its work in every branch, in both a personal and official capacity. If Mrs. Hunter will be missed more in one relation of her life, the Murray Street Church will, outside the home, feel her loss most deeply. She was also actively interested in the work of the Young Women's Association, and, indeed, was active and zealous wherever her kindness of heart found opportunity by deeds of love, to give comfort, help or cheer. By her personal geniality and cheerfulness and genuineness she made hosts of friends, and, passing to the higher life, her memory will be blest, as that of ones who lived in the world to make it better and happier.
The surviving immediate, relatives are: one daughter, Mrs. H. D. Robertson of Chentu, China, at present visiting in Peterborough; two grandchildren — boys—Egerton and Francis Robertson; three sisters, Miss Stratton, at present in California; Miss Mary Stratton, assistant-superintendent of the City Hospital, Hamilton, and Mrs. T. F. Matthews, city; and one brother, Albert H. Stratton.
Funeral from the family residence, Ardyn, 566 Gilmour street, on Wednesday afternoon. Family service at the residence at 1.30, and service at Murray Street Baptist Church at 3 o'clock. Interment in Little Lake cemetery.

Edwin Robert Rogers, inspector of Prisons anad Public Charities, who died on April 21 last, left an estate of $36,110, made up of $22,410 in insurance on seven policies, $1 400 cash, and $12,300 in property at 1644 Dundas street, Toronto. This last sum is subject to taxes and mortgage to be deducted. The deceased provided for the payment of $800 per annum to his daughter Bessie, and left the remainer of the income to his widow for life. Should the money received from the estate of the late Henry Pellatt be insufficient to maintain the property at 102 Wells' Hill Road, the testator directs that the property be sold and the proceeds added to his estate. On the death of Mrs. Rogers the property passes to his daughters, Bessie and Rila, the former receiving 90 per cent. and the latter, who has been provided for under the will of her grandfather, 10 per cent.
The following legacies in cash are provided for:— $50 each as a memorial to the testator's son, to the colonel of the 61st King George's Own Pioneers, Bangalore, Mysore, India, and "C" Company, 6th East Yorkshire Regiment; $300 to Alfred B. Rogers to assist in the schooling of his son, Percy; $200 to Martha Rogers, sister-in-law; $50 each to the Church of the Redeemer, Calgary, and Church of St. Michael's and All Angels, Toronto; $100 to St. John's Church, West Toronto; $200 to Winnie B. Murdoch, Toronto; $500 to be expended upon a moderately priced monument and the up-keep of the burial plot in Little Lake Cemetery, Peterborough.
A clause in the will reads: "To the Royal Military College, Kingston, I bequeath the cup won by my son in India for the best British officer at arms, for I feel that much of the success of my son in the army was due to the training he received at the Royal Military College, Kingston." The remainder of the son's trophies are divided between the daughters.

FOWLER'S PEBLO GLASSES

HAPPY CHILDREN

Are the ones that get along best. They play better and grow better, and do better work at school. Often the cause of a child's dullness can be traced to poor eyesight, and it is too bad to have their progress hampered in this way when it can be so easily corrected. Dr. Fowler makes a special feature of the care of children's eyes and advises an examination if there appears to be eye trouble.

Theory of Ordnance Experts.

According to ordnance experts, had the propelling charge been perfect the projective would have left the muzzle of the gun travelling at the rate of at least 2,800 feet a second. If the bursting charge had been detonated immediately after the shell left the gun the momentum of the fragments of the projectile could not have been overcome, and instead of coming back to the ship they would have scattered with the discharge of the gun the three nurses fell. Miss Woods collapsed into a deck chair. No one else in the vicinity was touched.

Ring Quality Counts

In buying Gold Rings never allow a small difference in cost to obscure the great difference in quality.

It is well-known that a Ring receives more constant wear than any other article of Jewelry, so that it takes only a short time to expose its true quality.

WERE LAID TO REST AMID THE SURREY PINES

Canadians Who Die in the London Hospitals Buried in Brookwood Cemetery — Interment of Five Members of Dominion Force Who Fought at Vimy.

GRAVES ARE CARED FOR

LONDON, May 23.—Among places associated with the war which will be visited by Canadians in years to come is Brookwood cemetery, in Surrey, a short distance from the town of Woking, where are laid to rest the lads who die in hospitals in the London area. Last Friday five of them who had fought at Vimy Ridge and had succumbed to their injuries in hospital, were taken down and buried with fitting ceremony.

Brookwood Cemetery was established in order to discourage city burials, and arrangements were made so as to make it almost as expeditious and as reasonable to go there as to Norwood or Kensal Green, the southern and northern cemeteries of London. Going down to Westminster Bridge Road about noon last Friday, I entered the special station of the London Necropolis Company and found a number of officers, Australian and Canadian, together with a small knot of people who were evidently mourners. One waiting-room was labelled "Canada," which was for the use of anyone who was attending the funeral. The bodies had lain overnight, or for some hours, in the station chapel, and were already in the funeral car which was on the train. Major G. S. Sparkes, of the London command, Canadians, was in charge, and with him travelled two chaplains, Capt. T. A Mosley, of Winnipeg, and Capt. Macdonald, of Glengarry, also Capt. C. L. Turnbull of general headquarters.

After a non-stop journey Brookwood was reached in 50 minutes, and the train was sidetracked right into the cemetery. On the platform was paraded a company of men drawn from the South Africans, who are in training in the locality. The five caskets, covered with the Union Jack, were placed upon light trolleys, which were wheeled by four Canadian pallbearers headed by the firing party. There was no idle crowd. The air was perfectly still, and the only sound was the slow tread of the procession over the sandy soil.

THOSE LAID TO REST.

The men who were being borne to the grave were: Lance-Corpl. D. Sephton (187289); Pte. Alan Law (654337); Pte. H. McLean (491118), all of the C.M.R.; Pte. Walter Smith (116088), 72nd Battalion, and Pte. W. W. Peters (920375), 5th Battalion. Smith's father, also in khaki, was in the procession.

Within a few minutes there was a halt at the dominions plot, which belongs to Canada, Australia and New Zealand, the Canadian half acre being in the centre. The caskets were placed on trestles over the five open graves, and Capt. Mosley read the burial service, and at the committal sentences four caskets were lowered by Canadian comrades. Then Capt. Macdonald read the offices for the dead according to the Roman Catholic faith, the responses being made by four mourning relatives.

The South Africans looked skywards and thrice repeated a volley which was followed up by the melancholy notes of the Last Post. So the men who came from Canada, fought in France, and died in London hospitals, were left amid the Surrey pines with Australians and New Zealanders to right and left, and their farewell volley was from South Africans. Moreover, these terrestrial bonds had a celestial reflection in the fact that Roman Catholic and Protestant had been laid side by side in one unbroken sacred ceremony. The Cardinal Archbishop of Westminster has very generously consented to this procedure on behalf of the Roman Catholic Church.

GRAVES WELL CARED FOR.

The graves are well taken care of; they are sodded, and at the head of each is erected the military memorial cross of which a description was given in a recent communication. Officers are buried in the same plot, but in a special subdivision. So far there are two graves, namely, Lieut. Frederick Courtenay Raymond (C.E.T.D.) and Lieut. Jas. Hunter (20th Batt.). In addition to the five men buried on the day of my visit, the following interments have taken place: Pte. E. G. Hill (538863) C.A.M.C. General; Sergt. J. J. Campbell (160258) 75th B att.; Pte. J. D. Lockery (53389) No. 4, A.D.M.S.; Pte. J. Angers (2245911) 257th Batt.; Gunner R. C. Parsons (311917) 3rd C.D.A.C.; Pte. A. Bailey (A.537), 1st Batt.; Pte. J. G. Hudson (9021) 2nd Batt.; Pte. E. R. Sharp (444715) R.C.R.; Pte. St. Clair Elderkin (902228) 42nd Batt.; Pte. R. B. Draper (779134) 1st Batt.; Pte. H. Ryan (760106) 7th Batt.; Pte. W. M. Riley (118600) 16th Batt.; Pte. S. Bissonnette (121774) 22nd Batt.; Pte. G. E. White (223867) 85th Batt.

The general arrangements and the quiet, but dignified ceremony, impressed one as admirably conceived and executed, and it will no doubt be some solace to those across the Atlantic to have this assurance that their fathers, sons anad brothers who fall in liberty's cause, but breathe their last in London, are properly treated as regards these last rites.

Ship Returns to Port With the Bodies of Two Red Cross Nurses

Third Woman Injured by Fragments of Projectile Fired by Gun Crew at Practice — Naval Inquiry Will Determine Truth of Theory That Ammunition Was Defective.

A STRANGE ACCIDENT

AN ATLANTIC PORT, May 23.—An American steamship which left here on Saturday returned to port bearing the bodies of two Red Cross nurses who were killed by the explosion of a shell during target practice. In her sick bay was a third woman nurse, seriously injured. No statement has been given out by the naval authorities here, but it is believed that defective ammunition was the cause of the accident.

The dead are Mrs. Edith Ayres, of No. 2,113 Sedgwick avenue, Chicago, Ill., and Miss Helen Burnett Woods, of No. 1,144 Sherman avenue, Evanston, Ill. The wounded nurse, who was taken to a naval hospital, is Miss Emma Matsen, of Columbus, Ohio. All three were members of base unit No. 12, American Red Cross.

All that is definitely known here is that the crew of one of the quarter guns were at target practice, and that when the first shell was fired an exprojectile fell on the deck and felled projectile fel lon the deck and felled the three women.

Theory of Ordnance Experts.

According to ordnance experts, had the propelling charge been perfect the projective would have left the muzzle of the gun travelling at the rate of at least 2,000 feet a second. If the bursting charge had been detonated immediately after the shell left the gun the momentum of the fragments of the projectile could not have been overcome, and instead of coming back to the ship they would have scattered in a wide fan shaped burst.

It is believed that not only was the propelling charge defective, but that the fuse failed to work properly. This appears to be vertified by the fact that the projectile must have been armour piercing, with detonating fuses, and not with time fuses, since the latter type would be of no use in attacking submarines.

These statements of Major Frederick Beeley, civilian commander of the Red Cross unit, and a professor of surgery at Northwestern University, also would tend to bear out the theory of defective ammunition. It is stated. Major Beeley said:

'Target practice was begun on board the vessel at two o'clock on Sunday afternoon. All the nurses were on the upper deck, amidships. The chief officer and I were standing with the nurses and we were all leaning over the rail watching the shots from the gun deck below. Two shots had been fired from a forward gun. Then word came that a gun was to be fired on our side of the ship.

'I was standing between Mrs. Ayres Miss Woods, and Miss Matsen was to the left of Mrs. Ayres. Simultaneously with the discharge of the gun the three nurses fell. Miss Woods collapsed into a deck chair. No one else in the vicinity was touched.

"We were at right angles to the course of the shell. There is no accurate evidence to warrant making a positive statement as to the exact cause of the accident. That will be determined in an inquiry to be made by a naval board, I am informed, and that inquiry will be held as soon as possible in order to avoid delaying the

THE LATE MAITRE LABORI

(London Daily News.)

Maitre Labori's name in this country dated from the gallant defence of Dreyfus, but he was prominent in all the causes celebres in France in recent years. He defended, eloquently, but vainly, the man Vaillant, a fanatic of high character, who in 1894 threw a bomb without effect in the French Chamber. He was counsel for Madame Humbert and for Madame Caillaux, too. Probably the last case confirmed him—if he needed confirmation—in his outspoken belief in the rottenness of French Parliamentary politics. He was a big man, in every sense of the word, and leaves no evident successor at the French Bar. Really great advocates are perhaps rarer than great statesmen.

THE GERMAN NICKEL SUPPLY

(Toronto Globe.)

Nickel is an essential metal in armaments, and in a number of other classes of industry. Ontario virtually controls the world's supply of ore, and this natural monopoly permits an industrial monopoly if the province chooses to exercise it. The military argument for such a step has been painfully enforced by the war. Writing only last week, Carl W. Ackerman, who returned from Germany with former Ambassador Gerard, says the Krupps were short of nickel and the submarine merchant ship Deutsch land was designed specially to bring nickel cargoes from the United States. While going through the Krupp factories last year he was told that the construction of 38.5 centimeter ship guns depended upon the Deutschland's safe return. The nickel brought to Germany on her two voyages came from the mines of this province.

A USEFUL TREE.

In a report for the government, United States Consul Yerby, stationed at Dakar, Senegal, describes a wonderful tree, known as the shea, or butter tree. It supplies the natives not only with nuts, which they highly prize, but with a butter that may become an article of commercial importance. It is already exported to Europe, where makers of artificial butter find use for it.

On the nuts that this tree produces there is a soft covering with a smooth skin that comes off easily when the nut ripens. This pulp is sweet and wholesome, according to Youth's Companion. Almost two-thirds of the nut is vegetable butter.

The tree begins to bear when it is fifteen years old and reaches its prime in twenty-five years. Chocolate manufacturers could easily utilize the product. It might also be of use in making candles and soap.

EAT LESS AND DO MORE.

(Chicago Tribune.)

A fat nation is no good. Lean nations accomplish things. Courage is not fat bellied. Intellect cannot be fat headed. The ottose life finds place in the adipose body.

We should eat less and think more, have smaller girth and larger chests, less on the hips and more on the thorax, have fewer potatoes at dinner and more books after dinner, more exercise and less chewing.

A strong person can subsist on a little oatmeal and philosophy and outwalk, outtalk, outthink, and in every way outdo the person who travels the long route from soup to nuts and goes to sleep afterwards as an anaconda full of sheep or monkeys might.

Life is a lean affair of hungry appetites and ambitions. They are best kept hungry. Then they stimulate to earnest performance. The fat bellied man does nothing but eat and sleep. We cannot support Faan any longer. The god of the American nation is not its belly. It is a god of muscle, with strong lines in its visage and determination in its body expression.

The regeneration of the American nation begins at the dinner table. We need stoutness in soul not stoutness in fat. Eat less and do more. Grow more above the neck and less below the stomach.

Dinner table reform will preserve the food supply, preserve the morale, help the national courage and put things over.

OUR SYSTEM WRONG.

(Toronto Globe.)

The British Government raised $2,865,000,000 by taxation in the last twelve months. The greater part of it came from profits and dividends. The greater part of Canada's national revenue is taken from wages.

FLEMING AND WALLOON.

(Boston Transcript.)

A recently concocted but not much discussed German "plot" to divide Belgium by favouring the Flemings and giving them an administration with Brussels as their capital—the Walloons being given Namur as a seat of "government"—is only a continuation of a policy which the artful plotter commenced to adopt in the early days of the occupation. It is true that Fleming and Walloon have not always seen eye to eye on various matters, for they have many differing characteristics and they speak differing languages. The Flemish language is a type of low German, but it is hardly a genuine medium of literary expression, and the works of Maeterlinck and Verhaeren, who are the most eminent men in Flemish literature, appear in the French language. All university tuition is in French, and while an educated Flemish must know French a Walloon need not necessarily know Flemish as a whole repudiate with scorn the action of those who have fallen in with the German plans.

The Flemings are a somewhat heavy and laborious people, stolid in character and lacking the vivacity which one usually finds in the Walloons, who are to be found mainly in Belgium's coal and iron areas. The Walloons are the most democratic of the Belgian peoples, and in them the Socialist movement gets its strongest support. They are fervently industrial, but with a strong attachment to the arts, and especially to music—M. Ysaye is a Walloon. They have no feeling of enmity or animosity with regard to their Fleming brethren, and in the days before the war the two races worked together in the greatest amity, even though they did not agree on a variety of matters.

THE PROHIBITION DRIVE.

(Boston Monitor)

There appears to be popular agreement on the point that the United States government has power to order the closing of the retail drinking places of the country as a war measure. It is generally admitted also that the United States has the power, as a war measure, to close the distilleries and the breweries.

Aside from the harm the liquor traffic is doing the country as a demoralizing agency, it is eating into the food supply at a rate that is little appreciated by the public. Of the grain raised in the United States last year, 116,000,000 bushels went into drink rather than into food.

Was Anaemic
FOR OVER A YEAR

Anaemia, or blood turning to water, is caused by the heart becoming deranged, and if the heart becomes weakened it cannot pump the blood as it should. As a result the blood becomes impoverished, and it loses its nourishing qualities. The face becomes pale and thin, and the lips bloodless. There is a weakness, tiredness and loss of weight.

When those suffering from thin or watery blood start taking Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills they can see a change from the outset.

Every dose introduces into the blood those vital elements necessary to make it rich and red. The pale cheeks take on the rosy hue of health, the weight increases, and the whole being thrills with a new life.

Mrs. R. J. Grey, Fredericton, N. B., writes: "When I was a girl working at general house work I overtaxed my strength and became completely run down. For over a year I was very bad with anaemia. A friend told me to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills so I got a box and when it was done I decided to get six more When I had taken them I gained not only in strength, but in flesh and colour, and best of all was good health."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c. a box; three boxes for $1,25 at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

FAMILY DOCTOR'S GOOD ADVICE

To Go On Taking "Fruit-a-tives" Because They Did Her Good

Rosseau, P. Q., Jan. 14th, 1915.

"I suffered for many years with terrible Indigestion and Constipation. I had frequent dizzy spells and became greatly run down. A neighbor advised me to try "Fruit-a-tives". I did so and to the surprise of my doctor, I began to improve, and he advised me to go on with "Fruit-a-tives".

I consider that I owe my life to "Fruit-a-tives" and I want to say to those who suffer from Indigestion, Constipation or Headaches—'try Fruit-a-tives' and you will get well". CORINE GAUDREAU.

50c. a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

From the statistics prepared by those who have carried on an investigation into the subject, it is shown that the distillers of the nation are turning into spirits every year 32,000,000 bushels of corn, 3,000,000 bushels of rye and 5,000,999 bushels of wheat, oats, and other grain, while the breweries consume 10,000,000 bushels of corn, 37,500,000 bushels of barley, and 12,000,000 bushels of rice. To the grain used in the manufacture of liquors, 116,000 bushels of wheat, oats, and other grain, while hops must be added. It may be held that all of these would not enter into the food supply, but at least the labour employed in producing them would do so. Moreover, it is thoroughly established that liquor is the worst foe of human energy, and the greatest deterrent to activity and, consequently, to industry, of which there is to-day any knowledge.

All efforts to compromise with the liquor traffic have proved futile in peace; compromise would be still more certain to fail in war, when only positive policies count and win.

WILLING TO LEARN.

(New York World.)

Two years ago the air would have been heavy with the shrieks of cross roads ranters affirming that one American could whip five Germans, and proclaiming that any sort of an American army that set foot on European soil would march straight to Berlin. Contrary to our reputation, we have become a modest people, at least in war matters. We are willing to learn, and a country willing to learn has already proceeded far on the road to victory.

KIPLING COMES BACK.

(Chicago Tribune)

Rudyard Kipling, signalizes our entry into the war with the first great poem he has written since the beginning of the conflict. Also he presents British literature in its most powerful phase. In resounding language he imposes a code of morals on the United States that demands we act in the interests of England.

"British literature more than British battleships has built the British empire. From penny liners to poet laureates the British writers breathe their country's greatness. Their standard of right and wrong for everybody is the good or ill of England. So skillfully and so persistently have they kept at this that they have captured the subconscious thought not only of their own people but of a large part of the outside world beside.

England's interest is very much the moral law of seacoast Americans. Eastern editorial writers have been harping it for the last two years.

Unfortunately for America our writers do not show the strong patriotic impulse that distinguishes their English contemporaries. Booth Tarkington and Mary Roberts Rinehart write with as much imagination and as skilful technique as Kipling or Wells, but their object is only to amuse, never to inspire.

Young people obtain the greater part of their impressions from fiction. No American boy or girl will gain anything from "Little Boy Baxter." The subaltern of Kipling or the midshipman of Marriott is the ideal of young manhood and young womanhood as well.

Is that, perhaps, why our rich young men do not enlist as well as the English—and why many American girls marry abroad?

MOLYBDENUM.

(New York Evening Post.)

Molybdenum is a substance which is playing a part in the present war for both the Allies and the Germans. Used in hardening the steel which is used in the rifling of the big guns, it is reported to have increased the life of the guns twenty times, and many projectiles are also hardened with molybdenum as well as a great deal of the armour plate which was formerly hardened with tungsten or vanadium. It is estimated, too, that the amount of molybdenum required to harden steel is only about one-half to one-third the amount of tungsten which is necessary to give the same result.

Curiously enough, molybdenum is used also as a stabilizer in some high explosives, smokeless powders, and to make a dense smoke in the location bombs which are fired previous to the firing of the projectile. It is used in many chemicals and in dyes for leather, rubber, silk, as a disinfectant, for fire-proofing, in some cases in place of platinum, while in electric lights it has replaced other metals which were previously used for the support of the filament. The output of Canada at the present time is perhaps the largest in the world.

AN INCIDENT OF 1812.

(Philadelphia Ledger.)

In this war Germany has time and time again destroyed the life of an American— all non-combatants of a neutral nation. The Academy of the Fine Arts in Philadelphia was the principal in an incident of the war of 1812, which shows how differently even an enemy then regarded personal property, let alone human lives of friendly powers. The Academy was bringing over from Italy twenty-one paintings and fifty-two engravings, which were a part of the Joseph Allen Smith collection, but a British cruiser captured the ship which was carrying these works of art to Philadelphia. The prize was taken to Halifax. Did England keep these Philadelphia treasures? She did not. Dr. Alexander Croke, in the Court of the Vice-Admiralty, delivered an eloquent decision in that case. "Heaven forbid," he exclaimed, "that such an application to the generosity of Great Britain should ever be ineffectual! The arts and sciences are considered not as the peculium of this or that nation, but as the property of mankind at large." And so England sent on these works of art to Philadelphia which her cruiser, then battling against the United States, had captured.

MARSHAL JOFFRE.

We like to read of Joffre's longing for peace and for the little farm in the Pyrenees. That sounds like Grant, like Lincoln, like Washington. None of these our great men were saturated in the war glamour. They were republican soldiers, making war because they must, for a great cause, and hoping it would bring them not glory but the consciousness of a service well done and a welcome return to the friendly preoccupations of peace.

Although Marshal Joffre has spent all his life at the trade of arms, we think of him as an illustrious servant of a free state and a citizen, like ourselves, who would be glad to turn his sword into a ploughshare and till his quiet acres in republican security and content.

Marshal Joffre is the sort of hero we understand and are glad to honour. He represents for us a republic reluctantly in arms, as our republic is. If he can sense behind the carrier of language the quality of our welcome he will feel at home in this foreign land.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

Inoculation For Love

By SADIE OLCOTT

Dr. Dinsmore had sent away the last patient from his morning consultation and was preparing to make his daily visits when his colored housemaid came in with a shamefaced look.

"What is it, Sue?"

"Mars Doctah," she said, "can you inoculate anybody with a sickness?"

"Certainly."

Sue looked in every direction except the doctor.

"Come," said the doctor, "there's something on your mind. Out with it."

"Well?" said the doctor, becoming interested.

"I hearn tell, too, dat long ago day was lub potions and if any one took de potion dey was in lub. I been thinkin' dat yo' might gib de disease that way somehow."

"You mean that you are in love and want me to make the man you love love you."

"It's about dat," Sue confessed in a voice scarcely audible.

"Whom are you in love with, Sue?"

"I don't like to tell dat. Can't yo' gib me de potion to gib to him?"

"No; I should have to manage the case myself. If you'll tell me his name perhaps I can do something for you."

"I reckon it's Sam."

"Mr. Trotter's Sam?"

"Yes, Mars Doctah."

The doctor's eyes expressed amusement, but he kept a straight face, although this was scarcely necessary, for Sue never once looked at him. Presently he went to a medicine case, took up a bottle and poured a little of its contents into a vial. Then, handing it to Sue, he said:

"The next time Sam comes to see you and asks for a drink of water or cider—in fact, anything to drink—pour some of this into it. It will make him sick. Appear to be much frightened and telephone for me."

"Yes, Mars Doctah, I do dat."

It was not long before the doctor was called upon to cure Sam of the effects of the dose Sue had given the man she loved. He examined his patient carefully and gave him something to settle his stomach, then, pricking his arm with a lancet, drew a little blood.

"Sam," he said, "I'm going to test this blood for the disease you've got. Come and see me tomorrow morning, and I'll tell you what it is."

The next morning Sam was perfectly well, but curiosity and fear drove him into Dr. Dinsmore's office. He was admitted in his turn, and when the physician had felt his pulse and tested his temperature with a mouth thermometer he looked very solemn.

"Sam," he said, "you're contracted a serious disease."

"Yo' do Lawd, Mars Doctah, is it going to kill me?"

"Not unless it drives you to suicide. In itself it is not fatal, but it sometimes drives persons to do very foolish things. It will on rare occasions throw the patient into a fever, a hysterical condition, in which he will act like a lunatic. You have a little of that symptom about you now."

"I'se askin', Mars Doctah: What yo' call dat disease?"

"Amoramania."

"How you know I got dat?"

The doctor took down a bottle from a shelf, put a drop of rainwater on a bit of glass, put the glass on a microscope and after adjusting a focus told Sam to look into the instrument. The darky saw a lot of monsters swimming about.

"Now, Sam," said the physician, "I don't wish to scare you, but you are looking at a drop of your own blood."

Sam collapsed, and the doctor held him up.

"All diseases nowadays, Sam, are caused by germs. These creatures are the germs of amoramania that have got into your blood. When a man falls in love with a woman they take possession of him and"—

"But I hain't in lub with any woman," protested Sam.

"I didn't say you were, Sam; at least you don't know it. The disease hasn't developed yet. When it does you'll find out that you are in love and no mistake. If there is no response to your love you'll suffer from a sort of lunacy."

"Yo' do Lawd!"

"There is a medical theory, Sam, that like cures like," continued Dr. Dinsmore. "I can take some of your blood and inject it into the veins of the woman you love"—

"But I hain't in lub."

"Yes, you are, Sam; you're in love with a good girl. As soon as these symptoms I have shown you develop—there's only a dozen now; in a few days there'll be a million—you'll have a regular attack of amoramania."

"What I do dem?" cried Sam, aghast.

"Unless your passion is returned you will act like a lunatic. They all do. Now, I'll tell you what I propose to do. I can inject some of your blood into the body of a nice girl. This will give her the disease and she'll love you desperately. Then we shall have a case of 'like cures like.'"

The next day Dr. Dinsmore called Sam and Sue together in his office and told them that they were both about to come down with a case of amoramania and they had better get married at once. Sue needed no persuasion, and Sam thought a marriage with Sue far better than a term in a lunatic asylum.

HARASSING THE HUNS.

"Winter Sports" of British Keep Enemy on the Jump.

The "winter sports" recently inaugurated by the British armies in the field are proceeding successfully, to the profound discomfort of the enemy, writes Percival Phillips in The London Chronicle. Although known technically as raids and minor attacks, the men taking part in them operations—while not considering them in any way amusing—prefer the lighter title which first became popular a year ago, in order to distinguish these local episodes of winter warfare from the more serious affairs which occupy them during a summer campaign.

We have had raids of all kinds, in all kinds of weather—raids by moonlight, raids in mud and rain, raids across a carpet of snow, raids through dense fog, and all of them successful. Some of them have been mere bombing excursions, others—like the fine exploit of the Canadians one night—elaborate kidnapping expeditions yielding a large bag of docile and contented prisoners. All of them harry the enemy in diverse and unforeseen ways. The Germans are unsettled by their frequency, and by the elasticity of our methods.

Accustomed as they are to the rigid and blind adherence to a routine policy, they cannot cope with a stream of surprise attacks which always surprise, and never fail. The nervous expectancy of their front line sentries is reflected at their corps and army headquarters. If a group of usually idle batteries behind our trenches suddenly open fire, the "jumpiness" of the enemy is speedily apparent, and his uncertainty as to the immediate future manifested by the aimless loosing of retaliatory guns and mortars, and the useless expenditure of carefully husbanded ammunition.

Outlook Keep Fair.

The German authorities, according to a Reuter despatch from Amsterdam, have issued a note advising the French Government of failing to comply, within the stipulated time limit, with the German demand that all prisoners of war should be withdrawn to places at least 10 miles from the firing line, and treated as French prisoners are treated in Germany. The Germans have accordingly brought back several thousands of French prisoners from Germany to the war zone.

In a series of official statements issued the French Government replies that German prisoners of war who had to be temporarily kept near the firing line were treated exactly as French soldiers themselves. This has been corroborated by the president of the International Red Cross. The French Government agreed to the German request that prisoners should be withdrawn, making the condition that Germany should treat French prisoners in precisely the same way.

The French Government further point out that, though this note was sent on Jan. 15, the Germans took the threatened measures on the 16th. Moreover, though the first German note was dated Dec. 6, and reached Paris on Jan. 5, French prisoners had been sent from Germany to the occupied French departments as long ago as Dec. 18.

Margins Are Shrinking.

Old High-Cost-of-Living creeps up on the man who is standing still; only the man who moves forward can keep even or ahead. The plain truth is that each year business is being done upon a constantly diminishing margin, and success depends upon increasing the volume of sales rather than upon trying by artificial means to increase the percentage of profit. —Electrical Merchandising.

A Fireproof Car.

The testing department of one Eastern railroad ignited 200 pounds of oil-soaked rags, shavings, and wood, to see the effect of the flames on the metal framework of a car. While the furnishings of the car were slightly damaged, the testing department found that the frame of the car resisted the heat.

Says Cream Applied in Nostrils Opens Air Passages Right Up.

Instant relief,—no waiting. Your clogged nostrils open right up; the air passages of your head clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffing, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath at night; your cold or catarrh disappears.

Get a small bottle of Elys Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic, healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen mucous membrane and relief comes instantly.

It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed-up with a cold or nasty catarrh.

Who Is Happy?

Let me repeat part of a conversation I had last night. Three men of us were talking and the subject was the percentage of happy marriages. The first speaker declared that about five marriages out of every hundred were happy. The other put the percentage at twenty-five. I said I believed that ninety-five out of every hundred marriages were happy. Each of us was true to the life he lived.

The first speaker belongs in the centre of the gayest whirl of the town. He sees humanity at its worst aspects, with unlimited money and no morals. The second man is a prosperous merchant, living in an uptown apartment house. His business obliges him to be on the road half the time, but he is earnest and sincere, and would like to believe differently about marriage.

I am a country physician in a little suburb of homes. The people I live among are true to the best and strongest instinct of humanity—the impulse toward home-making and funding a family. They come here because they want children and a house to live in, not a flat. The women are housekeepers and mothers, and are happy women. I can truly say, using that word in the general sense, which allows for the jar and friction incidental to adjustment to environment. So you see, while I may know but one side of life it is the important side, the side which has the contented, happy homes in it.

Sometimes I run across a little woman who thinks she's not understood and appreciated as she should be, or she wants a career—or both. I pat her on the shoulder and tell her to stick to home and the babies, and William, for in them she's got the cream of life. When she gets over her mood she is glad all her life that she did not break through the traces.

I find that women are inclined to believe that men have more to be contented with than they have, but I do not think that is true. A man takes comfort out of different things, that's all. Every time a woman draws her child to her and kisses it—though she may do it forty times a day—she feels a swelling of joy in her heart that is almost incomprehensible to a man. A man likes to kiss his children of course, but he does not get out of it the almost sacramental joy a woman does.

Then there are other matters—I'm not joking—which offers women immense comfort, such as getting up her preserves when fruit is cheap, and the weather is cool, or finding a bargain in household goods or wearing apparel.

Perhaps women do not realize when they are well off. Women have not tried the whole gamut of life, and learned to know, as men know, how little there is in the game outside of home and family. Women imagine there is something in that great world into which men plunge every day that would make them supremely happy. But there isn't.

Of the two sexes woman is perhaps more lacking in the appreciation of comfort—but it is a mistake to believe that man has either superior capacity or superior opportunities for enjoyment. That hasn't been my observation.

LIBERATED FRENCH TOWNS DECORATE STREETS IN HONOUR OF VICTORIOUS GENERAL

PARIS, May 21.—Notwithstanding the horrors of war which the recently liberated French towns and villages have tasted to the full durlof the past two and one-half years, they still find it possible to express the joy that has come with the return of the armies of France to their streets. One day last week the report spread through the little town of Noyon that General Nivelle was coming. The windows were immediately hung with flags and garlands. Crowds flocked into the streets. Suddenly a brass band was heard and a mass of blue tunics, a battalion of the 92nd Regiment, marched up the street. Above them, carried by a tall officer floats a tattered, dirty brown, half-burnt rag, its colors faded, its fringe half gone. Before this brave remnant of the colors of the 92nd Regiment the inhabitants drop in their knees.

Then hearty cheers go up. Noyon hails her liberators. The battalion goes on to the central square of the village. A motor-car draws up at the entrance to the square and General Nivelle gets out. The band strikes up the Marseillaise. Then there is a dead silence. A thrill of emotion runs through the crowd. The Deputy-Mayor, accompanied by some of the old men, steps forward. A little girl, with hair tied up in tri-colour ribbons presents a nosegay of flowers gathered in the town gardens. General Nivelle picks her up in his arms and embraces her tenderly.

After this touching little ceremony the General proceeds to the hospital, and amid the applause of those present, pins the War Cross on the serge dress of a Sister of Mercy who has rendered devoted service to the inhabitants during the thirty months' occupation.

HOW TO MAKE WHOLE WHEAT BREAD TOLD BY EXPERTS

Food experts, including Herbert S. Hoover, have advocated the use of whole wheat bread as against the loaf made from white flour. With flour at $20 a barrel it is impossible for the bakers to turn out white bread at the price demanded a year ago. The smallest loaf now sells for 10 cents. Not only is that an increase in the price but the loaf is smaller.

Aside from the question of the cost of living, food experts have stated that whole wheat bread is more nutritious than the bread made from white flour and for that reason alone should be popular among the housewives and in restaurants.

That some of the most prominent baking concerns have few good words to say for whole wheat bread goes without question. It means less profit. For the most part the big bakeries have contracts for flour with flour concerns or millers. The contracts have to be fulfilled. Heretofore the cost of living has not hit the consumer so hard and avenues of escape from overcharges have not been so eagerly sought. The miller and the baker know that a country-wide movement toward whole wheat bread would hit their pocketbooks.

At Fischer's Restaurant, No. 632 Sixth avenue, New York, whole wheat bread has been an institution for some time. Fischer's chef in giving his recipe, provided for 16 loaves, and the individual will have to divide the recipe by 16 to get to one loaf. Following is Fischer's recipe:

Sixteen pounds of whole wheat flour, 16 level teaspoonfuls (four oz.) salt, 8 ounces of brown sugar, 8 ounces of shortening, 1 ounce yeast, 5¼ quarts of water (part warm to dissolve the yeast.)

Sift into a mixing bowl the flour and the salt. Make a hole in centre and add the sugar and shortening. Add a quart or two of warm water to dissolve the sugar and the shortening. Stir up the centre into a thin batter to receive the yeast. Dissolve the yeast in warm water and pour into centre. In cold weather allow to stand for ten minutes or until gas bubbles are developed. Add the remainder of water and mix. Let dough stand for about three hours, with temperature 70 to 90 degrees Fahrenheit.

Put dough on floured bench, dust and work into shape for handling. Scale off dough into lumps or 27 or 30 ounces each. Fold or work into shape to suit the pan. That should be done quickly so as to have as little difference in time as possible between the moulding of the first and last loaf.

Cover pans and let stand from fifteen to thirty minutes same temperature. Bake with rather slow oven for one and one half hours or more.

Other recipes for which whole wheat bread, rolls, corn bread and bran gems were given as follows by Mrs. Frank Perkins, head of the domestic science department of the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences. She said that they were being used extensively by the housewives of Brooklyn in their efforts to combat the high cost of living by curtailing the use of white flour. The recipes follow:

For rolls or bread: Sift one quarter gluten, whole wheat or graham flour; one teaspoon salt, one scant teaspoon soda, two tablespoons baking powder.

Mix with one half cup molasses and one and a half cups sour milk; bake in loaf for half an hour. Dough may be softer for rolls or muffins. A cup of nuts or raisins may be added at the option of the housewife.

Corn bread: Two cups corn meal, two cups sour milk, two tablespoons butter, two tablespoons sugar, two eggs, one tablespoon soda, one tablespoon cold water.

Mix corn meal, sour milk, butter, sugar and salt and cook for ten minutes. When mixture is cool add eggs well beaten and soda dissolved in the water. Bake 30 minutes in moderate oven.

Bran gems: One well beaten egg, two teaspoons sugar, half cup milk, one teaspoon baking powder, one-third teaspoon salt, one tablespoon melted butter, one half cup of whole wheat flour, one cup of bran. Mix and cook in hot gem pans.

Another recipe which does not completely eliminate white flour, but reduces the amount necessary for turning out the loaf, is as follows:

Boil down a good sized potato to a jelly, and let it cool. Add sufficient water to make total bulk a quart. Add cake of compressed yeast dissolved in cup of luke warm water. Put in bread mixer with a tablespoon of lard, small piece of salt, tablespoon of sugar and about two quarts of flour, putting in the flour last. Mix for three to five minutes. Leave to raise over night, and mass should double in size. That will make four good sized loaves of 16 ounces each.

New Vigour and Strength For The Run-Down System

More Proof That Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is Accomplishing Great Good in This City—Many More Cures Reported

PETERBOROUGH, Ont., March 19.—In the most simple and natural way imaginable this food cure is restoring to health and vigor people who have been ailing for years and apparently getting no lasting benefits from the medicines used. Here is the reason:

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is composed of the elements from which Nature forms new, rich blood and thereby nourishes the cells and tissues of the body. By supplying these elements in condensed and easily assimilated form so that the most delicate digestive system can make use of them, the Nerve Food brings health and strength to the weak and suffering.

It works in a different method to most medicines, and as a result the benefits obtained are both thorough and lasting.

Mrs. John Roach, 831 Elm St., Peterborough, Ont., writes: "About four years ago, I received splendid results from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I had been troubled with nervous debility, sleeplessness, and my system was run down generally. At times the pain in the top of my head was unbearable; and I also had severe pains across my kidneys. There would be nights and nights that I could not sleep. I had tried many remedies as well as doctor's medicine, without their doing me any good. A friend recommended Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to me, so I secured some and commenced using it. Finding myself benefitted, I kept on using them until I got better. Before long I could eat and sleep well, and my headache was all gone. I have recommended Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to many friends, as I think there is nothing better for nervousness or run down system."

Mrs. J. Riedeman, 165 Adeline St., Peterborough, Ont., writes:—"I was troubled with nervous headaches, which, at times were so severe that I could not do my work. I also suffered from indigestion and pains in the back. From reading in the newspapers of the benefits other people were deriving from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I was encouraged to try it. I began using them, finding good results from the beginning; so I continued the treatment until I obtained great benefit. Now I do not have the nervous headaches so frequently or so severe. My appetite is much better, and in fact, I am better in many respects. I would not wish to be without Dr. Chase's Nerve Food in the house now. I have recommended this treatment to many of my friends, who also find good results from their use.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

GIRL'S REDINGOTE DRESS.

By Anabel Worthington.

Any girl would smile her satisfaction at having a dress like the one in this illustration. It has the effect of the coat dress for which there has been a marked predilection this season among grown-ups. A "very artful designer" decided that to have a truly girlish redingote the two gore skirt should be separate and the plain waist and two piece tunic joined together—the picture proves the success of the plan. The neck finish is with a handsome square cut collar, that may be of velvet, satin or silk in a shade that matches the material of the dress; wrist length sleeves are cuffed to correspond, and a tie is an attractive addition. A two piece belt of dress material covers the joining of waist and tunic. As are the models for older girls and women, this one is made with a raised waistline. The edges of the tunic may have a braid finish or be bound with satin.

A very charming frock may be developed in velvet, broadcloth or satin, trimmed with fur; a serviceable and pretty dress can be developed along these lines in serge, gabardine or similar fabric, with braid to trim.

This is a dress very easy to make—it requires little fitting, merely needing adjusting at the waistline—and with every piece of the pattern named and marked success can be counted upon by an amateur.

The dress pattern, No. 8,123, cuts in sizes 8-12 years. To make in size 10 requires 4¼ yards 36 inch material and ⅝ yards contrasting goods.

To obtain the pattern send [illegible] to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

"I have received a telegram from Northwestern University stating that many volunteers have offered to take the places of Mm. Tyrrs, Miss Woods and Miss Maiden. I have not knowledge of when our unit will again leave."

Major C. C. Collins, military commander of the unit, said that no damage had been done to the vessel and that the morale of the unit was not in the least impaired.

Supporters of the defective ammunition theory point to the fact that the vessel returned as a complete proof of their arguments. They say that the ship would not have turned back because of the death of the nurses alone and express the opinion that the officer in charge of the guns informed the commander of the vessel that his ammunition was defective and refused to risk the lives of passengers and crew by attempting to fire another shot.

DYSPEPSIA

MOST DIFFICULT TO CURE BUT B. B. B. DOES IT

Dyspepsia is one of the most difficult diseases of the stomach there is to cure.

You eat too much; drink too much; make the stomach work overtime. You make it perform more than it should be called on to do. The natural result is that it is going to rebel against the amount of work put on it. It is only a matter of time before dyspepsia follows.

That forty-year-old remedy, Burdock Blood Bitters, will cure the dyspepsia, and will cure it to stay cured as we can prove by the thousands of testimonials we receive from time to time.

Mr. Neil A. Cameron, Kiltarlity, N. S., writes: "I am writing you a few lines to tell you what your great medicine Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. I was troubled very much with dyspepsia for the past two years. I was recommended all kinds of medicines, but they did not help me any. At last a friend advised me to try a bottle of B.B.B. I took four bottles and was totally cured. I will gladly recommend it to all sufferers."

Market Reacted Towards the Close — The Cattle Market

CHICAGO, May 23.—Future delivery trade in wheat yesterday was reduced to scanty dealings in a single option, September. No business was done in the July delivery, and it was said that soon under existing arbitrary rules, all transactions for future delivery of wheat were likely to come to an automatic stop. The market that is the September wheat delivery, opened yesterday morning 3 cents higher, owing to absence of offerings, but afterward reacted two cents, starting at 2.18 and falling back to 2.11.

The Cattle Markets.

The cattle and hog markets were very nearly at a standstill yesterday. The buyers were not inclined to take even the extra choice offerings except at bargain prices. This condition is largely due to the heavy runs which the market has had to absorb during the past ten days. About 400 head of cattle were held over from the previous night. The prices offered are nearly a dollar lower than they were early last week.

The hog buyers were offering from 25 to 40 cents less than last week and they were not overly anxious to buy at that price. A few very choice hogs cashed in for $17.10, but the buyers refused to pay more than $17 for the average run.

The calf market was active with prices a fraction higher.

The few sheep offered were bought up at about last week's prices.

WESTERN GROWN POTATOES AS SEED

For some reason the impression is abroad that potatoes grown in Western Canada are not suitable for seed in Ontario or the east. Apparently this belief is not based on facts, for in this regard W. T. Macoun, Dominion Horticulturist, writes:

"Our experience with the potato seed from the Prairie Provinces of Canada has been uniformly good. As a rule, seed potatoes from there yield much better than seed of the same varieties grown in the central parts of the Province of Ontario, although it is quite likely that seed from Northern Ontario would be just as good. I think the reason that the impression has got abroad that Western seed is not good is the fact that the quality of the potatoes grown in the Province of Ontario, as the potatoes do not ripen up so well on the Prairies, but it is this immature seed which is of so much stronger vitality than the potatoes which ripen up very early in the season in Ontario.

Prof. Zavits of the Ontario Agriculture College, writing on this point says that the results of planting Western potato seeds are quite varied, some receiving good results and some poor. He thinks, however, that if the variety is a good one and the seed healthy that the result should be satisfactory.

THE JOY OF MOTHERHOOD

Words of Encouragement to Childless Women.

Motherhood is woman's natural destiny, but many women are denied the happiness of children simply because of some curable derangement.

Among the many triumphs of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is its marvelous power to overcome such derangements, as evidenced by the following letter:—

Worcester, Mass.—"I suffered from female ills, and was advised to have an operation, but a friend who had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and who has six children, told me to try it. It has helped me so much that I am now well and have a baby boy who is the picture of health, and I thank the Vegetable Compound for my restoration to health."—Mrs. BERT GARVEY, 20 Hacker St., Worcester, Mass.

In many other homes, once childless, there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.

Write to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass., for advice—it will be confidential.

FRENCH FORCES COMPLETELY DOMINATE THE AILETTE VALLEY

General Nivelle's Resumed Offensive Wins Fresh Ground in Three Violent Attacks. Three German Lines of Trenches Are Captured East of Chevreux. Little Infantry Fighting on British Front, But Heavy Bombardment Is Announced by General Haig. Hungarian Minister Resigns.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

Special to The Examiner:

PARIS (French Official), May 23.—General Nivelle's resumed offensive to-day won for the French forces complete domination of the Ailette Valley the capturing of three German lines of trenches east of Chevreux, and other advances on the sector from the Plateau of Vauclerc to Californie. The French official statement detailed the offensive as being thus successfully prosecuted in three violent attacks at different parts of this front. "The attacks were most successful," the statement says. "From the Plateau Vauclerc to Californie, the French captured all commanding points dominating the Ailette Valley, and also achieved splendid progress on the northern slopes. In the region east of Chevreux, we captured three German lines of trenches in the course of the night and smashed a German counter-attack on the position by heavy fire, the enemy losing heavily. Three hundred and fifty prisoners were taken. Around Eparges a German attack failed."

(By Stewart Lyon, Special Correspondent of the Canadian Press.)

CANADIAN HEADQUARTERS IN FRANCE (via London), May 22.—Several minor operations have been carried out on the Canadian left front, in the vicinity of the Electric Station, to the southwest of Lens, which, in the aggregate, have resulted in a considerable gain of ground by our men on the most difficult part of the line. These small advances are equivalent to stealing a base in a closely contested ball game.

In the tangle of railway embankments, pit mouths, miners' houses and heaps of shale, through which the Canadians must advance, a regularly defined front line trench, properly wired, is almost impossible. The enemy creates defensive positions with tireless energy, and from our point of view the German wire is enough of an obstacle to our advance without adding a Canadian strip of wire to it. Our men put outposts into "No Man's Land" and the forward positions of the enemy and steal the ground by night surprise attacks. A number of houses in which German snipers had quarters were taken in a rush, and our outposts now occupy saps south of the Electric Station.

ELABORATE DUGOUTS.

Through the deep sunken road cut into the chalk here there has been much hand-to-hand fighting in the labyrinth of little trenches and saps on both sides of the road. Many bodies still lie in "No Man's Land." Recent advances along a trench end by a British Columbia regiment at the south of the Congress Executive meeting on conscription:

I have visited a dugout behind this front. It is the most remarkable one on this Western line. The ceiling is beautifully panelled in the Dutch fashion, with varnished oak walls, and they have a similar finish in darker colors. The place, which is twenty-five feet underground, looks like a particularly snug library, and a piano in one corner adds to the illusion. This dugout has many passages and sleeping compartments. At the rear is a passage in the form of a chimney from the surface.

HUNGARIAN MINISTRY HAS THROWN UP THE SPONGE.

Special to The Examiner:

AMSTERDAM, May 23.—Count Tisza's Ministry has resigned, according to Budapest despatches received here to-day, by the Central News.

There have been frequent rumours of late of friction in the Hungarian Cabinet, responding to the unrest in Hungary and progress of the peace movement. Count Stephen Tisza has been Privy Councillor and President of the Council—as the Hungarian Cabinet is called—since 1913.

LONDON, May 23.—Another lull seemed to prevail on the British front to-day. Field Marshal Haig's report indicated heavy German bombardments of positions on the Hindenburg line firmly held by the British, with a return of British shells, but otherwise only isolated fighting. "Around Bullecourt throughout the evening and night our positions on the Hindenburg line were heavily bombarded," the statement says. "Our artillery replied vigorously. No hostile attack developed. Southeast of Gavrelle early this morning, we carried out a successful raid. A number of Germans were killed. Our forces returned without casualties. North of Armentieres we took a few prisoners as a result of patrol encounters at various points."

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, May 23. — The conquest by the French of the northern slopes of Moronvilliers' crest between Mount Cornillet and Casque ended all hope of the Germans for an offensive in this sector. Such an attack had been planned for Tuesday morning, with the object of regaining the top of this crest. Great forces of German reserves were massed in expectation for this advance. The Germans brought up new guns and great stores of ammunition, so the prisoners said. The French struck a sudden unexpected blow, took the northern slopes in front of the crest, and threw the Germans still further back. The fury of the French attack was sufficient to hurl back all these concentrated German forces, but their very concentrations permitted the enemy to strike back in violently prepared counter thrusts. For two days now these great counter attacks have been surging back and forth. At some places they have forced a slight giving of ground. But to-day the French retain all their important gains and while here and there still forging ahead. Early to-day all remaining portions of Cornillet were consolidated—including an immense tunnel which the Germans had laboriously dug out under the mount.

PETROGRAD, May 23.—The first congress of delegates of officers of the army and navy now met at headquarters here to-day. More than 1,400 delegates attended. General Alexieff (Commander-in-Chief of the army, addressing the congress, recalled cries of alarm, such as:—"The country is in danger," which had been heard in recent days, and said: There is good reasons for these cries, and the combativeness of the army has noticeably decreased in consequence of dissension and mistrust between officers and men. The Russian army, which was so formidable yesterday, is stricken to-day with fatal impotency, and that too in the face of terrible and tenacious enemy who is stretching out his eager hand toward the provinces of South Russia, and is enriching himself with the provinces already invaded. General Alexieff exhorted the delegates to use their utmost efforts as soon as they rejoin their regiments to terminate internal quarrels in the army, restore vanished discipline, and try in every way possible to closely reunite officers and soldiers, and make them again capable of marching to victory. Without which, he declared, the welfare of Russia was impossible.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES ON THE CHAMPAGNE FRONT, May 23.—General Nivelle's new offensive begun Sunday and is thunderously continuing, forestalled a gigantic German counter offensive move. Prisoners from German lines revealed the enemy plans to-day. Their explanations threw light on the tremendous power behind the recent German

ANTI-CONSCRIPTION DEMONSTRATION IS EXPECTED TO-MORROW

Parade in Montreal Against High Cost of Living To Be Turned Into An Agitation Against Compulsory Military Service.

HULL PEOPLE PROTEST

Special to The Examiner:

MONTREAL, Que., May 23. — To-morrow, Victoria Day, will quite likely show to what extent Montreal is opposed to conscription. On Monday a monster parade as a protest against the cost of living was announced for to-morrow, but now it looks as if it will be turned into an anti-conscription demonstration. This morning the city was flooded with hand bills in French and in English calling attention to the parade and asking people to turn out en masse. No one stands sponsor for bills which state "Down with conscription, people wake up, let us change the government," and the like. Yesterday there was born a new association which calls itself, "the Constitutionalists." It is behind the meeting called for to-night in Lafontaine park, and another called for Thursday night near Mayor Martin's home. Another meeting of protest called for to-night is that of the serial Democratic party. At Hull last night between twelve and fifteen hundred people attended a meeting to protest against putting into effect the Militia Act.

NEW ZEALAND PARTY NOW IN OTTAWA

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, May 23.—Right Hon. W. E. Massey, Premier of New Zealand, and Rt. Hon. Jos. Girard, High Commissioner in London for New Zealand, arrived in Ottawa to-day and are guests of the Government. Premier Massey had a lengthy conference with Sir Robert Borden this morning.

MANY CHICKS SOLD AS A RESULT OF POULTRY ADDRESS

The meeting recently held in the Council Chamber to arouse interest in poultry production, has been followed by material results that should be fully realised next winter. Mr. Archie Brault of the Peterborough Poultry Association, stated this morning that he had sold or had been a party to the sale of four hundred chicks. He had directed other buyers to poultrymen and for that reason could not estimate the actual number sold. At any rate the advice to citizens to raise chickens this year has already had a fine response and the movement has not yet ended. Prospective buyers are advised to call at Mr. Brault's barber shop on Simcoe street. He can put them in touch with men who have supplies of chicks. The prices have been ranging from fifteen to twenty-five cents each. From other sources it is learned that some poultry men have contracted to sell chicks that have not yet been hatched. One man has an incubator working to capacity and has been unable to fill all the orders he had recently received.

TWENTY YEARS THE MINIMUM

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, May 23.—It was officially announced this afternoon that 20 years of age would be the minimum age at which compulsion will be enforced.

DIED OF WOUNDS.

Pte. Percy M. Brew, late 93rd Battalion, Peterborough.

WOUNDED.

Pte. S. H. Carpenter, late 93rd Battalion, Peterborough.

Pte. Albert Millgate, late 93rd Battalion, Peterborough.

Pte. J. E. Gallagher, late 93rd Battalion, Peterborough.

Pte. Samuel John Curtis, late 93rd Battalion, 25 Cricket Place.

PTE. J. D. H. WISKIN.

Pte. James Delbert Harry Wiskin, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, is officially reported killed in action, the tragic news reaching his wife at 276 Thomas street to-day in an official message from the officer in charge of Records at Ottawa, which was delivered to her by Adjutant McElhiney. Pte. Wiskin before donning the khaki was employed at the Canadian General Electric Company. He enlisted with the 93rd Battalion here in May last shortly before the Peterborough Battalion left for Barriefield on the first stage of its journey towards the front. His death is mourned by a wife and four children.

CORP. H. C. WHITE.

Mrs. White, Cambridge street, has received some further particulars in regard to her son, Corp. H. C. White, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, who was on Monday reported wounded. She had not heard that her son was in the casualty list until she read it in Monday's Examiner. A wire to the officer in charge of Records at Ottawa has elicited the information that Corp. White has been admitted to the London County War Hospital, Epsom, on May 14, suffering from gun-shot wounds in the right arm and left leg.

RUSH IN LONDON.

LONDON, May 23.—The announcement by Sir Robert Borden of conscription has caused a rush of young men to the recruiting offices here. Yesterday more men presented themselves for enrollment than in any day of the last year. Nearly 80 applied and virtually everyone passed the medical tests. This morning more than a dozen were in line when the recruiting office opened. Reports from throughout the military district show a great speeding up in recruiting since Friday. London's quota of men would be in the neighborhood of 800, and if the present rush continues there will be very few to conscript when the time comes.

PTE. S. H. CARPENTER

Pte. Samuel Henry Carpenter, of Peterborough, who enlisted here in February 1916 with the 93rd Battalion is officially reported wounded, his name being given out with the list from Ottawa yesterday. Pte. Carpenter was a member of the Signallers of the 93rd when he went overseas. His home address is 225 Euclid Ave.

SCORE JOIN IN HAMILTON

HAMILTON, May 23.—Twenty young men volunteered for Overseas service yesterday. This is the largest number offered for some time. Apparently they are seeking to be enrolled before conscription becomes effective.

PTE. PERCY M. BREW.

Pte. Percy M. Brew, who enlisted here with the 93rd Battalion in November of 1915, and went overseas with the Peterborough County unit, afterwards being transferred to another Canadian battalion in France, is officially reported to have died of wounds. Pte. Brew was born in England, but had lived in this district for a number of years and had many friends who will be grieved to learn of his death. He was a member of B Company of the 93rd. His relatives are in England.

PTE. S. J. CURTIS.

Mrs. Curtis, 25 Cricket Place, received official word from Ottawa this morning that her husband, Pte. Samuel John Curtis, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, was admitted to the Canadian Stationary Hospital at Boulogne, on May 14th, suffering from a severe gun shot wound. Pte. Curtis, who is a son of Mr. W. Curtis, Downie street, was employed as a driver by the Canadian Express Company before he enlisted with the 93rd Battalion, in March of last year. He is very well known in the city.

PTE. ALBERT MILLGATE.

Pte. Albert Millgate, who enlisted here in the 93rd Battalion in October, 1915, is officially reported wounded. Pte. Millgate went overseas as a member of B Company of Lieut.-Col. Johnston's unit and was afterwards transferred to another battalion at the front. He was employed as a farm labourer before enlisting. His relatives live in England, where Pte. Millgate was born, coming to Canada a number of years ago.

PTE. J. E. GALLAGHER.

Pte. J. E. Gallagher who enlisted in the 93rd Battalion in February of last year, is another in the long list of casualties in the ranks of Lieut.-Col. Johnston's unit. To-day's official list from Ottawa announces that Pte. Gallagher has been wounded in the recent fighting. His next-of-kin resides in Herschel, Sask.

OTTAWA, May 22—One outcome of the announcement that conscription will be put into effect has been a rush to the colors of eligible young men. Reports to the effect that there has been a big jump in recruiting came to Ottawa from all parts of Canada. Fifty men were attested at the Ottawa recruiting depot yesterday as compared with 116 for the two weeks previous.

LINDSAY, May 22.—John Guyatt, who deserted from the 253rd Battalion in Lindsay on March 30, and who was apprehended on May 17th, came up before His Worship Magistrate J. Bradford for sentence this morning at 9:30 o'clock.

Crown Attorney Stinson appeared for the Crown and read the law regarding the penalty for deserting, which is a term not exceeding two years in prison. The young man pleaded guilty and put in a claim that he never agreed to be vaccinated when he signed up, and consequently would not be taken overseas. He positively refused to go back to his battalion though remonstrated with by the magistrate to do so and given every chance to consider his best course to pursue. The young deserter was as adamant in his views and accepted six months in the Ontario reformatory rather than give in. He has a mother living at 119 Pauline avenue, Toronto, and his father is serving at the front, and was born in London, Eng.

A Correction.

In connection with the report of the death in action of Lieut. J. H. Hannaford, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, the Examiner stated yesterday that the young officer was the nephew of Mrs. Roy. The paragraph should have read "nephew of Mrs. M. A. May, Grand Central Apartments."

The 74th Battery continues to take on recruits. This morning the Peterborough artillery unit signed on two Peterborough boys, Joseph Feeley and George Whitehead, the former an employee of the Peterborough Radial Railway Company. Five recruits from North Bay and two from Shawville have also been taken on the strength and last week's good record for the Peterborough battery promises to be surpassed this week. Major Crocker left this morning for Kingston to arrange for the departure of the battery to Camp Petawawa. Lieut. A. R. MacLaren will be in charge of the local recruiting office.

Special to the Examiner:

OTTAWA, May 23.—It is said to-day that Government will embody in its conscription bill, provisions that those enrolled shall for present be divided into two classes, one for home defence, the other for overseas duty. The defence army would include men of under twenty, with the guarantee that these will not be sent overseas until twenty one. In the meantime they would be receiving military training. It is understood that the Government has found a strong current of opinion hostile to the conscription of men under twenty years of age.

CONSCRIPT WEALTH AND LAND AS WELL

GUNNER ROBERT ARTHURS —A Peterborough boy who enlisted in Toronto and is now at the front with the 33rd Battery, C.F.A.

Liberals Urge That Accumulated Wealth Interested in Mortgages and Securities and Land Held for Speculative Purposes Be Conscripted by Taxation

"SILVER BULLETS" NEEDED

OTTAWA, May 22. — Liberalism made its appeal to the Government in Parliament to-day for a large conscriptive programme in the cause of winning the war. Premier Borden's announcement that the flesh and blood of the nation was to be called to service is backed by the Liberal demand that accumulated wealth invested in mortgages and securities, and that land held for unproductive and speculative purposes by railways and individuals, shall likewise be conscripted by adequate war taxation. Hon. George P. Graham, who led in the demand, made a strong case for the backing of Canada's soldier boys with "silver bullets." He pointed out that wealthy capitalists, with their money invested in mortgages and securities escaped Sir Thomas White's war-time taxation by the Minister's failure to assess incomes; while the taxation of vacant land held for speculation would not alone add to the war treasury, but would also aid production and assist in solving the railway problem. But the plea found the Minister of Finance unreceptive.

Profits Wrung From People's Needs

Backing Hon. Mr. Graham's appeal came that of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. Dr. Pugsley, who called for public production of the figures of excessive war profits which were derived by firms and institutions trafficking in foodstuffs—"undue profits," as Sir Wilfrid Laurier feelingly described them, "out of the needs of the people, yes, out of the hunger of the people."

Sir Thomas White made the announcement, during the day's discussion in committee of the budget resolutions, that he had no more tariff legislation to introduce this session.

He also intimated, in response to questions from Mr. E. M. Macdonald, that any shipbuilding legislation contemplated would be brought down in the ordinary way. Referring to shipbuilding contracts being now awarded in Canada, the Minister said they were given by the Imperial Munitions Board for the Imperial government. A representative of the British Minister of Shipping had looked into matters in Canada and determined upon the design of ship. All that the government had done was to supply a credit of $10,000,000 under the exchange agreement made with the Imperial Government.

Generally Felt Inequitable.

Hon. Geo. P. Graham stated that many representations had been made to him concerning the business tax. He had not found a man who was unwilling to pay his tax, but there was a general conviction that it was inequitable. In the readjustment period after the war many firms felt that they would find themselves in a serious plight. It was claimed that the tax fell too heavily on industrial concerns. Mr. Graham maintained that heavy taxation could not be imposed upon agricultural production. The farmer must

EVIDENCE OF THE PLOT TO DESTROY WELLAND CANAL

One Hundred and Eighty-five Sticks of Dynamite and Sixty Yards of Fuse Found in Barn on Canadian Side.

SCHEME WAS FOILED

Special to The Examiner:

BUFFALO, N.Y., May 23.—The discovery of 185 sticks of dynamite and sixty yards of fuse in a barn on the Canadian side of the river, opposite this city, is believed to be part of the plot to blow up the Welland canal locks, which was scotched by U. S. secret service men and Scotland yard detectives in April 1916. A. B. Knowlton, who leased the farm, uncovered the explosives yesterday in clearing up a hay mow.

BOYS' INGENUITY BUILDS AN AERIAL SHELTER IN GROVE

The influence of "Swiss Family Robinson" is evident in an aerial shelter a number of boys have built in a tree in Wallis' Grove on Ald. Langford's estate, west of the city. Whoever the boys are, and they are probably Boy Scouts, there is a genius in their midst. They selected a clump of cedars and other trees, the possibilities of which must have been apparent only to an exceptional boy. About fifteen feet above the ground they laid the floor of their shelter, practically level on poles cut from cedar trees that fitted naturally and securely on the limbs of four trees in rectangular position. On the floor they laid a carpet of pine needles, they built up two sides, and finally put on a roof, completing their "front home" with an efficiency in which the boys might well pride themselves. The lookout is strategically located among a clump of trees and the limbs of one of them provide the stairs. Ald. Langford discovered the youngsters one day and his estimating eye must have admired the boys' skill. At the same time he has tempting fences on the property, which he warned the youngsters not to touch. Moreover, trees must not be cut down or injured in anyway. Wallis' Grove is a favourite haunt of many citizens who are permitted to frequent it, providing they conduct themselves properly and do not injure the property. Ald. Langford is generally known as a contractor, and, in the Council, a civic economist, but there is another side of his character, a Wordworthian love of the fields and woods. It was this predilection that probably prompted the purchase of the Wallis property, which is to many other citizens, a natural beauty spot.

TUESDAY, MAY 22, 1917

THE DAY.

The weather will have to reform rapidly if we have "queen's weather" for the ninety-eighth anniversary of the birth of "Victoria the Good." Though Victoria has long since passed to her rest, she still lives in the hearts of all British men, women and children, and in the hearts of all who cherish memories of the highest embodiment of virtuous womanhood and wise and benign exercise of royal authority. She was every inch a woman and every inch a queen, and it is no wonder we revere her memory and make her birthday forever hallowed in the calendar. If we would follow her example as a woman and a mother; if monarchs would imitate her stainless and wise regin, our world and the world at large would be better.

The government is so anxious to impress the need of economy, that it compels economy by keeping food prices so high we cannot waste by buying and eating too much.

CONSCRIPTION.

Conscription so far is merely an abstract idea. Its usefulness, its fairness and its justification all depend upon the form and manner of its application. If it is applied fairly to rich and poor, Grit and Tory alike, then the authorities will be practicing what we are fighting for—fair play and honest dealing. But if the partisan policy that has obtained so far in this war, in officering recruit units, in wasting money on supernumerary officers and making the furnishing of war supplies a matter of party patronage in telling returned soldiers that they must join Conservative ward associations to get in line for employment is still to the fore; if the old methods are to be applied to conscription, and unsatisfactory results heart-burnings, destruction of unity, and death to national co-operation; and the last state will be worse than the first.

Will the government be able to do the right thing? Can it break away from its old habits? Has it the right cabinet timber? Some members of the government's own party think the government should be relieved from the Aremchem and sent back for a 'rest;' Mr. W. F. McLean, of South York, editor of the Toronto World, thinks there should be a reorganization of the government. They shook the British government up three times before; they got a "win-the-war" cabinet. Does our government inspire the universal confidence of the country? It is getting criticism on all hands—from Burnham, of Peterborough, to Cockshutt of Brantford; from McLean, of York, to Taylor of Westminster, B.C., all good Tory members. Is the government, as constituted,—a melange of Nationalists and "Ovangistes"—an outfit able to inspire public confidence? If the British government, composed of some of the best statesmen in the world, needed a shaken-up or two, should there not be the substitution of a new government, that would combine the best statesmanship, the highest executive energy free from party ties, be the best to handle recruiting and give energetic war administration? Such a government need fear no party kicks; it could do the right thing, and as long as it did right, defy the carper and the critic.

Build the high-level bridge and charge it to over-head expenses, one of the necessary burdens of a well-equipped business.

A POINT OF HONOUR.

Many, and even all, self-respecting Canadians wondered, why Sir Robert Borden selected Hon. Robert Rogers as his bosom travelling companion in his recent journeyings in the Old Country. It was an imperial pilgrimage, taken in the interest of coordinating Canada's and Britain's share in the war for the highest ideals of civilization, honour, stainless public life, high character, especially in public men. It was fitting that the personnel of the embassy should correspond with the ideals, so that in respect of Canada's insistence upon the elevation of ideals, we should not be met by the reproach, "physician, heal thyself." Of course the fact has become proverbial that Hon. Robert Rogers as a politician, has not a reputation that invites the employment of the driven snow as a simile. He has a malodorous reputation in connection with certain government contracts and the application of public moneys to spread of the knowledge of "how to win elections," from which he has not been purged, a circumstance that, in the eyes of some puritans, as they may be called, does not make him a seemly representative of Canada at the Court of the Sovereign, or a creditable representative of Canada in a group of Imperial statesmen, in which the slightest touch of stain is a damning disqualification.

Sir Robert has evidently a sense of the fitness of things. He selected Hon. Mr. Rogers to take up with the Home authorities the question of the British embargo. Canadian cattle are embargoed because of a belief or excuse that they are diseased—and to British caution, as sensitive to possible physical infection as it is in regard to honour in its public men thus justifies its exclusion of Canadian cattle. "Mr. Rogers, at my request" took the matter up with the British authorities, and Sir Robert's fine sense of selection doubtless helped matters. Mr. Rogers was an argument in himself for relaxation of the embargo. He could argue that the excuse for exclusion—that Canadian stock was physically diseased—lost force in face of the fact that a politico-morally diseased Canadian statesman was freely admitted under the cachet of the Prime Minister, admitted to the King's presence and allowed to mingle on equal terms of honourable standing with irreproachable British and Canadian statesmen, who had no dark political past.

Seriously, as adversity brings strange bed-fellows; political expediency and partisanship or a "hold" living about associations and retain official associations that are no credit to Canada, even if held in abeyance at home; but flaunted in the Court of the King, in the court of honour, are something that Canadian self-respect and the most intense party exigency cannot even excuse, let alone justify. We are fighting for honour and uprightness in public and private life.

When the member for West Peterborough criticises the Government, a local contemporary cannot consistently throw stones at its contemporaries for doing likewise.

THE HIGH LEVEL BRIDGE.

The proposed Hunter Street high-level bridge, has, when one thinks of it properly, a distinct relation to the high level to which the Greater Peterborough Association is aiming to bring the city. One of the chief needs is to make Peterborough an irresistible industrial centre of attraction.

To attract more industries we must be prepared to take a fair and liberal attitude towards industries; to keep faith when we have pledged our faith and to get a good name, by being liberal and fair-dealing with manufacturing industries.

Then when we have gained a good name, we can, with our site and power and transportation facilities draw new industries as the magnet attracts a needle, or, if it is big enough, an anchor.

We must show that we appreciate the value of, existing and prospective industries, for instance, the Quaker Oats industry, which has plans prepared and work begun for building a million and a half dollar group of factory buildings, high-level buildings, too, eight stories in height.

At the Greater Peterborough meeting, Tuesday night, Mr. W. H. Denham revealed the attitude of his company and other industries to the high-level bridge. He said the turning down of the bylaw would injure the rating of Peterborough in the industrial world. He was right. Location seeking industries, he said, would not look favourably on cities, that did not encourage the retention of existing industries. This is as much as to say that if the people of the city did not support the building of the bridge, it would be considered a breach of faith, and give the city a "black eye" among manufacturers.

Though not expressly stated, the building of the high-level bridge is virtually a condition of the company rebuilding here, and more; if the bridge is built or the by-law carried, the company will centre all its Canadian branches here, and build bigger. Mr. Denham said the Company had agreed to assemble all its departments in Peterborough provided the bridge was built.

If the company builds a million and a half dollar group of buildings, and more; if the by-law carries, surely the people can build a bridge, that will not cost much more, if any, than the pay roll of the Company in full operation, for one year, will leave in the city.

Especially, when we consider that we shall have to build a new bridge anyway, before long. The old bridge is due to fall of its own weight, plus a heavy load, almost any time soon. If we have to build a new bridge, which will cost a good many thousand dollars, why not add a few thousand dollars more and build on overhead bridge ,and secure advantages that will be many times worth the cost, that is to say:

(1) Secure and assume the location and operation here of all the Canadian departments of the Quaker Oats Company in Canada.

(2) Secure and assure the commercial and employment-giving advantages of the circulation in the city of an immense pay-roll, by a company that is noted for paying good wages and treating its employees generously and fairly; like men and women.

(3) Avoid the danger of the deadly level Hunter street crossings, which will be greater, the greater the increase of the Company's business.

(4) Have a splendid highway uniting the city and permitting street railway extension—on the level.

(5) Keep the Quaker Oats Company here. Keep faith with them, and get a good name for fair play, good faith that will attract new industries.

(6) Give Peterborough the benefit of the world-wide advertising implied in having the biggest and best cereal plant in the world.

As Mr. J. J. Hartley said on Tuesday night the Quaker Oats has advertised Peterborough the world over. We must remember the advertisement value we already owe the company. The London (England) Mirror, a daily illustrated paper, gave a page to the picture of the Quaker Oats fire, and it will give another to a cut of the new buildings if we send them a photograph.

Quaker Oats and Peterborough go linked together, in shop and office; in hotel and home, all over the world.

In this overhead bridge matter we must keep faith and have faith. If we are to grow large, prosperous and great, we must lay the foundation in great industries, more and more of them.

We won't get them if we draw into one shell and show that we are afraid to throw a sprat to catch a whale.

And the government are going to force men to fight for a country with a climate like this.

BALLOT ONLY FAIR WAY

New Zealand Man Tells How Conscription Works Out There.

TORONTO, May 22.—Mr. J. B. Clarkson of New Zealand was in Toronto to-day. "During the past six months they have been getting men by conscription," said he, "but by December they will have exhausted their single men, and will then be drawing on married men, firstly, those with small families. The system of calling up is by ballot and such members as to meet monthly necessary reinforcements.

"In spite of the shortage of manpower the production of the fruitage of the country is keeping up well, and although at times it is difficult to get ships, we have not yet materially suffered under this heading.

"Although Australia has not yet brought in conscription, she has sent 365,000 men out of a population of 5,000,000 men. We in New Zealand feel that conscription by ballot is the only fair manner of raising an army sufficiently large to fight our battles, and the people are still prepared to fight with the last man and last shilling to assist in winning the world's freedom."

A man is hopelessly ill when he fails to make a fuss about any new experiment that is tried on him.

WILL INVESTIGATE POULTRY DISEASES

Expert Has Been Assigned To This Branch of the Work

It will be of interest to poultry keepers throughout Canada to know that there is now an expert who devotes all his time investigating the diseases of poultry. Dr. A. B. Wickware, Assistant Pathologist to the Health of Animals Branch, has been assigned to that work by Dr. Torrance, Veterinary Director General.

Dr. Wickware is by no means a novice in poultry diseases. For several years, under Dr. Higgins, Dominion Pathologist, he has devoted some of the his time to the diseases affecting poultry, and has given special attention to Black Head. Realizing the importance of investigations in poultry diseases, Mr. J. H. Grisdale, Director of Experimental Farms, and Dr. Torrance arranged for Dr. Wickware to take up this question exclusively. He is, therefore, now cooperating with the Poultry Division, Central Experimental Farm, where, since last fall, he has been conducting experiments along this much-needed and very important line of work.

Continued attention is being given to Black Head in turkeys and many new investigations are being started. These relate to chick disease as well as to general diseases of poultry, including parasites of all kinds.

Annual Losses.

The annual losses that occur from poultry diseases and parasites are tremendous. No person knows what the amount is, but it is well into the millions of dollars each year. Dr. Wickware's work will no doubt, do something to eliminate part of this, but the co-operation of all poultrymen who have any disease in their flock will be appreciated.

As usual, communications to the Experimental Farm re diseases of poultry, will be welcomed and with Dr. Wickware now giving all his time to this matter, even more information will be available. Specimens of sick birds should be sent when practicable, and may be expressed collect if addressed to Biological Laboratory, Experimental Farm, Ottawa.

BIG PROFIT IN GERMAN WINE.

Last Year's Short Crop Promises to Bring a Record Price.

BERLIN, May 21. — While the production of wine in Germany in 1916 was curtained heavily because of the unfavorable weather conditions its money value is expected to yield a sum equal to the record figure of 1911. The prevailing prices for wine will boost the value of the yield to a total of probably 150,000,000 marks. For the ten years prior to the war the average annual crop noted 151,000,000 marks.

In Berlin wine cards show the constant price revisions in figures written in red ink. Large industrial corporations are heavy buyers at the wine auctions, frequently buying the entire output of vine yards for use in their casinos.

PLANS PASSPORT SYSTEM.

Government Proposes Drastic Measures at Border.

OTTAWA, May 22.—Drastic methods will be adopted immediately to prevent Canadians of military age from evading military service by crossing the International boundary. An Order-in-Council will be passed, and put into effect at once, which will not permit the emigration from this country of men of military age without permission of the authorities.

To accomplish this, it is understood that a passport system will be instituted. A citizen who attempts to leave Canada without this permission will be turned back at the border or the point at which he attempts to leave the country. It is probable that a joint arrangement will be made with the United States whereby each country will assist the other in conserving its man power for military service. If this is brought about those who attempt to leave their respective countries with out permission will have to run the gauntlet of a double set of border officials.

HOPEFUL OF SUCCESS.

Sir Horace Plunkett Believes Irish Will Settle Their Own Problem.

LONDON, May 22. — Sir Horace Plunkett, the Irish publicist, who without identifying himself with either of the political parties has been a constant worker for Irish betterment, expressed to-day his opinion that the convention will be accepted by Irishmen as the first really hopeful beginning of the end of that question.

"It has taken many generations to convince the English people that they cannot govern Ireland," said Sir Horace, "but only a few months to learn that they cannot form a system of self-government for that country. Now that these lessons have been learned I do not think it will take many weeks or even days for Irishmen to realise the great opportunity which has fallen to them, or the responsibility which it involves; and, as far as I can gauge the spirit underlying the somewhat confused state of Irish thought caused by the kaleidoscopic changes in British policy, the convention will be accepted as the first really hopeful beginning of the end of the Irish question. There will be an overwhelming desire to make it succeed.

"It must, however, be remembered that the more earnest the desire the more thorough will be the work of the convention, and the longer it sits behind its closed doors the better will be the prospect of the final solution of what perhaps has been the most baffling problem in the world's politics. Mr. Lloyd George may already be congratulated."

Every now and again don't you get one of those fearful headaches that drive you to do anything to get relief? Remember, though, its a mistake to just "smother" the pain without removing the cause. Nearly all headaches have their beginning in the stomach, liver or bowels, and the best remedy is Chamberlain's Tablets, which tone the liver, sweeten the stomach and clear the bowels. They get right to the headache cause and remove its cause.

CHAMBERLAIN'S TABLETS

A MODEL HOSPITAL

The following is from the London Times:

The modern military hospital is no longer a substantial structure of brick and mortar. It is a collection of temporary buildings put up in the minimum of time and at the minimum of expense. Such a hospital is the Ontario Military Hospital in Kent. It took seven months to build, from the time the architect first arrived on the ground until it was opened, and the cost was less than £70 per bed. It is to the Canadian province of Ontario that we owe this vast concern, which is still growing, and which has tended over 6,000 patients in less than 12 months.

The subscribers to the fund and all the people of Ontario may well be pleased, for their money has been spent to good purpose, and they have the satisfaction of knowing that their hospital is put to its full use. There are rarely fewer than 600 patients in the wards, and often there are nearly half as many again.

The Ontario Hospital is absolutely self-contained, for there are facilities for all the most delicate surgical work ready to hand. There is a dental surgery, where dentists and surgeons, all Canadians, most of them from Ontario, and all specialists work together. Men with jaw and face wounds are made whole again. Plastic surgery has been made a feature of the establishment, and there is an excellent X-ray plant in a special building. Many American and Canadian business methods have been introduced, and there is an excellent system of card index filing in connection with the X-ray treatment. The records of the patients are kept with meticulous care, and by the card index system any man's medical history is revealed in 30 seconds.

There are at present 20 wards in the hospital, each of 52 beds. In addition, there is an isolation ward of 40 beds, bringing the total up to 1,080. In six weeks, 1,040 more beds will be ready, bringing the accommodation up to 2,120. This is a wonderful total for a temporary hospital which did not exist a year ago.

NURSES FROM ONTARIO.

In regard to the staff, the Ontario people have again come to the fore. They have sent 80 trained nurses. All were certificated before the war, for a three-years' course is necessary in the province before the final examinations are passed. These nurses rank as lieutenants, and wear two stars on their shoulder-straps. They are paid as lieutenants, and their accounts, field allowances, and mess allowances are all dealt with in the same way as those of the officers. They wear a distinctive uniform, with a blue cloak lined with scarlet, a blue soft hat, and the Army Medical Service badge of Canada, which has the serpent and staff surrounded with the maple leaves instead of the bay leaves. The matron, Miss M. Smith, of Ottawa, ranks as a captain, and wears captain's badges. In addition to the nursing staff there are 310 N.C.O's and men doing duty as orderlies, dentists, dispensers, engineers, firemen in the powder house, dressers, motor drivers, and police.

The arrangement of the buildings is specially noteworthy, for they are laid out with the idea that of economising labour in the distribution of food and saving time in attendance on patients. The kitchens are specially convenient, and the food is taken through covered way sto rooms where it is carved on hot stoves. There are bread-cutting machines, steam boilers capable of taking a sack of potatoes, steam ovens for cooking green vegetables, baking ovens, and all the apparatus of a modern hotel kitchen.

Diets are carefully checked, and there is no waste. Every day the diets required from each ward are sent down to the quartermaster's stores, where baskets are filled with any special food required. This check goes also to the kitchen, where the dishes are prepared. Every effort has been made to economise without stinting the men, and several good schemes for saving have been initiated. Where at every man used to be given two slices of bread on his plate, the bread is now put on a large dish in the centre of the table, where a man may help himself. Thus, if there is any left over, it may be used for puddings or other dishes. Potatoes are served in the same way.

A PERMANENT CINEMA.

The entertainment of the patients, in itself a matter of great import, has been well provided for, and there is a permanent cinema machine built in off the big recreation hall where pictures are shown every week. The men are very appreciative, and thanks to the generosity of certain firms, they are given good films. Indeed, they have had their own hospital screened in a series of scenes, and a complete picture play, "From Hen to Hospital," was acted there.

There are nine V.A.D. hospitals near the main hospital, and in these another 500 beds are available for the less serious cases. There is a squadron of 12 motor-ambulances to take the men from the station to the hospital or to the auxiliary establishments.

Lieutenant-Colonel D. W. Macpherson, the officer commanding, has had a great deal of experience; he was for a long time in France with the Canadian forces. He was for many years in the Canadian Militia, and long before the war broke out had a thorough grounding in all the multifarious duties of his position. The quartermasters, men of great moment in such a large establishment, are Captains W. H. Fox and H. Goodman, and one look at their stores gives the visitor an idea of their responsibilities.

It is a great tribute, not only to the generosity of the men and women of Ontario, but also to the skill and executive ability of the staff, that such an undertaking can be so well worked from a distance. The Ontario Hospital receives men of any unit in the Imperial or Colonial forces. Men from Canada, Newfoundland, South Africa, New Zealand, Australia and indeed every outpost of Empire, are to be found in the wards. The men mix with each other and thus gain much information of the life of all the Colonies.

The Victory of The Marne

Inscribed to Joseph Jacques Cesaire Joffre, Marechal de France.

Come, May, thou darling of the year,
In every land adored,
Bring us a draught of Nature's cheer
In brimming chalice poured;
Lift high our welcome, while with flowers we wreathe a stainless sword.

Give us the spirit's wine to pledge
To him, the soul of France,
Who stood before disaster's edge,
Master of circumstance,
And faced, unfaltering, and won that hour's portentous chance.

Grant us a halcyon day of blue,
With light and life aflame,
That, like the Spring, we may renew
The laurels of his fame,
Since now to think of Liberty is but to breathe his name.

Adown the bright and fluttering street
Let serried thousands throng,
And children march with eager feet
In phalanxes of song,
That Memory to their latest heirs his glorious deed prolong.

If, for a breath, we crave relief
From War's transcendent woe,
Not less for France's noble grief
Our kindred tears shall flow.
We keep for timelier days the dirge our hearts too keenly know.

Now, our thanksgiving to the Lord,—
Who, through the ages' round,
Doth choose the humble for his sword
The mighty to confound—
That still the doom of Jericho the horns of Israel sound.

Thanks for the soul that on that field
Of lasting good or ill
Gave to the land that would not yield
His wisdom and his will,
Till Fate, confirming man's resolve, once more was Freedom's shield.

And thanks of solemn joy be made
For those of every sky,
Who, building up our barricade,
Our bitter cup put by,
Fill at their side we now have earned the privilege to die.

Rejoice that, deaf to every lure,
At last we gladly stand
With those who make the Right secure,
Comrades in heart and hand,
Like them, Crusaders, sworn to save the greater Holy Land.

Graves of the Marne! Oh, not in vain
Your broadcast seed was sown;
Already nations love as men;
Through you, forgot or known,
In spite of frontiers and of flags the world shall be as one.

400,000 FARMS RUINED BY FOE IN LITHUANIA.

150,000 Starving and Penniless Civilians Living in Cellars and Dugouts.

GENEVA, May 21. — The Lithuanian Bureau at Kovnamno has made public statistics regarding the region of Lithuania, ravaged by the Germans. From them it appears that 150,000 civilians are penniless, and starving, living in cellars and dugouts.

Four hundred thousand farms in that region are reported to have been devastated. The death rate is said to be growing alarmingly on account of the insanitary conditions under which the people are now living.

THE WAR and the Encyclopaedia Britannica

WE have decided to undertake the preparation of a New Volume to be added to the present 29 volumes of the Encyclopaedia Britannica, 11th Edition.

The New Volume will be devoted to the war and will have the effect of bringing the information in the Encyclopaedia Britannica down to the date of the conclusion of peace.

It will contain a full and authoritative account of the historical background out of which the war sprang, with special reference to the political, social and racial conflict of interests of all the nations concerned.

It will give exhaustive treatment to the progress of the war, step by step and in all countries.

It will show the immediate results of the war not only on the military side, but on the economic side as well, and it will thus enable the reader to foresee its ultimate results in the readjustments that will follow in all nations. The war's geographical results will also be fully dealt with, and new maps, to take place of present ones, will be given wherever there are changes in present boundaries.

The new volume will be written on the same high level of authority, comprehensiveness and impartiality which has always distinguished the Encyclopaedia Britannica, and which has made its pronouncements on any controversial subject of unique value to the reader.

The editor will take especial care to give readers a judicial account of the war, and will exercise such control over the contributors that the narrative will be free from partisan feeling and national prejudice. Those who will be asked to contribute will be writers of the same standing and qualifications as those who wrote for the Britannica itself.

The magnitude of the war, in which practically all countries are directly concerned, makes it necessary that its history should be treated with the high authority that can only be attained by employing the incomparable resources of the Britannica; it also calls for the putting into concrete and authoritative form, for present-day readers and for posterity, of the facts of a chapter of history which will be of immeasurable influence on the future of civilization everywhere in the world. The War Volume will be, in fact, a complete reference work on the greatest war of history, and in its own field just as good a book as the Encyclopaedia Britannica.

The New Volume will not only give a fair, unbiased and full account of the war itself—how it started, how it was fought, the changes and innovations it brought about—but it will also deal with the results of the war outside the sphere of fighting. Particular attention will be given to those economic factors in the present war which have led to the adoption by all the belligerents of new measures to safeguard their national welfare. Articles will also be written to tell of any new discoveries or progress in industry and science.

For instance, in surgery, aviation, submarine warfare and public hygiene there have been developments of primary importance. These and any other advances in knowledge will be fully dealt with. This will virtually make the New Volume a supplement to the Encyclopaedia Britannica itself. Whether peace shall be made this year, next year, or the year after, the additional new matter will bring the contents of the Britannica abreast of the world's knowledge as it stands when peace has been made.

The date of publication will be as soon as possible after the end of the war.

THE ENCYCLOPAEDIA BRITANNICA, per [signature] President.

P. S.—We have received hundreds of letters asking about this New Volume since a newspaper paragraph announced that it was to be published. We therefore now wish to inform all owners of the Britannica that they will in due course be notified of the date of publication.

This New Volume will be issued in bindings to match their sets, whether they bought The Cambridge University issue or the low-priced "Handy Volume" issue, and the price at which it will be sold to owners of the Britannica will be the same as they paid per volume for the set of the Britannica which they already own.

AN AGITATION AGAINST CONSCRIPTION IN QUEBEC

Feeling is Keen in the Extreme Among Certain Sections of the Populace — Mass Meeting Held in Montreal To-night — "Borden, the Man Who is Dragging You to the Slaughter House!" is Description of Premier in One French Paper.

MONTREAL, May 23. — Agitations against conscription in Quebec have started. Last night Quebec city had one, and this morning's French papers announce that the first of a series to be held in Montreal will be conducted Thursday night. Whether the Montreal ones will be like that of Quebec last night — verbal protests only—remains to be seen. Those who know the French parts of the city say, however, that the feeling is keen in the extreme among certain sections of the populace, and that if there is anyone anxious to become a popular idol all he has to do is to start something.

Perhaps it is with that in view that Thursday's meeting has been called almost at Mayor Martin's front door. Montreal's Mayor is eccentric, but he is no fool, and as he would love to get third term it can be safely predicted that if he thinks the feeling against compulsion is strong enough he will be on hand to lead the cohorts against the measure.

Mistakes in Organizing.

To many it seems strange that, now that conscription has been forecasted, the Government at Ottawa is letting things go the same way in Quebec as it did before it announced the measure. Quebec was not organised under the voluntary plan for recruits he was Ontario. Many of the principal towns have yet to see a recruiting officer or hear one. One would have thought that with a Province so French and so Catholic, the chief recruiting officer appointed would have been French and Catholic. Instead he is English and Protestant, a charming man personally, but the pastor of one of the largest, if not the largest, Methodist Churches in Canada.

Many here have the idea that Sir Sam Hughes, being an Orangeman, wanted to give Catholic Quebec a black eye in the rest of Canada. It is certain that the same steps were not taken to get recruits here as were taken in Ontario. And now, with conscription announced, the Government has apparently done nothing to see that Quebec bears of it in the proper light.

Letting Agitators Get Hold.

Were someone who has the confidence of the French appointed by the Government to look after things in Quebec, much heartburning might be avoided. Instead of doing this, however, it looks as if agitators are to be given a free hand to stir the people up, whereas what they need is someone to silence the agitators, for, on the surface at least the people as a whole will accept conscription here as willingly as they will in Ontario. Of course, if they are allowed to be stirred up, no one knows what may happen.

A striking example of this is given in a small French daily this morning which prints a two column cut of Sir Robert Borden with the line above "Sir Robert Borden who has announced conscription. Workingmen, behold the man."

No One's Duty to Keep Order.

Nine out of every ten people in Montreal will tell you that had a firm hand been taken with Bourassa and the others in the beginning, there would not have been, nor would there be now, any talk of disloyalty in Quebec, nor wondering "what will Quebec do." After the first disorders at a recruiting meeting a special order-in-Council was passed that would have put an end to them, were the order-in-Council carried out. A few weeks ago at the Blondin-Lesperance meeting the disorders were as bad as ever, and no one raised a finger. The military didn't think it was their duty, and Chief of Police Champeau said on the following day that he had read of the order-in-Council, but no one thought it worth while to send him a copy. And so it goes.

Petition to City Council.

A new development to-day was the starting of a petition to the City Council for it to protest as a body to the Government. The first of the petitions appeared at the City Hall at an early hour, brought there by a City Hall reporter of Bourassa's paper. He stated that they were being widely circulated throughout the city. The petition reads:

"Whereas the Prime Minister and the Canadian Government favour conscription, whereas such a measure is contrary to our traditions and to the interest of our country.

"Whereas the application of the Militia Act for overseas service without a referendum is against our traditions.

"Whereas it is important for all corporations and societies to second the opponents of such a measure.

"We, the undersigned citizens of Montreal, ask our representatives at the City Hall to oppose as a whole the conscription plan of the Government."

Leading Paper Undecided.

There is considerable speculation as to what attitude La Presse, the largest and most influential French paper in Quebec, will take. It is almost impossible to say what La Presse is in politics; it has changed its position so many times in the past two years, but to-day it is generally considered to be Conservative. On Saturday it was silent, and yesterday, while it announced the fact that there was to be another conscription meeting at Quebec last night under a four column head five inches deep, the only reference it made on its editorial page was this very guarded utterance:

"Sir Robert Borden has announced that his Government has judged the time opportune to impose conscription upon the Canadian people, in order to continue backing up the efforts of the allies overseas. The Prime Minister will shortly submit to Parliament a measure whereby to seek to give effect to such a grave step. We will then study the measure on its merits and by the light of the debates to which it will undoubtedly give rise, in both Houses."

A Liberal Club Waits,

Owing to the intervention of Nap Seguin, M.P.P., for St. Mary's division, the Lemieux Club meeting last night did not pass any resolution as certain members here had intended that it should do against conscription. Instead, the members passed a vote of confidence in Sir Wilfrid Laurier and expressed the hope that now as in times past, the Liberal chieftain "would protect the rights of Canadians and the Canadian constitution." Mr. Seguin declared that, personally he was entirely opposed to conscription, but he said that it would be better, before taking any official attitude in the matter to wait developments at Ottawa, when the bill would be discussed.

Another Open Air One.

At a meeting of the Letellier Club, also held last night, it was decided to call an open-air mass-meeting for Thursday night, at the corner of Champlain and Logan street, to protest against conscription. The following will be invited to speak: Mayor Martin, Nap Seguin, M.P.P.; Tancrede Marsiel, Ald. Lammerre, M. Southillier, J. C. Lambert and Notary L. N. Ricard.

In the course of the meeting Irene Voutrin, president of the Junior Liberal Association, advised calmness. He said that in the past, popular manifestations had been wrongly interpreted.

CAPTAIN DANCEY IS GIVEN DISCHARGE

Orders Announce He Is Relieved of Command.

OTTAWA, May 23.—Capt. S. N. Dancey, late O. C., 2nd Battalion Reinforcing Draft, has been discharged from the Canadian Expeditionary Forces through orders of Brig.-General T. D. B. Hemming, O. C., M.D., No. 3. Capt. Dancey was for some weeks attached to the 207th Carleton County Battalion in the capacity of recruiting officer.

When the unit left the Capital he was given command of a reinforcing draft for the 2nd Battalion. The appointment was made by Militia authorities at Ottawa.

He enlisted a number of men for the draft and led them to Halifax.

Capt. Dancey was recalled to Kingston to explain certain matters brought to the attention of the military authorities. He has been in Kingston for several weeks.

The divisional orders conveyed the announcement of his discharge from the C. E. F. He was known particularly for the vigorous recruiting methods he adopted and to which objection was often made. He served in France with the R. H. F. early in the war.

CONSCRIPTION, URGES BISHOP

Same Treatment of All, is Advice of Kingston Diocese Head.

KINGSTON, Ont., May 23.—In his charge to the Ontario Synod this afternoon Bishop Bidwell declared that it was the duty of the Government to carry out the same measure to all. The day for exhortation in regard to enlistment had passed. What is needed is authoritative action. Many people were beginning to feel sad at heart when they realized that they had been giving their sons and help for their country and their cause, but to enable a large number of young men without spirit to live at ease, comfort and safety.

Careless Shampooing Spoils The Hair

If you want to keep your hair looking its best, be careful what you wash it with. Don't use prepared shampoos or anything else that contains too much alkali. This dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle, and ruins it.

The best thing for cleaning it is just ordinary mulsified cocoanut oil (which is pure and greaseless), and it is better than anything else you can use.

One or two teaspoonfuls will shampoo the hair and scalp thoroughly. Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, which rinses out easily, removing every particle of dandruff, dirt, dust and excessive oil. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and it leaves the scalp soft, and the hair free and silky, bright, lustrous, fluffy and easy to manage.

You can get mulsified cocoanut oil at any pharmacy, it's very cheap, and a few ounces will supply every member of the family for months.

MAY 24 IS REMEMBERED AS A NATIONAL HOLIDAY

The Memory of Queen Victoria of England Will Be Kept Green for Many Generations Yet To Come

"Her count was pure; her life serene;
God gave her peace; her land reposed;
A thousand claims to reverence closed
In her as Mother, Wife and Queen."
—Tennyson.

Although sixteen years have passed since Queen Victoria died, May 24, her birthday, is still remembered by the British nation as a national holiday, and the memory of this Queen of England will be kept green for many generations yet to come.

This woman, who was a sovereign, has left a conspicuous place in history She came to the throne so young that we are interested in her childhood. Her father, the Duke of Kent, died when she was an infant, and she was brought up by her mother, who was domestically a kind tyrant. Trained in all obedience with almost Spartan simplicity, the girl Queen grew towards womanhood. We can have some idea of how this child was kept down, when we read that she never had a room to herself until she came to the throne. She was imprisoned in such a close atmosphere of love and surveillance, that we are not surprised at the following request made to her mother when she was told that she was Queen of England:

"In time I shall become accustomed," she said, "to my change of station; meanwhile, since it is really so, and you see in your little daughter the sovereign of this great country, will you grant her the first request she has had occasion in her regal capacity to put to you? I wish my dear mamma, to be left alone for two hours!"

MELANCHOLY CHILDHOOD

Queen Victoria had in her own words "a rather melancholy childhood." Of all the persons who surrounded her in her youth, her uncle, Leopold, her mother's brother, afterwards the King of the Belgiums, exerted the strongest influence. When the Duke of Kent died, Leopold was the only friend the duchess had in England.

The following is taken from her journal, written on the day she came to the throne: "Since it has pleased Providence to place me in this station, I shall do my utmost to fulfil my duty towards my country, I am very young, and perhaps in many, though not in all things inexperienced; but I am sure that very few have more real good-will and real desire to do what is fit and right than I have." This promise from a girl of eighteen was made good in the longest reign of any British monarch—a reign of sixty-three years.

What girl of eighteen to-day could have so conducted herself as this girl Queen? When she was called upon for the first time to appear before the privy council, Lord Grey wrote: "There was in her appearance and demeanor a composure, a propriety, an aplomb, which were quite extraordinary. She never was in the least degree confused, embarrassed, or hurried. She read the declaration beautifully, and went through the forms of business as if she had been accustomed to them all her life."

Queen Victoria's father was a Whig. At a political banquet in London he made a public declaration of his political creed. He said: "I am a friend of civil and religious liberty all the world over. I am an enemy to all religious tests. I am a supporter of a general system of education. All men are my brethren, and I hold that power is only delegated for the benefit of the people."

The Queen retained for a long time her Whiggish sympathies, but towards the end of her life she showed preference for her Conservative leaders.

A GREAT QUEEN.

Victoria was a great Queen. Of course, we know that she had great ministers to advise her, and no system of government as yet devised by man, save monarchy alone, could have secured for a woman such beginnings this Queen had. All existing republican systems have carefully provided against the possibility of any woman even having such a chance, by denying to all women any right even to stand as candidate for supreme office. We cannot say that she was a genius, but we can say that she never shirked what she believed to be her duty, and she succeeded in many instances where a more clever person would not have had the patience to wait.

Looking back on her life of such a ruler, we are glad to celebrate May 24, and we trust that Canada will always be ready to observe the late Queen Victoria's birthday.

SOME BUSINESS ROMANCES OF THE ADVERTISING WORLD

George Eastman, in 1878, was a bank clerk, with a hobby for photography. Out of his dissatisfaction with the wet plate came the kodak and one of the greatest romances of business. Now the company invests at least $1,000,000 a year in advertising.

Or take William Wrigley, Jr., who was a travelling salesman. Now he is said to spend $2,000,000 a year or more on publicity. In the many Wrigley campaigns we find items that run into stupendous proportions. The ordinary bellhop in fiction has a circulation of perhaps 250,000, while the Wrigley "Spearmint Gloats Book" went to 7,000,000 people and the "Spear Men" to 3,000,000.

The American Chicle Company this year has an advertising appropriation of one and one-half million dollars.

Not so many years ago Eldridge F. Johnson was a machinist at Camden N.J. Afterward he bought the little shop where he had worked on a crude talking-machine, and this developed into the great Victor Company—whose advertising runs well over $3,000,000 a year.

A century ago there was a little soap factory in New York owned by a Morgan family. For more than a lifetime this business attained no particular prominence, but one day the family physician suggested the combination of two Latin words as a trade name. Sapoli became almost a national institution with three or four hundred thousand dollars a year to talk for it; and the picturesque adventures of this company add some of the brightest colour to the romance of advertising. Thus we have "Spotless Town."

In 1879 Jacob Ritty, a merchant in Dayton, O., invented the cash register. John H. Paterson then had a small country store and was having trouble keeping his accounts. When he heard of the cash register he telegraphed for two and afterward bought the business. Once Frederick F. Peabody was a school teacher in Minnesota, but small life did not please him and he went to Chicago. At the very beginning [illegible] his career, for he [illegible] pages of the Chicago [illegible] a job at seven dollars [illegible] other things he [illegible] day he is president [illegible] lar concern in the world. LABOUR IS NOT YET WON OVER

Appointment of a Food Controller is Probable — No Decision on Conscription

OTTAWA, May 22.—"Not a word that was said justifies a report sent out from Ottawa last night that we have changed or are going to change our attitude in regard to conscription," declared J. C. Watters, president, and James Simpson, vice-president of the Dominion Trades and Labour Congress to-day.

"I am not going to say what we will recommend to the unions," added Mr. Watters. "We are having an executive meeting to-day to consider the situation in all its phases, and we will issue a statement probably this evening. Before advising the members of the congress we desired to hear the Prime Minister's side. We did so last evening. We secured information that has been made public and some that has not."

Looks Like "A Game."

Mr. Simpson observed that the report that labour was to support conscription looked to him like "a game."

The delegation last night urged upon the Premier the appointment of a food controller and got the answer that it would be taken up at the Cabinet Council on Thursday. The House will not sit then, and the Government will have an all-day conference when the Conscription Bill will be got into shape.

To Have Food Dictator.

It is more than likely that the Government will appoint a food controller or "dictator," vested with full authority to deal with the domestic situation as it is being dealt with by Mr. Hoover in the United States. The scheme may involve not only the regulation of prices but may deal generally with the production, storage, handling and sale of food. The Labour delegates emphasized the urgent need of speedy action.

As to what the Labour executive will recommend on conscription there can be only speculation. The inference gathered to-day, however, is that the report will not be favourable, though possibly the traditional stand of uncompromising hostility may be relaxed a bit because the conscription is to be selective and not general.

German Munitions Workers Not Allowed to Talk of Their Duties.

German newspapers recently received in London report that General Groner, the Minister of Munitions and Supplies, has issued an order cautioning civilians on war work to observe the same strict secrecy imposed upon members of the German armed forces. The obligation to keep quiet applies whether persons are serving voluntarily or for wages. They are forbidden to discuss with other persons the character or the place of their employment or to repeat in any form any information that comes to them through their new occupations.

A joke in the Vossische Zeitung seems to indicate that German women on national service are unduly talkative. "We have just invented another machine to take the place of a man,' says a factory manager to a woman munition worker. "But there is no machine invented yet to take the place of a woman," she replied. "Oh, yes," rejoins the manager, "a gramophone!"

Two Ways To Acquire An Estate

1—By saving, stinting, sacrificing; fighting the world at every turn, battling the blows of business competition; running the risk of fire, theft, embezzlement and misfortune; skimping your family and yours may be and standing only one chance in twenty of reaching Old Age without being dependent upon others for support.

2—By securing a Life Insurance Policy—A Policy which guarantees to pay your Beneficiary at your death, either a definite lump sum or an income every month as long as she lives—an income that is fixed, certain, regular, inalienable, unassailable, untaxable, and which cannot be lost, sold, dissipated, squandered, or mortgaged.

Which is the EASIER and MORE SENSIBLE Way to Acquire an Estate?

Two Ways To Bequeath An Estate

1—By Testamentary Document: Requires an Executor. Must go through legal red tape of Court. Requires Court costs. May require months or years to settle. This kind of Will can be broken or set aside. Property is subject to attachment for debts of the Deceased.

2—By Life Insurance (when the Beneficiary is named): Requires no executor or administrator — you are your own executor, your own administrator. No need of Court proceedings—no expense of Court costs. Does not require time to settle. This is a Will direct which no lawyer can break nor Court set aside. Policy is not subject to attachment for debts of the Deceased.

Which is the SAFER and BETTER Way to Bequeath an Estate?

Diplomas Presented to Five Graduating Nurses of the Nicholls Hospital

Mr. John Crane Was Chairman in the Absence of Mr. Richard Hall—Address by Rev. Robert Pogue and Dr. G. Stewart Cameron

Five young women, the Misses Mary Graham, L. H. Nugent, M. J. McGregor, M. J. V. Jory and Marjorie McGowan, who have given their lives to the glorious calling of alleviating the suffering of others, received their diplomas and medals last night at the Collegiate Hall. The platform presented a most beautiful appearance with the scores of beautiful bouquets, gifts to the graduates from grateful patients and friends.

Mr. John Crahe, Chairman.

Mr. Crane said that while being pleased to be in the chair, he regretted the reason, which was that Mr. Richard Hall, who, as chairman of the Hospital Board, has occupied the chair year after year, practically since the inception of the Hospital; he was chairman of the first board when the hospital was the present home of Mr. C. B. Bradburn. Mr. Crane said that under the supervision of Mr. Hall, the wishes of the late Mrs. Nicholls had always been carried out in that the poor and needy had never been turned away. He spoke of the growth of the hospital; ten years ago 400 patients were treated; last year, 1,200. "I believe," he said, "the City hardly appreciates the work of the hospital, perhaps because it is self-supporting.

Rev. Robt. Pogue.

Mr. Pogue said that with him experience lent appreciation of the work a nurse may do. He said that the existence of the profession was due to Christianity; that the outstanding characteriaics of our Lord was His sympathy. Christianity seeks out sorrow and ills of the world. Hospitals are the earliest and mellowest fruits of Christianity. "It is," he said, "a saintly duty to minister to the sick." Mr. Pogue cautioned the graduates against the danger of looking upon the glorious profession as a means of livelihood rather than a calling. The purpose of our existence is to do the will of God, and our lives should be patterned by the life of Christ in that financial consideration never entered into His life. Nurses must set the highest ideal of love and sincere service for God, and because comfort is needed without thought of reward. He also cautioned the graduates against forgetting the spiritual side of life. The very realities of life which they encounter should show them the comforts of religion. Doctors and nurses have the opportunity to speak the word of comfort which often helps more than medicine. Mr. Pogue concluded by congratulating the nurses and wishing them most successful careers.

Dr. Cameron.

Dr. Cameron said that the evening did not seem complete without Mr. Hall in the chair, but hoped that by the next graduations he would be restored to health and be with them once more. He gave a brief resume of the history of nursing from the earliest days when men solely undertook the profession and when nursing and the Church were closely associated. Gradually women entered the profession, slowly, from the most illiterate people who volunteered their services, nursing became a profession, demanding women of higher education and higher perception. Now, a nurse not only gives the medicine, but works hand in hand with the doctor.

Duties of a Nurse.

A nurse, he said, must be prepared for hard work, self denial, and be prepared to obey orders; she must possess the mother instinct, and have good health. Tact is an essential quality, for a nurse must go into every class of home. Above all, a nurse must possess honour. Nurses get into the secrets of homes and honour must restrain them from disclosing anything they may hear or see.

Duty to a Nurse.

There is also a duty to a nurse we must not forget. A nurse is only human and needs rest. The patient must not expect her to work twenty-four hours without rest, and if she does sleep she has not forgotten her patient.

Nurses Overseas.

Dr. Cameron spoke of the nurses overseas, of whom there are fifteen graduates of Nicholls Hospital. All honour should be given those who gave up homes and heard their nation's call.

On behalf of the Board the beautiful bouquets from the Board of Trustees were presented by Miss Dorothy Moir and Margery McCulloch.

The Programme.

Miss Dorothy Allan, Miss Lora Logan, Mr. Douglas Carlisle, Mr. John Allan, Mrs. W. A. Logan contributed to the splendid musical programme.

"The Girl He Left Behind Him," Is Married to the Man on the Spot

Miss Ruth Roland, Now Mrs. Lionel E. Kent, Cancels Engagement to British Lieutenant

NEW YORK, May 23.—"East is East and West is West, and never the twain shall meet," wrote Rudyard Kipling—and pretty Miss Ruth Roland, motion picture actress, believed him. That is why she is to-day Mrs. Lionel T. Kent, and Lieutenant Godfrey Le Mothe, of His Britannic Majesty's forces stationed at Wilberforce Barracks, Sierra Leone, some four thousand miles east of New York, will soon receive his last letter from the girl he asked to wait until the war was over.

When you are twenty-two years old, five feet six inches tall, weight 128 pounds, have auburn hair and dark eyes and are dearly loved by a man at home, both Sierra Leone, the "White Man's Grave," and the end of the war seem a long way off. When the man at home is prosperous and ardent and demands immediate capitulation, the natural thing to do is to surrender—which is just what Miss Roland did, stipulating a June wedding.

But Mr. Kent, who is twenty-nine years old and as automobile salesman of Los Angeles, read the war news. He was aware that the German line was crumbling. He had heard that Bethmann-Hollweg was about to get ready to begin to consider a new peace proposal. To-day Lieut. Le Mothe is in distant Africa. To-morrow he might be a British mission of one on a visit to New York. So Mr. Kent waived aside all stipulations, and the couple, accompanied by Mrs. William Douglas, whose husband is in the motion picture business, went to Patchogue, L. I., where they obtained a license from Robert B. Asherly, Town Clerk, and were married in the rectory of St. Paul's Episcopal Church by the Rev. Jacob Probst. The wedding was kept a secret until last night.

CITIZENS SALUTE HUN OR MAYOR GOES TO JAIL

PARIS. — Various reports continue to come in regarding the condition of the French people discovered in the villages wrested from the Germans in the present advance. In some cases the Huns seem to have been actuated by almost humane feelings. In one of the most recently liberated villages it was found that the French people had, on the whole, not being badly treated by their captors. But they have particularly unpleasant recollections of the younger German officers, whom they describe as a most drunken and dissolute set of men.

The Kommandant appears to have been a typical Hun bully. He held a roll call of the inhabitants every morning, at which they all had to answer to their names. He required the mayor of the place to be by his side on these occasions and when any civilian failed to give him a ceremonious salute the unfortunate mayor had to suffer for the omission by undergoing three days' imprisonment.

Final Rehearsals of "A Greek Slave"

The final dress rehearsal of "A Greek Slave" took place last night, when the performers made acquaintance anew in their beautiful costumes. The event was most enjoyable for the great show which, commencing with a matinee on Victoria Day at 2.30, will be the attraction for Thursday and Friday nights.

TO CULTIVATE VACANT LANDS

In order to encourage the settlement and cultivation of vacant lands in the Western Provinces, the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, through its Colonization and Development Department, of which Mr. J. S. Dennis is the head, has undertaken an active campaign to try and induce absentee owners to cultivate their holdings.

A circular has been issued to some 8,000 absentee owners, pointing out the profits which can be made by cultivating their lands, and showing how many farmers sold their last year's crop for more than the original cost of their farms.

The Company offers the advice and assistance of its Colonization and Development Department free of charge, in supplying reliable information as to how to go about getting the land under cultivation and will send, on request, the fullest details as to routes of travel, customs regulations, passenger and freight rates and similar data.

In undertaking this campaign the Company is following its usual broad policy of Dominion-wide development, realising that every new settler means greater production to meet the food shortage which at present threatens the world, and which Canada, with its extensive and fertile unplowed areas, can provide.

Opposition to Conscription Is On Increase

No Possibility That Parliament Will Be a Unit in Favour of Compulsory Service.

Special to The Examiner.

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, May 23.— There seems this afternoon no possibility that parliament would be a unit in support of compulsory service. Opposition to the measure is growing rather than waning. A definite element declares that the government must organize the whole country for war before seeking conscription and that such an organization must include a census of the man power, an allocation of the necessary number of men to agriculture, war industries, mining and shipbuilding, together with adequate taxation of wealth and power control of food prices. If the Government will tackle the war problem in this big way it will secure support, which is now wavering.

A HOUSE TO HOUSE CANVASS TO BE MADE

Last Two Wards of the City Organized To Further Interests of Bridges By-law.

The organisation of each of the five wards of the city was completed last evening when the West and South wards representatives met for organisation purposes. The object of the ward organizations is to further the interests of the Bridges by-law which will be submitted to the ratepayers on May 31st or one week from to-morrow. Each ward will work under their respective Committee and a house to house canvas will be made.

The West Ward representatives, which met in the Committee Room of the City Building, arranged for the use of eleven automobiles to be used in getting out the vote. The Chairman of this particular committee is Ald. G. H. Duncan. The South Ward representatives met in the Patriotic Room and organised along similar lines.

The by-law requires a majority vote.

Removing Debris of Burned Cars

Eleven G. T. R. Cars Burned in Quaker Oats Fire

The twisted and misshapen iron that comprised the framework of the eleven G.T.R. grain cars, burned in the Quaker Oats fire, is being removed by a gang of employees under the direction of D. C. Meseroll, of the Master Car Builders' Office, London, and by Mr. Herbert Harry, of the Lindsay car department. They have the divisional auxiliary with derrick, and have already taken out several flat car loads of metal debris, and expect to clean up entirely within a few days. Some of the iron had been reduced to a molten condition, in which it had formed new and strange shapes in its self-made moulds. Much of the work is heavy lifting, but the derrick is handling it rapidly.

CONDUCTOR IS KILLED

Special to The Examiner:

TORONTO, May 23.—Arthur Durrant, aged 37, a conductor on the Toronto Street Railway, was crushed to death when he was caught between two cars this morning. He was adjusting the trolley pole of his car, which had become detached from the wire when the accident occurred. Death was apparently instantaneous.

STANDING WALLS BLOWN DOWN

Work Was Carried on Yesterday—Subway Demolished

A few well placed charges of dynamite made a big difference on the ruins of the Quaker Oats Company's plant. The work was carried on yesterday despite the rain. The subway connecting the main building and the warehouse was demolished, also some of the standing walls of the main building. Practically all that remains of the main building from back to front is the four-walled elevator and the stack on the site of the engine room. Preparations are being made to demolish the warehouse.

FOOD CONTROLLERS TO BE ANNOUNCED

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, May 23. — The Toronto News to-day says Canada's food controller will probably be appointed to-morrow, and the choice apparently lies between C. McGrath, chairman of the International Waterways Commission, and W. Sanford Evans, chairman of the Georgian Bay Canal Commission. These are the two names most prominently mentioned, says the News.

America, As Was England, Indifferent to Enormous Sacrifice and Work Ahead

Censorship, Says Captain Reilly, Helped Blind British to True Situation — Tells Facts Which All Would Better Recognize Now Than Later

By Capt. Henry J. Reilly.

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 23.

Several days in this country after landing from a second long trip abroad can give but one impression. That impression is that the nation as a whole has no realization of the fact that we have entered the largest and the most terrible war of history. In fact, the whole attitude of the people and the press is strongly suggestive of the comfortable, complacent point of view which existed in Great Britain during the first part of the war. The same slogans are heard: "Do your bit," "Business as usual," "Your country needs you," and all the many other means of suggesting that each individual by more or less pursuing his ordinary course, and considering someone else on to take the risk, is doing his share of helping the risk, is doing his share of helping

In Europe doing your bit has been replaced by doing your duty. Business as usual has given way to an insistence upon economic justice, and your country needs you to my country needs me, and is going to have me. The large number of flags displayed everywhere is a striking difference. In Europe there are few flags displayed but practically all of the men seen are in uniform. Where a window display is made it generally takes the form of a list of the employees and employers who have been mobilized, with special markings to indicate those who have been killed and wounded.

MISDIRECTED ENTHUSIASM

Here black type at the head of a column in a newspaper announces that some state has raised its quota for some particular force. Upon reading below it will be seen that this quota amounts to about a thousand men, in other words just about the number of casualties that a brigade of infantry frequently suffers the first hour of an attack. Women's camps are being established and women are marching around in khaki uniforms, fooling with wireless telegraphy, signalling and other things which they never can use in war, when what will be needed of them will be the serious duties of nurses who must take care of the badly wounded. Nothing but a real course involving the hard work which a real nurse undergoes in a hospital can fit them for this most trying performance.

The more the matter is investigated the more it is evident that there is a lack of sufficient seriousness, and all a fatal misconception of the immense scale upon which things must be done. Having entered the war, and allied ourselves with France, Great Britain, Russia and the rest of the Entente, we should immediately face the situation in all seriousness just as they see it and take prompt and vigorous action immediately to furnish the aid that they need. We can do that only if we will recognise the following facts, all of which are more or less disagreeable, and to all of which both the public and the press seem unwilling to give the prominence they must have.

First: The Entente Allies need our help and need it now. Decisive victory can only come from the help that we can give them.

Second: Money and supplies alone will not win the war.

Third: The complete wiping out of the submarines, even if possible, which is to be doubted, will not bring a decisive victory.

WHAT REAL VICTORY MEANS.

Fourth: A decisive victory can come only as the result of the complete and crushing defeat of the main German armies which are now in France.

Fifth: Such a crushing defeat can only result from an immense allied superiority in fighting men, artillery and aeroplanes on the western front.

For the fighting men the Allies already have on this front they need a great many more heavy guns of the latest type and many more of the latest type of aeroplanes. This artillery and these aeroplanes with their pilots and all of the numerous personnel needed to keep them going, must come from us. The immense number of additional fighting men needed to create the overwhelming superiority in numbers, which is the only guarantee of victory, must come from us. They must be accompanied by artillery and aeroplanes in numbers which we do not as yet seem to grasp. When all this is done we and our allies will be ready to start a decisive fight. To keep this fight going a constant, unending stream of men, ammunition and aeroplanes must be sent across to replace the immense losses which are inseparable from modern fighting.

In grasping what this means, we must not forget the British loss, eight hundred thousand killed, wounded and missing on the Somme, and the sixteen divisions a week which holding Verdun cost the French for each one of many weeks. We must not forget that ammunition even for artillery can be thought of only in terms of millions. We must not forget the thirty-three aeroplanes recently brought down in a two days' period of fighting.

HARM OF CENSORSHIP.

The immensity and terrible seriousness of the whole problem can only be brought home if the utmost freedom of criticism of errors is allowed. Had the British censorship been limited merely to a suppression of military facts which would benefit the enemy the British nation would have gotten over its comfortable feeling toward the war a year earlier than it did, and the British army would have gotten the men, the artillery and the air service that it needed a year before it did. The censorship deceived not the German general staff, but the British public.

The German general staff knew perfectly well that the British occupied a line only just northwest of Ypres to just south of a line from Bethune to Lens when the British public thought the army stretched from the sea to Soissons—an amount of line they are not yet strong enough to take over. The German general staff and the German soldiers in front of the British knew that the British had an insignificant amount of heavy artillery and that the light field artillery lacked high explosive shells. However the British public were being regaled with stories of splendid successes and the British infantry died and suffered wounds in unnecessarily large numbers because of this lack. The German general staff and the German troops knew that the battle of Neuve Chapelle, in March 1915, was a bloody failure, but the British people due to their censorship celebrated a victory.

8,000,000 WOMEN WILL VOTE.

Added to British List—Franchise Reform Will Also Give Ballot Privileges to About 2,000,000 More Men.

LONDON, May 22.—In moving the second reading of the Franchise Reform Bill to-day in the Commons, Sir George Cave, the home secretary, said he estimated the number of men voters that would be added by the bill to the present 8,357,000 was about 2,000,000, while the extension of the franchise to women would add to the register about 6,000,000 voters, of whom 5,000,000 would acquire the franchise as married women.

Sir George explained that a woman voter must be entitled to register as a local government elector, or her husband must be entitled to vote, or she must be a university voter. Other reforms, he stated, included the payment by the Government of the returning officers' expenses, a reduction of the scale of expenses permitted to candidates, and the prohibition of expenditures by unauthorized bodies to secure the return of a candidate.

Robert Arthur Sanders, Unionist member for the Bridgewater division of Somerset, moved the rejection of the bill on the ground that it was undesirable during the war to proceed with legislation which enacts far-reaching changes in the franchise.

counter attacks as well as the great forces which the French were compelled to eject in their victorious advance.

The German prisoners also declared Field Marshal Von Hindenburg personally visited the Cornillet front recently and supervised all arrangements for the offensive which proved abortive.

Steel-clad canal and river monitors are effectively aiding the French advance in the Mount Cornillet sector. In this section, where they are used, monitors can disappear into bomb-proofs built along the side of the waterways they utilize, thus giving them the advantage of veritable river submarines.

PARIS, May 23.—Marshal Joffre and former-Premier Viviani, arrived in Paris this evening, after completing their mission to the United States. Marshal Joffre, vice-Premier Viviani, and other members of the French War Commission, sailed from New York May 11. Their departure was kept a close secret, and it was generally believed the distinguished Frenchmen were still in Washington.

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Actual tests of several exceptionally promising devices to solve the submarine problem are under way, it was announced by the Navy Department to-day. At least two inventions have undergone preliminary tests and are now being constructed on a large scale for use on ships. The first tests with the devices were made with models. The Department then ordered them constructed on a larger scale for exhaustive demonstrations.

TRADES CONGRESS IS AGAINST CONSCRIPTION

OTTAWA, May 22.—J. C. Watters, President of the Dominion Trades and Labour Congress, made the following statement to-night on the result of the Congress Executive meeting on conscription:

"After giving full consideration to the statement the Prime Minister made to the Executive of the Congress, the Executive sees no reason to change its position on conscription. The Executive has considered the matter carefully, and nothing has transpired to alter its stand of a year ago. The Executive will meet again on Monday, after the debate on the measure, and a fuller statement, going into the details of its stand, will be issued on Tuesday."

TROUT IS RELEASED

Former Peterborough Player Is No Longer A Member of Toronto Team

The Toronto Telegram says:

Local baseball fans will miss an old, or rather a young, favourite when they next journey to the Island Stadium to see the Leafs in action. Irving Trout, utility player of the Toronto team, is the latest to be released. He goes to the New London Club. Trout, since joining the Toronto team about six years ago, has been a favourite with the fans because of his ability to play any position and do it well. He came to the Leafs as a catcher from the Canadian League and was with the Toronto team in that circuit. It was found that he was too light for catching and was converted into an outfielder. Then later it was found necessary on a number of occasions to work him in the infield when one of the regulars was unable to play. He seemed able to go into any position and play splendidly, but when given a regular position he invariably fell away both in his fielding and batting. He has played every position but pitcher and first base since joining the Leafs.

SUNDAY BASEBALL RECEIPTS TO ARMY.

Special Arrangements Being Made by American League.

CHICAGO, May 22.—Major league baseball on Sunday in all the cities of the eastern end of the circuit, the gross receipts to be donated to various units of the United States army, is what magnates of the American League hope to bring about.

President B. B. Johnson of the league, has already arranged, with the approval of Mayor Mitchell, of New York, for a game in New York on Sunday, June 10, between the New York and St. Louis Americans. It is to be a championship game, not an exhibition affair, the scheduled game of June 18 between the teams having been advanced for the occasion. Mayor Mitchell is to be custodian of the receipts, which are to be given to the New York Engineer Corps.

Machinery was set in motion to-day for the purpose of obtaining permission for American League teams to play championship games on Sunday in Washington, Philadelphia and Boston, the proceeds to go to some unit of the American army.

OLD CY FALKENBERG WINS FIRST 1917 GAME

CLEVELAND, May 22. — Philadelphia evened up on the series with Cleveland, winning to-day by 3 to 1, it being Falkenberg's first victory for the Athletics. In addition to keeping the Cleveland hits scattered he drove in the winning run with a two-base hit in the seventh inning. Reckless base running hurt Cleveland's chances early in the contest. CONSCRIPT WEALTH AND LAND AS WELL be given all the encouragement possible in these days when production was an essential. But he pointed out that there were millions of acres in the West which produced no revenue. There should be some way of dealing with these lands. He referred to unproductive lands held by railways and private individuals for speculative purposes. He did not advocate the violation of any agreements, but the owners of these lands should be compelled to pay their share. Taxation would probably create a tendency to dispose of these lands, and thus make them productive.

Much Untaxed Wealth in Cities.

Mr. Graham also pointed out that in every city there were men, whose source of wealth lay in mortgages and securities, etc., who were not touched by the Government scheme of taxation. Such men should be taxed and taxed thoroughly. He trusted the Government would devise some means of taxing this wealth.

Income Tax Maybe Before War Over

Sir Thomas White, in replying, said he had endeavoured to follow two principles in his taxation—one, to make long-date loans in order that the country, during he progress of the war, might not be hampered by short-date securities; and, two, to increase revenue and reduce expenditure so that out of current revenue the country could meet interest and pensions, as well as a substantial portion of the war expenses. As to the question of income taxation, Sir Thomas said that before the war was over it was possible, if not probable, that there would be an income tax.

For the present he did not think it sound. Judging from the experience of the United States, all that Canada could hope to raise by income tax would be five or six million dollars and the cost of collection would be large.

The Finance Minister referred to the announcement of pending conscription, and believed it would result in a real sentimental argument against excess profits by business firms. He declared Mr. Graham's position was not well founded. If Mr. Graham was afraid of any special industry being jeopardized he might move for a return containing information as to that special industry.

Excess Profits on Foodstuffs.

Hon. Dr. Pugsley thought the public were entitled to know what were the excess profits of every firm producing and handling foodstuffs on which large increases in price had been charged.

Sir Thomas suggested that Dr. Pugsley move for this information, and his motion would be considered by the Government. After all, he (the Finance Minister) was in the hands of the House.

Facts the Public Should Know.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier pointed out that when Sir Thomas White talked in this way about being "in the hands of the House" he evaded the question. The House would not pass on any motion of the kind suggested until it had a judgment from the Minister of Finance. Nobody desired to know the private business of Mr. So-and-so, but there might be cases in which it was in the public interest to know and understand the facts. There were railway companies and shipping companies whose profits the House should have information about.

Will Not Withhold Proper Information.

Sir Thomas protested that he had no desire to keep from the House information which the House should have. If a motion were made in a bona fide manner in the public interest he would support that motion, but if it were merely inquisitorial he would not commit himself as to the course he would pursue.

Hon. Dr. Pugsley reminded the Minister that it was not mere inquisitiveness which caused members of the Opposition to seek information concerning profits made on flour. Profits running up to 100 per cent. had been made, and the public had a right to know what proportion of such profits went into the public Treasury.

Sir Wilfrid's Warm Reply to Minister.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier spoke warmly in reply to Sir Thomas White. Serious complaints had been made, he said, that certain firms and institutions had made undue profits—"made them out of the needs of the people, yes, made them out of the hunger of the people." Parliament and the public ought to know what firms and institutions these were, and the information should be of use in dealing with the situation.

Sir Thomas replied that this information had to be considered on its merits. If Sir Wilfrid would move for information he would be prepared to give quite favorable consideration to the motion.

What of Wheat and Flour Profits?

Mr. J. A. Robb, Huntingdon, asked the Finance Minister if the excess profits made out of wheat and flour would come under the business tax. It had been stated officially that several weeks ago 108,000,000 bushels of wheat were in the country, and since then the price had gone up $1. Then it had been stated that the Minister of Agriculture had to go out of the country for seed, and had to pay fifty cents per bushel for it. It had been stated that the Allies' Purchasing Commission owned all the wheat in Canada at the present time.

Sir Thomas White replied that he did not think the profits of milling companies had anything to do with the resolution before the House.

House has a Right to Know.

Hon. Dr. Pugsley considered that this question had a great deal to do with the resolution before the House Parliament had a right to know whether the profits from which the Minister proposed to take his revenue were 50, 100 or 200 per cent. Now was the time to bring down that information. It was a question in which the people of Canada were deeply interested. The people were being crushed by the high cost of living. It was astounding that flour had reached the price of $16 per barrel. Without the information desired, Dr. Pugsley maintained the House was asked to "put through the Minister's resolution in the dark."

"The Minister," said Dr. Pugsley, "seems to have made himself a partner with the millers in the business of boosting prices. He takes his share of their excess profits and seems quite satisfied with that. Neither he nor the Minister of Labour has done anything to bring down the cost of living. The Minister should not treat Parliament as though it were a machine to do his bidding."

Inexcusable Expenditures.

Mr. E. M. Macdonald maintained that the Minister should lay the information asked for on the table of the House. Even the trade and financial papers took the view that the people had a right to know the real situation. It was a mistake, Mr. Macdonald maintained, to tax business and leave accumulated wealth alone. There was no excuse for spending $47,000,000 on public works in the past three years. There was no excuse for the Government handing over nearly $4,000,000 for the Quebec and Saguenay Railway, in order to placate Sir Rodolphe Forget, an amount it was now proposed to increase by several millions. It was equally improper to spend large sums at this time on the Hudson Bay Railway.

In Estimates—Why?

Hon. Dr. Reid rose to say that very little work was being done on this railway, whereupon Dr. Pugsley retorted that there was a vote of more than three million dollars in the estimates for the road.

"That money will not all be spent" said Hon. Dr. Reid.

"Then what is the use of putting it in the estimates?" asked Sir Wilfrid Laurier, but he got no answer.

Urged Tax on Accumulated Wealth.

Mr. E. M. Macdonald urged the imposition of an income tax upon increase in excess of $20,000. There were millionaires in Canada who should do their share for the public Treasury in this war time. In the United States only $250,000,000 was expected from the taxes upon excess war profits, while some $760,000,000 was expected from those on accumulated wealth.

Sir Thomas White retorted that the United States had only just gone to war, and the position which that country took was not a criterion for Canada. The member for Pictou was trying to ride two horses.

"What horse are you riding?" questioned Mr. Macdonald.

"A horse that will win the war," replied the Finance Minister.

Yes, Builds You Up in 5 to 10 Days

Iron For the Blood and Phosphorus For the Nerves

Weak, anaemic, run-down, nervous persons will be glad to know that they can be restored back to their youth vigor by the discovery of this new drug called Bonised Phosphorus with Iron.

It is spring time now and every person needs something to build them up. Now you know as well as any doctor will tell you, the curse of spring time is impure blood. It takes many people to their grave, ruins health, makes you weak, runs you down and finally you are a physical wreck.

This new drug is a combination of iron and phosphorus. The iron acts directly on the blood while the phosphorus soothes and strengthens the nerves. You start today and take two or three tablets of Bonised Phosphorus with Iron after meals and in 5 to 10 days you will be 100 per cent. stronger.

This drug does not act like other iron tonics you have taken, but instead, it does not blacken the teeth, upset the stomach or make you constipated. This new drug is dispensed by one druggist in each city. P. O. Walker dispenses it for Peterborough.

WEATHER NO DETERRENT TO STONEY LAKE CROWD.

Quite a Number Went Up To-day for the Holiday.

Farmers with coon and bear coats arrived in town this morning, while citizens were leaving for their summer cottages at Stoney Lake. Such is one anomaly arising from the perversity of the weather man. The noon train from Port Hope had a special coach provided for a Toronto group, who were also bound for Kawarthadom to remain over the holiday and week-end. Their car was transferred to the Lakefield train. Among the local citizens who left for the lakes were: Messrs. D. W. Dumble, R. J. Winch, B. F. Ackerman, Benj. Shortly, Mrs. J. S. Knapman, Mrs. Canniff, Mr. T. H. G. Denne and family, Mr. and Mrs. John Nugent, and others.

SHELL EMBARGO RAISED.

Local Factory Output Can Now Be Moved East.

The embargo on eighteen and nineteen-pound shells which has been in force for nearly two weeks has been raised, and shipments are under way from local factories, which during that time have been forced to store the finished shells in the factories. The embargo was on shipments to the ports of Montreal and St. John, and had been caused by the congestion of exports at these terminals.

FOR BUSINESS GIRLS.

Some people are apt to write long serious articles to young business girls, advising them to go to bed early, to save all their strength and their brain power for their work, and to dress neatly and plainly. Such advice is perfectly good, of course, but the young girl who took it literally, and who tried to climb to success by such methods, would find herself, like Jill, to be a dull girl from all work and not enough play.

So I think that business girls should make themselves just as pretty as possible. A prety gal in an office is a ray of sunshine, and if she combines prettiness with common sense, she is invaluable to any concern. To be sure, her entire object in working and drawing a salary should not be to pose as a purely ornamental object, neither should she wear a lot of unsubstantial frills. These are out of place But her frilled blouses, her pretty hair, her soft voice and attractive dresses, are both a relief and a contrast to the ashes-looking garments of the men in the place. A girl need not sacrifice efficiency to prettiness, but she should be as pretty and stylish as she can.

HAMILTON PASTOR IS DOING SPLENDID WORK

Rev. Mr. Philpott, a Blacksmith Before Conversion, Now Preaches to Large Audiences — For Years He Lived on Loose Collections in a Mission

"One of the most remarkable men in Canada."—That is the oft-expressed opinion by those who know Pastor Philpott, of Hamilton. The pastor has been a frequent visitor to Peterborough and has preached in several of the city churches especially at Bethany Tabernacle.

Who is this non-denominational man, who for twenty years has labored in Hamilton with such pronounced success? Why has this one man retained his power and hold over the people to the extent that crowds are turned away every time he preaches?

Rev. P. W. Philpott now preaches to thousands in a $40,000 tabernacle. Thirty years ago he was a blacksmith in Chatham. One day he stopped at the curb to hear a Salvationist. His attention was arrested: he listened, went to the barracks, and was converted.

His father died when young Philpott was about six years of age, and the child became the head of the family. At thirteen years he left the public school. For nine years following 1884—the year of his conversion—he was an ardent disciple of General Booth, advancing by force of character to the rank of Brigadier with his headquarters in Toronto. Then followed years of evangelistic work in different churches. He also assisted in organizing a number of city missions, among them one at Hamilton.

HOW THE MISSION GREW.

In 1892 a mission was installed in a small upstairs hall at King and McNab streets, Hamilton. It thrived, outgrew its quarters, and then moved to an old saloon on Hughson street, near King William. Here a great work was done.

Mr. Philpott undertook the work of pastor in 1896. During the next nine years the meeting place changed several times. Some two years after Mr. Philpott came larger quarters were necessary and a hall was taken on the third floor opposite the Spectator Building, on James street south. Later the old Baptist Chapel on McNab street was leased, and several hundred dollars were spent in refitting and renovating. This it was thought would make a home for some time to come but in a few weeks this building was crowded out and many were turned away each Lord's Day for want of room.

During the winter, 1899, the Star Theatre (now the Savoy) was leased for Sunday evenings, and from eleven to twelve hundred persons heard the Gospel every Sunday.

In the Spring of 1901 the congregation purchased the present property and built the lecture hall at a cost of about $6,000. This was used for all purposes ntil the new Tabernacle was opened in June, 1907. This edifice cost $40,000. A modest mortgage is being paid off at the rate of $2,000 a year.

MR. PHILPOTT IN ACTION.

Just why the non-denominational Tabernacle is filled every Sunday morning and evening is best explained by a glimpse at the preacher, the choir and the people in the auditorium. Pastor Philpott prays in a tone low and clear and with conviction. He talks "from the shoulder," as a blacksmith might be expected to talk. His voice has a musical note. No tricks of the pulpit are in evidence. He walks, the length of a spacious platform with a limp-bound open Bible in his right hand. It is the word of God he preaches. He neither invites nor backs away from denominational or controversial interpretations of the Bible. He is stoutly, proudly, orthodox, and has no use for modern religious frills or the so-called Higher Criticism.

He is a man of fifty years—tall, impressive in word and act. He talks in modulated tones, but with emphasis where emphasis is necessary. He does not rant nor shriek. He thrills one by his personality, and by the directness of his message.

Many other congregations have called him, but he has remained "with his own people," because as he puts it, "God wills it."

This brief statement by Mr. Philpott gives an index to the man:

"When I came to Hamilton, the Mission had but 35 members, and all of them were very poor. I decided that if they would pay the rent and supply the heat I would trust for my living without putting them under any obligations. I took the loose offerings received at the different meetings: anything in envelopes went for the purpose specified. My stipend did not average $12 a week for the first three years.

"The present membership of the Tabernacle is over 1,200. We seat about 1,700 and the building is always filled in the evenings of the Lord's Day we can not accommodate all the people, except in the very hot months, August and September. The free-will offerings will run about $16,000 and $17,000 a year. Of this amount about $3,500 is given for the pastor's salary, year our offering for foreign missions was $4,500. We support 11 workers on the foreign field. These are all our own workers, but working under different mission boards.

CALLS TO OTHER CHURCHES.

"We have never thought to build another denomination. Our church is a real people's church. We antagonise none; we simply seek to preach the Gospel and help men to God. Our supporters come from all denominations and work in the utmost harmony.

"It is quite true that since I have been in Hamilton I have received numerous calls to other churches, including Boston, Chicago and New York. I have taken part for the last 15 years in many of the largest conferences and conventions held throughout the United States, and if I were to accept all the invitations received I would never be at home at all.

"The Gospel Tabernacle really enjoys a perennial revival; the number of persons professing conversion at the regular services of the church will average considerably over 200 a year for the last ten years. Our present property cost about $40,000. This is all paid for excepting $15,000, and this amount we reduce every year from $1,000 to $2,000."

FREE-WILL OFFERINGS.

This remarkable church never allows anything to get inside its doors for the purpose of raising money. Every branch of the church is supported by free will offerings, and for years the church treasurer has reported a surplus on hand in every department.

No passing tribute to Pastor Philpott would be complete without a reference to his wife, who has been an extremely capable assistant. They have had thirteen children, 8 sons and 5 daughters—and although their income was often less than $1 a day, have reared them to lives of usefulness.

gunner with the 25th Battery, and was made a lieutenant at the Battle of the Somme, had just finished his second year at the Toronto University.

Sergeant Major Philpott, who enlisted as a gunner with the 26th Battery, was graduated from McGill University, two years ago. He has been in France since.

Stuart M. Philpott enlinted with the 47th Battery and is now with the 81st Battery as a Sergeant. He, too, is in France.

Of the boys, Mrs. Philpott says: "They are doing exactly what I wished for them—proving themselves worthy of their father and their country."

Miss Ruth Philpott is a missionary in North Nigeria.

The younger children are being cared for so that they can take a place in life worthy of such parents.

HAPPY CHILDREN

Are the ones that get along best. They play better and grow better, and do better work at school. Often the cause of a child's dullness can be traced to poor eyesight, and it is too bad to have their progress hampered in this way when it can be so easily corrected. Dr. Fowler makes a special feature of the care of children's eyes and advises an examination if there appears to be eye trouble.

CHATHAM SOLVES LIVING COST PROBLEM

CHATHAM, May 23.—High cost of living got a solar plexus blow Saturday when the Civic Purchasing Committee sold nearly two hundred pounds of butter at 36 cents a pound, as compared with 42 and 44 cents asked on the local market. Some 150 bags of potatoes were sold at $3.90 a bag delivered, as compared with $4.50 to $4.75 in the stores.

Those who handled the supplies for the Civic Board did their work free of all cost. Another 300 pounds of butter could easily have been disposed of. Next Saturday there will be at least one and probably two cars of potatoes for sale at $3.60 a bag, and several hundred pounds of butter will be ready for sale. Eggs will also be sold. Arrangements are under way to buy a car of flour, which will likely be sold for about $6 hundred pounds, as compared with the price of $7.50 now. Orders already booked for supplies exceed the quantity sold Saturday. Ald. Clements, George W. Wand and A. J. Kearney are the Purchasing Committee working under authority from the City Council.

A square towel fastened by a loop to the belt of the kitchen apron will save many a nickle in the laundry bills.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of Pte. Herbert Sweeney, who was killed in action on May 23rd, 1916:

We should not murmur or complain,
For where he's gone there is no pain;
Short was his life, long is his rest,
God took him home, where He thought it best.
Father and Mother.

Oh! call my brother back to me,
I cannot play alone;
The summer comes with flowers and bees,
Where has my brother gone?

And by the brooks and in the grave,
Are all the wanders o'er;
Oh, while my brother with me played,
Would I have loved him more.
—Written by his brother,
Jackie Sweeney.

AT WORK IN THE GARDEN

Practical Pointers for the Amateur Gardener — What To Do and When To Do It — Seasonable Hints

Enough tomatoes may be grown in most backyard gardens to supply the table during the season. Rich, well prepared soil and an abundance of sunshine are absolutely necessary if the best results are to be obtained. On the south side of a board fence is a good location for tomato plants. A narrow strip, say 30 feet long and 3 feet wide, will suffice for a dozen good tomato plants. One dozen plants should produce a sufficient supply for the average household during the late summer and early fall months. Tomatoes of the early variety are best for the backyard garden of limited space. Securing ripe tomatoes early in the season means a supply when prices are high. By canning time they are usually plentiful and are offered at a reasonable price. The advantage of being able to gather tomatoes for slicing from your own garden with their full flavour and sound flesh makes the labour of preparing the soil, planting them and caring for the plants, well worth while.

BUYING TOMATO PLANTS

Those who have not raised this season's plants from seed must buy them. To have complete success with tomatoes such plants as have been well grown must be selected. Many of the plants offered for sale at the stores and from the pedlar's waggon are far from being of good quality. Tall, spindly, sickly-looking plants, such as are too often offered for sale in this manner, are not a good buy. The height of the plant counts for little unless it has a good thick stem, well developed leaves, and every appearance of being a perfectly healthy specimen.

The sturdy kind of plants have been skillfully grown. They have been hardened by exposure to the open air and will not suffer from being transferred to the garden. The other kind have been unduly forced under high temperature, and have not been hardened. These will hang their heads when set out and take a long time to recover, if indeed they recover at all.

KNOW WHAT YOU GROW.

It is well to know the name of the variety you are buying. Plants offered for sale by reliable dealers have been grown from the seed of the best varities. Usually a wooden tag bearing the name will be found sticking in the earth alongside the plant. Purchasers of plants should insist on proof that the kind they are getting are the kind they want, and should insist that they be of an early ripening variety.

Good specimens of early varieties will produce early fruit if properly handled. They will not ripen early unless they are encouraged to do so by ample fertilizer, constant care and cultivation. Following is the method employed by one successful grower who raises tomatoes—both early and late—for the market.

CULTURE OF TOMATOES.

"The requirements for ripening an extra early crop of tomatoes are simple but vital. First is a rich, mellow soil to hasten maturity. To what is ordinarily called an extremely rich garden soil I add a handful of steamed bone meal for each plant mixed in the hill just before setting. If the weather remains cool as the fruit is forming, especially in the light green stage, I add a teaspoonful of nitrate of soda worked into the surface around the plant, or give a liberal soaking with liquefied stable manure."

The plants are set out three feet apart. The tomato being a warm weather vegetable that thrives best in a constant temperature, he provides some kind of a windbreak to the north and west. If any danger of late frosts at night the plants should be covered over.

Frequent hoeing is essential, and water should be supplied if the weather is hot and dry. If allowed to suffer for want of water the setback will prevent the early ripening of well matured fruit.

THE PLANT TO STAKE.

Plants are tied to a single stake. The leaves are removed to a height of a foot or more from the ground. The pruning is done so that the sun's rays will reach the ground round the stem of the plant, aiding in a healthy growth and early fruiting.

If plants are limited to not more than two main stalks or branches, pinch out the little shoot or suckers that appear in the angles where the leaves join the main stalk. These shoots would make more vines, and eventually bear fruit, but not early fruit. So, left on, they will lessen the chances of securing early fruit of superior size and quality from the main stalks.

When the plants are about 30 inches high it is best to pinch off all terminal buds—buds at the ends of the branches—and thereafter do not allow any but fruit buds to develop. By this process the plant concentrates its root and leaf energies on the business of growing and ripening fruit. By following this method you will not get as many tomatoes as might be produced if the vines were allowed to develop according to their own sweet will, but you will secure a good crop of superior quality fruit and what is more important, you will secure it early in the season when the market price is high.

THINGS TO REMEMBER.

Stake each plant, allow not more than two main stalks, pinch off terminal buds when plants are 30 inches high, and do not allow anything but fruit buds to develop.

Remove shoots or suckers that appear in the angles where the leaves join the main stalk, also all the leaves, etc., to a height of a foot from the ground.

Keep the hoe busy and do not neglect to supply ample moisture during dry spells.

Make up your mind to produce the finest tomatoes in the neighborhood at the earliest date and you will get a crop to be proud of, and at the same time reduce the household expenses.

Set out tomatoes about May 24 to June 1, allowing the best part of three feet between the plants. Secure stakes and place them in position.

Know what you are getting when you buy plants, and insist on getting healthy plants of a reliable early variety.

"Earliana" (bright red), one of the earliest tomatoes in existence, would seem to hold the record as an early producer. The best that can be said for other varities is that they are "almost as early as Earliana." It may be said with truth that other varieties will produce more fruit at an early date, but not as early or an earlier date.

Chalk's Early Jewel (bright scarlet) is a great garden favourite, and perhaps it might be said that the fruit is more smooth and uniform than the earlier variety. June Pink is a favourite among those who prefer a pink variety. Imperial is another of the pink kind. Ponderosa is a grand variety of the mammoth kind. It is bright crimson in colour. The various dealers have their favourites usually with the firm and name attached as a handle to the name of the variety. No doubt these varieties are excellent, for their reputation goes with them.

The "Byron Dark Pink" is an extra early variety. A varieties mentioned are worthy of a place in the garden, and afford a good choice. These do not exhaust the list.

WHOOPING COUGH.

Mrs. Charles Lowell, Agassiz, B.C., writes: "Seven of our nine children had whooping cough the same winter and we attribute their cure to Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. We always have it in the house, and recommend it as the king of all medicines. I was formerly entirely cured of protruding piles by using Dr. Chase's Ointment."

HAD AWFUL ATTACKS OF HEART TROUBLE

For 5 or 6 Years

Diseases and disorders of the heart and nervous system have become frightfully prevalent of late years.

One can scarcely pick up a paper but he will find recorded instances of sudden deaths through heart failure, or of prominent men and women unable to prosecute their ordinary business or profession on account of a breaking down of the nervous system.

We do not desire to unnecessarily alarm anyone, but to sound a word of warning.

When the heart begins to beat irregularly, palpitates and throbs, has shooting pains through it, it is time to stop and think.

To all sufferers from heart and nerve troubles Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills can give prompt and permanent relief.

Mrs. Frank Arseneau, Newcastle, N. B., writes: "I had awful attacks of heart trouble for the past five or six years, and as I had tried many kinds of medicine without getting any better I decided to give Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills a trial, and to my surprise I found ease from the second dose. I continued taking them until I had used six boxes, and now I feel as well as can be.

"At the present time my sister is using them for nervousness and finds great comfort by their use."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c or three boxes for $1.25 at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto Ont.

you send a parcel to your soldier friend in training or at the front, don't forget to put in some Zam-Buk. The soldiers say they cannot get enough of it.

Capt. Brooks, No. 4 Company, 7th Battalion, writing from the front, says: "Tell my friends, if they want to help us, we should be awfully glad of some Zam-Buk. We find it just splendid, and can use all that is sent us."

Nothing takes the place of Zam-Buk amongst the soldiers. They use it for rheumatism, blistered feet, sore hands, cuts, burns and scratches. Being antiseptic, Zam-Buk prevents festering and blood-poisoning. For eczema, or any skin trouble, it is equally good, and for piles there is nothing to compare with Zam-Buk.

AUSTRALIA WILL BOOM.

Good Results Expected From New Railroads.

Only forty-one miles of track are now needed to complete the Australian transcontinental railway. The importance of this news can hardly be over-estimated, for the completion of this small piece of trackage promises to have an influence on Australian development comparable in a way with that exerted upon the development of this country by the opening of the Canadian Pacific Railroad. The immediate effect will be to link up the capitals of the five continental states of the Australian Commonwealth by establishing an unbroken line of communication from Brisbane, on the east, through Sydney, Melbourne, and Adelaide, to Perth, on the west, a distance just a little short of thirty-five hundred miles.

The Australian transcontinental railway has been long in the building, and is the result of the linking up of isolated stretches of lines constructed in and by the different states rather than of a carefully matured program of development. By the year 1889 railway communication had been established between the four capital cities of Brisbane, Sydney, Melbourne, and Adelaide, a distance of 1,790 miles, through the connecting at the borders of the state railway lines of Queensland, New South Wales, Victoria, and South Australia, which line was in time extended from Adelaide northwest to Port Augusta, a distance of 240 miles. About the same time Western Australia had built a state railway eastward for 373 miles from Perth to Kalgoorlie, in the heart of the gold fields.

Nothing was done looking toward the tracking of this 1,062-mile gap between Port Augusta, in South Australia, and Kalgoorlie, in Western Australia, until 1907, when the Commonwealth Government ordered a preliminary survey of a line to connect these extremities of the existing lines from the east and west. As a result of that survey the Commonwealth decided, four years later, to construct the railway as a government line. Work was started at both ends in September, 1912, and construction has progressed so rapidly that there now remain only forty-one miles of track to connect the Port Augusta and Kalgoorlie division.

It is improbable that the opening of the first Australian transcontinental line will have the same immediate effect as did the opening of the first Canadian transcontinental line. The Australian railway, and more particularly the thousand-mile stretch between Port Augusta and Kalgoorlie, passes through a relatively poor and barren land, which does not now seem susceptible of the same agricultural development as the land pierced by the Union Pacific. And, again, the largest results cannot be anticipated from the Australian trunk line because of the lack of uniformity of gauge throughout its length, a defect traceable to the different gauges adopted by the different states in the first days of railroad building. In the trip from Brisbane to Perth four transfers of passengers and freight will be necessary, and the trouble, delay, and added expense of these transfers, already of appreciable magnitude along the eastern section of the line, will naturally become more serious along the entire line as the volume of business increases.

Notwithstanding the existence of this present defect, which the Commonwealth Government is already preparing to remedy, the completion of the Australian trascontinental railway will undoubtedly facilitate interstate trade and, in conjunction with its principal branches, will allow the produce of inland areas to find its natural outlet at the nearest port.

A Good Shot.

The town boaster was in a reminiscent mood and for the benefit of the crowd of young loafers gathered at the village store had been recalling the stirring times on the first election day after the war in the southern town where he had lived.

"Yes-sir-ee, that was a hot time," he concluded. "They was a lot of shootin' took place, and I done my share of it, I tell you. Why, fellers, I shot and shot until my old revolver just felt hot to my hands."

Turning to another old man who had come from the same southern town, he said rather condescendingly: "Why, Jim, you must 'a' been there that day. How many times did you shoot?"

Jim spat with deliberation, rolled his eyes reflectively and answered: "Jest once. I was right in the thick of it when the fight begun, and I shot round the corner and down into a cellar."—Youth's Companion.

No Black on Nature's Palette.

Nature uses no black in any part of her work. I will not except the blackberry and the so called black pansy. On a bright, clear day shadows on the snow are pale ultramarine blue; under a blue sky in midsummer the color of the placid lake is cobalt blue and the shadows on the grass are lilac; on a weathered gray board walk they are nearly as blue as the sky itself. The palpitating atmosphere of a warm July day lifts the coloring of the landscape to a higher but softer key instead of reducing it with gray, and in the autumn, when the sugar maple's leaves are turned to gold, the shadows on the trunk and every gray rock in the vicinity are tinged with strong lilac. In fine, when the sun shines everything, even the shadow, which we are prone to believe is gray, is replete with color.—F. Schuyler Mathews.

REMAKING A NATION.

Effect of the War on the British People.

"The opinion has been widespread among social workers in America that the war has crushed liberalism in England. They have formed this opinion because social work has been suspended, trade-union rules have been abrogated, dissenters like Bertrand A. W. Russell silenced, Russian revolutionary centres in London suppressed. But it is a characteristic of experts working in detail to miss the main currents of tendency. No friend of radical democracy need be worried by the results of the last two years. The blood spilled by the working-classes at the front has been justified by the profound modifications wrought in English consciousness. A nation mobilised and under arms is a rich field for radical ideas. Blood fertilises the soil for change. Those of the school of Curzon and Gwynne, who believed that the good old days of special privilege would be restored by conscription, are doomed to an awakening more thorough than befell the French reactionaries of 1790. For this is not an affair of a few noble heads. It is the remaking of a nation.

"It is a misreading of English character to think that anything remotely resembling the state socialism of Germany, the card-indexing of the community for vocational training, the regimenting of the intellectual life into a body of state-controlled professors, will result from the present English revolution. The social change in England is not coming with any such over-emphasised nationalism. The Englishman wants to be let alone for all his personal choices. He wants to disagree with official statements. He will not be coerced even for 'his good,' as that good is seen by another. Nor will the change come at an indeterminate, spreading internationalism, such as his infected radical thought for half a century. It will be English, inside an English environment."—Arthur Gleason, in the February Century.

The Children of Paris.

Of the life of Paris the little ones are still the most interesting part. These children, who for two years have lived amidst daily anxiety, sorrow and sadness, cannot but be impressed by the grandeur of the time. The older ones, those who understand, learn every day beautiful lessons of heroism, of courage, of confident endurance. The war is the greatest topic in all the schools, and is used to teach the pupils the most sublime sentiments. Whenever a patriotic ceremony takes place, the children are brought to feel, to admire the courage of their older brothers.

After school, these children, dreaming only of heroism and sacrifice, play at war games. They all walk like soldiers, marking their steps in following an imaginary military band, and it is most interesting to watch them, in the Bois de Boulogne, or any public park, going through their exercises, making terrific assaults and doing fearful execution in their bayonet charges. They are all eager for outdoor sports, and it is a pleasure to watch them, with their martial air, most of them dressed in khaki and wearing soldier caps. It must also be said, in praise of the children of Paris, that, as boy scouts, they have rendered good service in the war.

Even the babies want to have their part in it. You often see fat little boys, not old enough to set by themselves, dressed like their fathers, in a costume of "bleu horizon," wearing on their collar the number of their father's regiment and on their sleeves his grade. They also are decorated like their fathers, by a dainty little war cross or ribbon of the legion of honor on their breast, and they try to walk as military a step as their short legs will permit them. It is most amusing to hear babies talking of imaginary trenches, Germans, and assaults to cute little girls dressed as Red Cross nurses who have their stories to tell of their wounded and the hospital work.—Jeanne Saurin in Southern Woman's Magazine.

Fashions in Fish.

It seems as if there are fashions in fish just as there are in wearing apparel. A fish that brings in German markets nearly four times as much per pound as our fresh mackerel, and considerably more than haddock, is thrown away by our fishermen because no one wants to eat it. And it is mighty good fish too, says the Popular Science Monthly for February. Those who eat it praise it for its delicate flavor. Even the English like it. Every year they consume three thousand tons of it. Yet we will have none of it. This fish is known as the goose-fish, angler-fish, devil-fish, and monk-fish. True, its appearance is against it, but still the epicures in England and Germany demand it because it is delicious. Analyses made by the Bureau of Fisheries on samples show that goose-fish contain considerably more protein than flounder, slightly more than a cod, a little less than halibut, and considerably less than sirloin steak. The goose-fish has an average length of three feet and is broad and flat, somewhat resembling the flounder in general outline.

Where Palms Are Grown.

At Bordighera, in Italy, there is to be found one of the most singular industries in the world. It is here that almost all the "palms," which is used so freely on Palm Sunday, is grown. The common date palm does particularly well in this favored spot, and visitors are never tired of wandering amongst the groves. Some months before the time for cutting the leaves arrives each tree is bunched up like a root of celery and a most odd appearance is the result. This practice is followed in order to keep away the light from the inner leaves until they become blanched, in which state they are used.—Wide World Magazine.

Upturned or "bag" hems finish many of the new coats.

Blue is the favored color in foulard.

THE COAT HANGERS.

Here is an idea for the woman who is looking for a something new to contribute to her patriotic sales: Take the broad wooden coat-hangers and paint them white. Then make a case of single crochet, fitted to the shape of the hanger. Two sides are made, and then overhanded together along the edge of the hanger. White with an edging of blue or pink makes a dainty-looking hanger. The hook is covered with single crochet, in blue or pink to match the edge on the crocheted cover.

A dainty hanger for the baby's best clothes can be shaped from a stout piece of cardboard. This is then padded and covered with white muslin. A lawn cover, with pink and blue tiny flowers, is worked and fitted over the pad. The edge of the cover is finished with an edging of narrow lace, but it is not sewed shut, and this cover can easily be slipped off when in need of laundering. These little holders keep the yokes and tops of the little dresses in shape, even when they are placed in a chest or drawer. If a circle is cut in the cardboard and hook and eyelets worked in the cover, the baby's dresses can be hung up.

CALLED TO TRYST BY GIRL, ROBBED BY MEN

Frances Gilbert, a pretty 17-year-old girl; Morris Werner, aged 20; Max Gersten, aged 19, and Morris Lieberman, aged 19, were locked up following their arraignment in a Williamsburg Court on a charge of assault and robbery. The police say all have confessed their part in a plot by which Lawrence Baron, aged 20, was lured from his home, attacked and robbed of jewellery valued at $400.

Baron was called to the telephone about 11 o'clock, and the Gilbert girl, giving the name of Lillian Peck, said she was anxious to make his acquaintance. Baron with two friends went to Bedford avenue and Heyward street and met her. Impressed by her good looks, Baron sent his friends away. As he was walking along Heyward street with the girl, two men sprang from a basement, and, while one held Baron, the other took his diamond scarfpin and a diamond ring, overlooking $250 in cash in a hip pocket. The men escaped in an automobile which was waiting. The Gilbert girl declared she had been robbed of $7, but Baron called a policeman.

Detectives say she confessed her part in the robbery, and the arrest of the men followed. Lieberman, the police say, admits conceiving the plot. The Gilbert girl said she ran away from home two weeks ago.

FORTY-FIVE YEARS OLD

Just when a man or woman is nearing the half century mark the discovery is made that nature does not make repairs to health unaided as in younger days.

The kidneys for instance once out of order do not right themselves. As a consequence the usual sequel to derangement of the Kidneys is acute inflammation, which indicates its presence by pains in the small of the back; Rheumatism in one of its many forms; Lumbago or perhaps inflammation of the Bladder; Brick-dust deposits or other Kidney and Bladder troubles develop.

The man or woman becomes a slave to aches and pains, although relief can be obtained by those willing to take advice or profit by example.

Hundreds have found the remedy for Kidney and Bladder trouble in Gin Pills. Some have heard about Gin Pills from friends who have been cured, others read our newspaper announcements. Some wrote for free sample; others bought from their dealer on our guarantee of money back if not benefited. Gin Pills, too, relieve Constipation and its attendant ills. 26

You, man or woman of 45 and beyond, you need the help of Gin Pills to promptly restore your kidneys and remove pain. Surely it is worth a trial. Sold by all druggists and dealers everywhere at 50c. per box, or 6 boxes for $2.50. If you wish to try a free sample, write to the National Drug and Chemical Company of Canada, Limited, Toronto.

Proverbs Adapted For War Time

Eat to live; the grocer needs an eight hour day for a change.

Weigh the groceries coming in and they'll find the way harder out.

When prosperity flies in at the window, garbage slips out at the door.

If he giveth an inch, take an ell—and plant the last row to radishes.

A tempest in a teapot costs even less, but it doesn't go so far as a stew in a kettle.

Do your bit by letting the garbage man get the kink out of his back.

This season there is little use for either the weevil or the deep blue pea.

DUMMER BOYS APPRECIATE WOMEN'S INSTITUTE WORK

Warsaw Women's Institute Receives Many Letters of Appreciation from Peterboro County Soldiers — Warsaw News

WARSAW, May 23.—Mrs. George Taylor, Secretary of the Warsaw Women's Institute has received letters from many of the Dummer boys overseas thanking the Institute for the boxes sent in March. A few of the letters are given below:

Dear Madam,—Just a few lines thanking you very much for the parcel you sent me, and which I received the 20th day of April. I very much appreciate your sending such nice comforts for us boys. It is the third parcel I have received from the Warsaw Women's Institute but have been too busy to answer them, so please excuse me. I thank all the ladies of the Institute for the kindness they have shown to me and wish them the best of good luck for the year, and may God bless you and your good work. I am, dear Madam.

Yours sincerely,
PTE. H. RICHARDSON.

Witley Camp, April 12, 1917

Dear Mrs. Taylor,—Just a small note to thank you and the ladies of the Institute for the nice box which I received a few days ago. It certainly helps us fellows some to think that the people at home have not forgotten us. I saw a Peterborough Examiner last week and noticed a little item in the Warsaw news that the Women's Institute were sending comforts to the boys in France, and those in training and a few days after my box arrived. I can tell you I sure was glad to get it. The socks were fine, I guess the boys in France would be pleased to get them too. How are all the Warsaw people? I guess they will be thinking I am in a Home Guard Brigade. Sometimes I think so myself, but I guess we are due to move soon for we are on "marching orders" and that sounds good to us, after seven months here. Well I think I had better close now as I hear the supper call. Thanking you again for the box, I remain.

Yours sincerely,
G. W. B. AITKEN,
52nd Battery.

France, April 16, 1917

Dear Mrs. Taylor,—I am writing you to-night to thank you very much for the parcel the Warsaw Women's Institute were very kind to send me. I am sure it is very good of you to remember us out here. I received your parcel just as I came out of the trenches and we had to come through water nearly up to our knees, so you can guess how I appreciated those nice socks you sent. Of course, as you know, we cannot mention anything about the war, but I am quite well as yet. I did not go to the 2nd Battalion, but was sent from the Base to the No. 1 Tunnelling Company, Canadian Engineers, B.E.F., France. I suppose everything is much the same around Warsaw. I haven't met any of the Warsaw boys out here so don't know how they are getting on. Well I don't think there is any more for me to write, except to ask you to thank the Warsaw Women's Institute for the parcel, they were so kind as to send me. I remain.

LOCAL WEEKLY MARKET REPORT

The week has recorded a decline of 75c a bag in flour. The recent advance touched $8.25 a bag or $16.50 a barrel, where it held for a few days and gradually receded to $15.00 a barrel or $7.50 a bag.

This is the retail price quoted by the grocers. Of course some ordered supplies on the rise and at the present price are confronted with a loss.

EGGS ARE FIRM.

The stores are quoting eggs at 40c a dozen and the market is generally firm. Produce houses are reported buying everything at sight and there are many indications that the cold storage houses have already received the bulk of the Spring production. Grocers state that eggs are scarce in the country. Commission men have been active paying top prices.

POTATOES HOLDING.

New potatoes are arriving but the demand for them has not only maintained the price but even increased it. Old stocks are steady at about 75c a peck wholesale.

CHEESE INACTIVE.

There has been practically no movement in cheese. London reported a price of 23 7-8c but this was one of the few sales. The export situation has not yet been cleared up and buying has been desultory and for actual demands.

Butter continues steady retailing from 42c to 46c a pound. The cheese impasse has been diverting cream somewhat, but not to an appreciable extent.

GRAIN PRICES.

Wheat per bush.	$2.70
Oats, per bush.	.80
Rye, per bush.	$1.25
Barley, per bush.	$1.15
Small peas, per bush.	$2.50
Blue peas, per bush.	$2.00
Buckwheat, per bush	$1.25

HIDES.

The prices of hides are as follows:

Veal skins	25c to 28c
"Deacons" each	$1 to $1.50
Yearlings "runner-kip"	15c to 17c
Sheep skins	$1 to $3
Tallow, per lb.	7c to 8c
Washed wool, per lb.	45c to 47c
Unwashed wool, per lb.	35c to 37c
Matthews-Blackwell quote for hogs.	$16.40

the city from Port Hope, and before he again departed from Toronto on an evening train to begin a two-day recruiting tour in the Peterborough district.

"I have been at several points in the Province since Sir Robert Borden made his conscription announcement, and have not heard a dissenting voice to the proposal," he added. "The whole country is demanding conscription, not only of man-power but of wealth and the nationalizing of all resources, to bring this war to an earlier conclusion."

"I firmly believe there will be a generous response everywhere. Even Quebec will fall in line. There are some elements in that Province disgruntled, but these misunderstandings will be adjusted, and conscription will, I believe, become regarded in the most satisfactory solution of the whole recruiting question."

"Have you any idea of the plan which the Government proposes to adopt in enforcing conscription?" asked The Star.

"I have not, nor do I think that anyone in a military position should express his own ideas upon the subject lest they should embarrass the Government. I can only repeat that nothing has been done by the Government since the war began that has so pleased the people as the announcement that selective conscription is to be applied to Canada."

Col. Henry C. Osborne, A.A.G. also Col. Windeyer claimed they had no information whatever as to the method the Government intended to pursue in putting conscription into effect, although both expressed themselves as convinced that the men required would be speedily obtained.

Stomach Troubles Due To Acidity

So Says New York Physician.

So-called stomach troubles, such as indigestion, wind, stomach-ache and inability to retain food, are in probably nine cases out of ten simply evidence that fermentation is taking place in the food contents of the stomach causing the formaton of gas and acids. Wind distends the stomach and causes that full, oppressive feeling sometimes known as heartburn, while the acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach. The trouble lies entirely in the excessive secretion of acid and the fermentation of food. Such fermentation is unnatural, and may involve harmful consequences if not corrected. To stop or prevent fermentation of food contents of the stomach and to neutralize the acid and render it bland and harmless, a teaspoonful of bisurated magnesia, perhaps the best and most effective corrector of acid stomach known, should be taken in a quarter of a glass of hot or cold water immediately after eating, or whenever wind of acidity is felt. This stops the fermentation, and neutralizes the acidity in a few moments. Fermentation, wind and acidity are unnecessary. Stop or prevent them by the use of a proper antacid, such as bisurated magnesia, which can be obtained from any druggist and thus enable the stomach to do its work properly without being hindered by gas and excessive acids.

GERMANS ADVISED TO EAT GRASS

COPENHAGEN, May 22.—Berlin is now feeling the potato shortage. The residents of the capital have been warned that it may be impossible to supply five pounds to everybody this week, but that those who are unable to obtain the full ration will be given cakes.

The supply of pork is short, and it will be sold only on Thursdays.

Another announcement says that a reduction in the present meat ration after August 15 is being considered. In view of the food shortage Prof. Weldner, an agricultural expert at Passau, Bavaria, advises the people to follow the example of Nebuchadnezzar and eat grass. He informs them that the red clover and lucerne (alfalfa) both may be used for the making of tasty dishes for human consumption.

U. S. ARMY WILL BUILD 32 HUGE CAMPS

Military Towns To Spring Up To House the Great New Fighting Force

WASHINGTON. — Complete plans for housing 22,000 men at each of thirty-two divisional cantonment camps, in which the war army is to be trained, have been worked out by the War Department officials, and construction work will be undertaken as soon as commanders of the military departments have designated the sites.

Twelve of the camps will go to the Southeastern Department, with the headquarters at Charleston, S. C., commanded by Major General Wood, making 264,000 troops assigned to that department. It will thus become one of the greatest departments in the country. Six camps will be established in the Central Department, six in the Southern, three in the Western, four in the Eastern, and one in the Northeastern Department.

In effect, the project is to build thirty-two towns complete, with all necessary equipment and facilities. It will require 6,000,000 feet of lumber, which was adopted because the price of canvas is high and the supply very short.

There will be 2,000 buildings in each encampment. These will include quarters for the officers and men, stables, kitchens, mess halls, bath houses and storerooms, in addition to numerous structures for special purposes.

Each town will cover a little more than a square mile of ground, not including the big tracts of land necessary for drilling and military operations during the training.

Sunday School Lesson Questions

The Holy Spirit and His Work. (Pentecost Lesson) John 15:26-16:14.

Golden Text: He shall teach you all things. John 14:26.

1. Verse 26. Why does Jesus call the Holy Spirit "The Comforter?"
2. In what different way was the Holy Spirit to come to Christ's disciples, from the way he had been with them
3. How does the Holy Spirit testify of Jesus?
4. Verse 27. Which more effectually proclaims Jesus' preaching, or personal testimony?
5. Chap. 16:1-3. What was the real cause of the persecution of Jesus and of the early Christians? (See Verse 3.)
6. If a class of Christians, in the enjoyment of the Holy Spirit, as Jesus here states, were to habitually testify of their experience, how would they be treated by the average church to-day?
7. Verses 4-6. Is the reason that Christians are persecuted so little to-day, because they do not enjoy, nor profess the type of Christianity here taught, or some other reason,
8. Verse 7. What connection did the going away of Jesus have, with the coming of the Holy Spirit?
9. What reason, if any, is there for the belief that the Holy Spirit is the same Divine Spirit that dwelt in Jesus?
10. Verses 8-11. What is the meaning of "reprove the world of sin?"
11. What is it to "reprove the world of righteousness?"
12. What is it to "reprove the world of judgment?"
13. Why would it not be a fair interpretation of this statement of Jesus, to say that, the Holy Spirit will "convict" us when we are wrong, when we are right, and give us clear judgment to distinguish right from wrong?
14. Verses 12, 13. Why did Jesus hold back a part of the truth from his disciples, that is, why were they then not able to "bear" it
15. Why can the Holy Spirit teach some things that Jesus could not teach them in the flesh? (See chap. 14:26.)
16. Would it be safe, or not, and why, for a true man to put Absolute reliance in the Holy Spirit, to be taught by him "all things?"
17. If it is literally true that the Holy Spirit lives in our bodies, why may we not fully trust him to keep us from ALL sin, and to "guide us into ALL truth?"
18. Verse 13. To what extent may a Spirit led Christian know "things to come?"
19. Verse 14. How, and for what reason, will the Holy Spirit "glorify" Jesus?
20. Why is it that no person can really know Jesus without the illumination of the Holy Spirit?

PUBLIC OPINION

THE LAST WAR.

The attitude of France towards the war has perhaps seldom been expressed more exactly than in the following simple words of a Frenchman recorded by a recent writer: It has always been thought, this writer says, that the glory of victory filled a large part of the mind of the French soldier. My friend did not think so. They would go on fighting to the end—nothing could alter their resolve. When victory came they would welcome it, for their land would be redeemed, but there would be no talk of glory. The real thing about victory would be finality, the recognition that such a horror as the present struggle could never come into the world again.

TWO ARE ONE AGRICULTURALLY.

(Christian Science Monitor.)

There is practical reciprocity between the United States and Canada now, so far as foodstuffs are concerned. If an obstacle to the free exchange of products remains, it is likely soon to be removed. Therefore, the United States and Canada will plough, harrow and plant this spring, and reap and gather, next fall, to all intents and purposes, as one nation and with one great object in view. The interest of the United States in Canada's planting will be as keen as the interest it will feel in planting on its own side of the line, and vice versa. Canada has sent hundreds of thousands of its young men to the front. It is, therefore, in greater need of material for farm labour than the United States. The United States cannot help the Dominion farmer without helping itself.

BAR LUXURIES.

(Rochester Post-Express.)

The world has just now far less need of luxuries than of necessaries, and no person can be criticised who denies himself the one in order to give the other to people in need.

PRODUCER vs. CONSUMER.

(Toronto Telegram.)

Canadianism has been perverted more and more into a system of taking care of the producer and leaving the consumer to take care of himself. The desire of the milling companies to inflate the price of their securities on the market is much more conspicuous than the desire of the milling companies to pay the farmer a fair price for his wheat or to charge the consumer a fair price for flour. Greed on the part of the manufacturers and Ottawa's failure to restrain their greed has weakened the whole principle of Canadianism in this country's trade and industry.

SUGAR FLOUR.

While the brainiest men of Europe are working over the war situation, new geniuses are arising in the ranks of the manufacturers, farmers and ordinary workmen to solve the food supply problems. In the northern part of France a new flour is being made from sugar beets. It is being used for bread and for cattle food, as well as for certain brewing processes, says the Popular Science Monthly.

The fresh beet pulp is poured into a vat into which currents of fresh air are introduced for drying. Then it is passed through a series of gratings which rotate one above another. After this the pulp is delivered into compartments in which the temperature of the air is gradually increased to about 250 degrees Fahrenheit. It is then sufficiently free from moisture to be pulverized and used as flour.

THE WILL TO WIN.

(Chicago Tribune.)

The United States must win this war. We do not need to flatter ourselves that our allies without us, would lose it. For our purposes it does not matter whether they would or not. The United States must win it, in some fashion, some time, whether nations crack and the skies fall.

In military psychology there is only one spirit that is useful. It is the will to conquer, the will to win.

We must win, and we express our determination in our own way, that will hurt no one so long as the determination is there.

We've GOT to lick 'em.

NEED OF THRIFT.

(New York Sun.)

Waste and extravagance, detestable always, menace the welfare of nations and the very existence of democracy to-day. Every argument in favor of thrift based on individual well being remains unimpaired and compelling, and such arguments are re-enforced by the supreme obligation imposed on all the men, women and children of the United States to devote all their energies to winning the war.

WHY THIS IS AMERICA'S WAR

(World's Work)

This is America's war. The men who founded this Government hoped that some day its principles would encompass the earth, and from that day to this every American who has known his heritage has hoped that every able people would take unto itself its own government. This distrust of kings and all the system of privileges that hang about them is bred deep in the bones with us. Perhaps in some cases the distrust is unreasonable, but fundamentally it is right. Nearly a hundred years ago President Monroe enunciated his famous doctrine. One of its main tenets was and is that any extension of monarchy on this side of the ocean is a menace to our free institutions. It has become even clearer lately that any spread of the Prussian autocratic power was a menace to free institutions all over the world, ours as well as all others. If the Munroe Doctrine was wise in its day the war for democracy is wise now.

WHEN THE SOLDIER RETURNS.

(The Square Deal.)

For which will the government do the most? For the returned soldier or for the land speculator? The land speculator is specially favoured, inasmuch as he escapes with a single land tax. Will we treat the returned soldier in the same way, or will we increase the soldier's taxes for every improvement he makes on his land?

The industrious classes must now pay all the taxation, for idle speculation furnishes nothing for the support of society, and they must support the speculator besides. When the soldier returns, will he have to do the same thing, namely, work for the enrichment of the speculator?

Will the government do as well for the returned soldiers as it did for the manufacturers? Before the war the manufacturers had a free list of raw materials. Will the soldier be able to import his raw clothes, his raw tools, etc., free from duty, or will he be subject to the same impost and extortion as the labouring classes have seen, namely, often to surrender his third dollar. Will he have to take three dollars to market to buy two dollars' worth of goods? Will he also have to add something to that to maintain the luxurious establishments of the ground landlords?

When the war is over what will the veterans find to welcome them? Will it be a land of speculators to make the land dear and a lot of favoured manufacturers, enabled by law to goods dear—a double grind between the upper and nether millstones? Will it be monopolists to right of them, monopolists to left of them, and monopolists to the front of them?

SENDING HIS BIT.

(London Express.)

An Englishman formerly at Liverpool in the cotton trade, but now in business in New Orleans, United States, has sent £500 to Mr. Lloyd George as a gift to the nation, stating that, though lame and over military age, he wished to do his "bit." He asked in return for a letter bearing the Premier's signature.

Acknowledging the gift, Mr. Lloyd George writes: "I am deeply touched by the patriotic spirit which prompted you to make this sacrifice at a time when the mother country is so vitally in need of all support."

DIFFERENT.

"I hope you don't associate with that man I saw you speak to in the street just now."

"Associate with him! What do you take me for? That man, sir, is one of the most radically, corrupt, sneaking, under-handed, low-down, villianous and depraved scoundrels that ever kept out of jail!"

"I know it. But why are you on speaking terms with him at all?"

"Why, I'm—er—his lawyer."—Chicago News.

One of Nature's Mysteries.

One of the most sudden changes in animal life revealed in geologic history took place about the close of the mesozoic era, or age of reptiles, as it is sometimes popularly called. In mesozoic time the most powerful animals were huge land reptiles, known as dinosaurs, whose bones have been found in abundance in the Rocky mountain region. At or near the end of mesozoic time these great monsters suddenly disappeared from the western country as well as from the remainder of the world. They left no descendants, but in the following age of mammals, or cenozoic era, their places as rulers of the earth were taken by the mammals. The cause of the disappearance of these great reptiles has been a matter of rather fruitless speculation. Any explanation which will be acceptable must also account for the disappearance of a great many forms of animal life and the great modification of most of the others, both on land and in the sea. Some general cause which would bring about changes in climate and other conditions of life seems to be a necessary part of any satisfactory explanation.

Prehistoric Skins.

Several theories have been advanced to explain the corrugations of fingers, palms and soles, but the most plausible one is that expressed by the term "prehistoric skins," given by Mrs. Harris H. Wilder. Not only man, but all the monkeys and apes have such ridges on the skin of the grasping part of their hands and feet. And, strangely enough, the American opossums and tree porcupines, Australian phalangers and South American monkeys have just such corrugations on their tails.

The openings of the ducts of the sweat glands are along the tops of the ridges. They supply the slight moisture that is necessary to proper grasping. The Journal of Heredity, in a long study of hand and foot prints, remarks that a man instinctively moistens the palms of his hands when he wishes to grasp securely.

The pattern of finger prints is generally hereditary, but every individual develops his own details.

Tracer Shells.

It is one thing to stop a hostile battery in an artillery duel and another problem altogether to hit it. The locality may be well known, but the range difficult to determine. To simplify matters in this respect "tracer" shells are used. Into the base of the shell a metal case is screwed containing a material which is self igniting as the projectile rushes through space. For night operations the material used in the "tracer" bursts into a brilliant flame, but by day the "tracer" leaves a trail of dense black smoke. By this means the gunners are able to watch and time the shell right up to the moment the explosion takes place, and by knowing the locality in which the shell bursts the adjustment to the range of the target is comparatively a simple matter.—London Mail.

Just an Accident.

Two boys had indulged in a physical encounter on the playground. At the end of the affray they were summoned before the teacher to give an account of their misdeeds. One of them had a bloody nose. The teacher looked upon this sanguinary feature with horror and endeavored to instill in its inflictor certain pacific principles.

"Now, Billy," she said, "I think you ought to apologise to Jimmie."

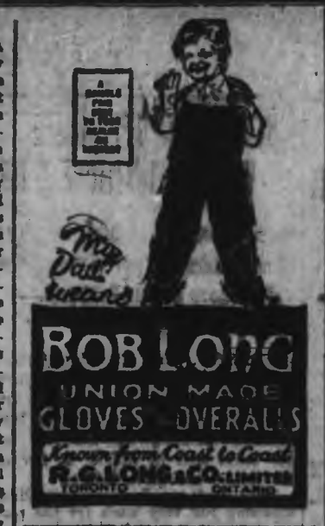
"Huh! I ain't a-goin' to apologise for no accident!" Billy answered.

"Accident? Why, Billy, how can you call it an accident? Didn't you intend to hit Jimmie on the nose?"

"No, mom, I didn't. I swung for his eye an' missed!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Settling a Bill.

When Andrew Jackson lived at Salisbury, N. C., he once attended court at Rockford, then the county seat of Surry, and left without paying his bill, which was duly charged up against him on the hotel register, which seems to have been the hotel ledger at that time, and so stood for many years. When the news of the victory of the 8th of January, 1815, was received in this then remote section the old landlord turned back the leaves of the register, took his pen and wrote under the account against Andrew Jackson, "Settled in full by the battle of New Orleans."



Colored Geniuses.

Negroes were the composers of such songs of the past as "Listen to the Mocking Bird," and "Carry Me Back to Old Virginia." A negro composer, Will Marion Cook, supplied tunes for many musical comedies on Broadway; so also have the late "Bob" Cole, and his partner, J. Rosamond Johnson, who together wrote the well-remembered song, "Under the Bamboo Tree." Cole and Johnson were long familiar as a team in vaudeville, and later as the heads of a negro theatrical company. Williams and Walker were similarly known, and I would add the gratuitous opinion that the negro actor, Bert Williams, who has for some years appeared with "The Follies," is one of the cleverest comedians, black or white, on the English-speaking stage. The most eminent of his race in the field of music, however, was undoubtedly Samuel Coleridge-Taylor, who was born in London, and who composed some really distinguished chamber music, cantatas, and symphonies.

Henry O. Tanner, the American negro painter of Biblical subjects, now residing in Paris, is probably as well known for his work as Coleridge-Taylor was for his. Meta Vaux Warrick (Mrs. Fuller), has had some recognition as a sculptor, and there are other negroes now developing in both these branches of art.

No Hyphen for Lloyd George.

The question of whether the hyphen should be used in printing Lloyd George's name has been definitely settled. The bulk of public opinion long favored the hyphen. Even in the English Who's Who the hyphen appears. The Louisville Courier-Journal says it has been trying for a long time to print the gentleman's name without a hyphen, but the proofreaders would not have it so. Now the voice of authority speaks. A proofreader on the New York Herald wrote direct to the premier himself and asked him to settle the discussion. He settled it. He says write it "D. Lloyd George." The Courier-Journal says it is just as inaccurate to print Lloyd-George as it is to print it Woodrow-Wilson or Grover-Cleveland.

By harnessing a fly to a tiny wagon, an English scientist found it could draw 170 times its own weight.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

MUFTAH

By... HELEN WOOD

He sat in the blazing sun with his face bowed. His lean brown hands were folded over a decent black robe, and a faded scarf was twisted about his head. He was Muftah—and the story. Every man is a story, Muftah a pitiful one. And all this was outside the upper Tangier gate by the market.

Inside the brown old gate among the white stuccoed houses and gay bazaars. Outside the great market place of trodden earth was one mass of people and animals. The men were of every color and type, from pure blooded Moors of astonishing, classical beauty to flat nosed, grinning negroes as black as night. And a stranger medley of queerly cut robes and jillavas, of fezzes, white turbans and gay scarfs, was never seen elsewhere. Most went barefoot. Only some of the older and more richly dressed had thrust their stockingless brown feet into yellow slippers.

Ugly camels lay in rows, snapping crossly at each passerby. Wild looking Arabs from the desert stalked about, each with his horse's bridle wrapped about his arm, each resplendent in many garments and scarfs, newly washed and snowy. Country women sat in groups upon the ground, displaying their fruits and vegetables. They wore large straw hats on top of their turbans to serve as sun umbrellas, and they looked like mere heaps of rags. Jostling each other with great rudeness, veluble with an oriental fluency of retort, the throng swayed back and forth. Occasionally some one rode his donkey laden with panniers among the women, and then great was the uproar. The air was full of women's shrill voices and their cackling laughter, so numerous were the slaves, purchasing for their households.

Strange that Muftah did not raise his head to gaze upon this interesting life surging past him! Perhaps it is no new story to him? Perhaps he has wearied for sight of it? Alas, no!

A veiled slave brushes close to his side, bracelets and anklets tinkling merrily. Yet Muftah heeds this not. He is looking far, far beyond the brilliant throng, and what does he see?

A great black well that recedes and recedes to unfathomable depths and far off hazy visions that become almost real at times, then vanish before he can truly say he sees them. Sometimes they take on the form of a low, broad tent, with a kettle swung over the fire, sheep and goats grazing, and beyond the scanty herbage and palms a strange golden line of desert, with hills of pink and intense purple shadows. Naked children are at play while their mother weaves, singing as she crosses the heavy shuttles. A slave mixes coarse black cakes for the evening meal.

In the distance he sees a horseman crossing the burning sands. The horse, tossing his long mane, is young and graceful. Almost Muftah can feel the animal beneath him. The wind blows the cutting sand of the desert about them, but Muftah's turban veil protects him. His long mantle streams on the breeze. Oh, the exhilaration of that gallop over the trackless waste! And joyous, too, is the errand, for he has been made sheik!

Always the strongest and most influential of his tribe, the sultan has now marked him for advancement. Little does Muftah know it is as ominous a preference as that of the vulture for the tenderest lamb. He only feels that he is to be a leader among men. He will receive the sultan's tribute, ... wanderings of his tribe from oasis to oasis and be at ease and happy. Ten years of happiness—they seem like an hour now. Is he thirsty? Here is a cooling spring in the earthen jar. Is he hungry? They bring him cheese and bread, fresh curds and pulpy dates. In the evening the men gather in a circle and listen to the strange recital of some story teller, who half sings, half tells, an interminable Moorish tale.

Only ten years, and then there comes an obsequious messenger, desiring his presence at the court of the bashaw of Tangier, there to render more definite account of his stewardship than has been given with his regularly remitted tribute money.

His laughing children have one more ride on the beautiful Gilzar. Two slaves pack their camels with provisions for the journey and with presents of honey and almonds for the bashaw. The sheik makes his farewell speech to his friends, with the touching Moslem gesture, placing his hand upon his forehead and his heart before he shakes that of his companion to show that mind and heart are faithful. Then for the last time he looks into the lovely eyes of her who is mother of his children.

Muftah groans. The mother of his children!

Three days of burning sands, then at last the bay of Tangier, with its white town built down the sides of the cliff and almost touching the blue water—a beautiful sight when it first greets his eyes. Later he comes closer into the filth and misery infesting it.

The bashaw, a handsome, impassive figure, sits cross legged before his door, his slaves grouped about him, to receive the envoy. Graciously he accepts the proffered gifts and permits the sheik to kiss the hem of his robe in token of obedience. Then—what are these strange words of accusation, these demands for tribute unlawfully levied, money illegally hoarded? The great, simple, freeborn son of the desert is bewildered. Nor does he understand why later on he is thrust into that deadly hole, the Tangier prison, where some in chains, some free, toil wearily all day at weaving baskets that they may have a wretched allowance of food, a mere pittance for their labor.

The sheik is unconscious of hunger. He lies silent, seeing dimly dark figures, hearing vaguely the rattle of chains, curses, imprecations, prayers.

Then the awful day when he is dragged through the hole which forms the entrance to the prison and taken before a pool, blue as turquoise, before which on a raised divan sits the arbiter of his fate, surrounded by grave men in handsome robes. Black slaves lead him forward, clad only in his loin cloth. And still he cannot understand. The tribute? He sent it, every coin! Did the bashaw desire more? Then why was he not told? Could he read the thoughts of the great? And, besides, more would not be legal and honest to his tribesmen.

Ah, the pain as they beat the soles of his feet, and then a quick vision of hard faced attendants, instruments such as he had never seen before, and then a blood red mist! And blackness! Muftah sees no more! Muftah, the sultan's prisoner, lies without the gates, a blind beggar, and the sun blazes on a thousand brilliant coloring all about him.

Every day he hears them, the yellow robed priests who climb the mosque minaret inside the gate and call for prayers. And through the mist which enshrouds him Muftah prays, not for himself, not to be freed from pain, not to have back the eyes torn from their sockets by the orders of the sultan, but only that his wife, the mother of his children, may know that he is true!

Day after day they pass him, the once handsome, dashing sheik of the desert, and none knows him nor speaks save the tourists who shudder and drop coins in his hand. But today some one pauses, some one murmurs, "Muftah, Muftah."

And Muftah quivers like a young leaf before the breeze.

"Muftah."

"You have come far?" he asks. And the voice from his past answers, "I come but to return."

Then Muftah, the prisoner of the sultan, pours forth his tale, not complainingly—no, because it is fate, it is kismet, it is the will of Allah. All he asks is that she, the mother of his children, shall know that he was true and his name shall not be a reproach to his children.

And the tribesman passes on, and the priests in yellow robes climb to the minaret of the mosque, and Muftah renders thanks to Allah, who has heard and answered his one prayer. For the rest, it is his fate—kismet.

GOOD WORK FOR SICK WOMEN

The Woman's Medicine Has Proved Its Worth.

When Lydia E. Pinkham's remedies were first introduced, their curative powers were doubted and had to be proved. But the proof came, and gradually the use of them spread over the whole country. Now that hundreds of thousands of women have experienced the most beneficial effects from the use of these medicines, their value has become generally recognized, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the standard medicine for women.

The following letter is only one of the thousands on file in the Pinkham office, at Lynn, Mass., proving that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is an article of great merit as shown by the results it produces.

Anamosa, Iowa.—"When I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I suffered with a displacement, and my system was in a general run-down condition. I would have the headache for a week and my back would ache so bad when I would bend down I could hardly straighten up. My sister was sick in bed for two months and doctored, but did not get any relief. She saw an advertisement of your medicine and tried it and got better. She told me what it had done for her, and when I had taken only two bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound my head began to feel better. I continued its use and now I don't have any of those troubles."—Mrs. L. J. HANNAN, R.F.D. 1, Anamosa, Iowa.

Scriptural Carving.

A Scriptural method of carving fowls when in secular company was claimed by a witty clergyman who, having been asked to carve one day, said, "Inasmuch as you demand it, I will carve the fowl according to Biblical principles." "Yes," exclaimed the hostess, "act according to the Scriptures." The theologian therefore began the carving. The baron was tendered the head of the fowl, the baroness the neck, the two daughters a wing apiece and the two sons a first joint, the carver retaining the remainder.

"According to what interpretation do you make such a division?" inquired the host of his guest, as he regarded the clergyman's heaping plate and the scant portions doled out to the family.

"From an interpretation of my own," replied the clerical wit. "As the master of your house the head belongs to you by right; the fore-ness, being next near to you, should receive the neck, which is nearest the head; to the wings the young girls will recognize a symbol of their mobile thoughts, that fly from one desire to another; as to the young barons, the drumsticks they have received will remind them that they are responsible for supporting your house, as the legs of the capon support the bird itself."

Early Prejudice Against Potatoes.

The way of the potato was said to have been barred by the prejudice that it was never mentioned in the Bible. In the Lothians it came in about 1740, the year of the famine, from Ireland, but was confined to gardens till about 1754, when it was planted in fields about Aberlady. By the close of the century it was a general article of diet.

Ramsay says that George Henderson went about 1750 for a bag of potatoes to Kilsyth, where the Irish method of field culture had lately been tried, and introduced the potato into Mentieth, where a few had been known, but only in kale yards. The old folks, however, did not take kindly to the new food. Old George Bachop, one of the Ochtertyre tenants, when told by his wife that she had potatoes for supper said: "Tattles! Tattles! I never supped on them a' my days and winna the nicht. Gie them to the herd and get me sowens." It is significant that Burns, who sang the praises of kale and porridge and haggis, should have nothing to say of the potato.—Blackwood's Magazine.

Pantomime Performances.

Most pantomime characters were originally borrowed from the Italians. The first real English pantomime was produced at a theater in Lincoln's Inn Fields in 1720. It was called "Harlequin Executed," and its subtitle was "A New Italian Comic Scene Between a Scaramouche, a Harlequin, a Country Farmer, His Wife and Others." The performance was very successful. About the middle of the eighteenth century the character of pantomime performances was completely altered, chiefly because of the genius of the famous Grimaldi, who made the clown the first figure in the pantomime. Grimaldi first appeared at Sadler's Wells theater, where he played the part of a monkey. He was actively engaged on the stage for forty-nine years, and at the close of his career he took a benefit at Drury Lane theater, which realized nearly £800. He also received £100 from the Drury Lane fund. This was in June, 1828. He died in 1837 and was buried in the churchyard of St. James' chapel, Pentonville Hill.

Lost Money Market.

London is waking up in rather amusing astonishment to the fact that it has ceased for the time to be the "money market" of the world. Just as Mr. John Burns asked, "What has Battersea to do with the British empire?" so readers might ask, "What have we to do with the money market?" In a complex civilization like ours the money market rules everything relating to business.—London Mail.

BRITON AND TURK.

A Surprise, a Fair Fight and the Way the Battle Ended.

There is a story of Gallipoli that deals with a fight in the open and exhibits the "unspeakable" Turk as a fair and worthy enemy. This is the story:

A young English officer, doing observation work alone, was suddenly confronted by a Turkish officer, similarly engaged. The Turk was as surprised as the Briton, but came forward, revolver in hand. The Englishman had no revolver. He stood his ground, his hands in the large pockets of his tunic.

Seeing that his adversary was unarmed, the Turk, much to the surprise of the Briton, threw down his gun and put up his fists in approved prize ring style. The Englishman put himself on guard, and the next moment the Turk flung himself upon him, and the pair began to fight desperately.

The men were about the same age, the same weight and had equal knowledge of the art of boxing. They fought without stopping for about ten minutes. By that time each was fairly exhausted, and they paused for a brief rest, only to continue their little private accounting when they had found their breath. Round after round the fight went on, while out in the gulf of Saros the ships fired automatically, and back of each of them the field artillery thundered. Neither seemed to be able to get any decisive advantage over the other, and at last Turk and Englishman rolled over on the ground and laughed and laughed. Just then the Englishman's hand touched something. It was the Turk's pistol. He picked it up and handed it to his enemy. The two young men shook hands, and each returned to his own lines.

EIGHT BOXES CURED PSORIASIS.

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Comeron, Ont., writes: "Three doctors described my trouble as psoriasis and one said I could never be cured. The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head, and the itching and the burning was hard to bear. I used eight boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and am now entirely cured—not a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise this Ointment enough."

No Time to Read Them.

Two men sat beside each other in a railway train. One of them, putting down a magazine, remarked:

"That series of articles, 'Books That Have Helped Me,' has engaged the attention of some of the leading literary men of the country."

"So I've heard," the other man replied.

"Have you read any of the articles?"

"No."

"But you have often thought of books that have helped you, I dare say?"

"No, I don't read books and am therefore not helped by them. I read the titles of books, but never turn the leaves."

"You must be a busy man?"

"I am," said the man who only glanced at the titles, "I am a book reviewer."—London Mail.

How Did He Spend It?

"A wealthy manufacturer of Germany took a brief vacation at Marienbad in Austria. He felt the need of a little simulation, and dropped into a private club one evening to play baccarat. When he was through his session he was about 200,000 marks the loser, and he gave a draft on his bank in Berlin to cover that amount. The draft was put through the Marienbad Bank, and, as is now done with all foreign collections, was forwarded to the Reichs-bank for adjustment. Instead of an acceptance being made, the drawer of the check and the bank through which it had been put received telegrams requesting that immediate explanation be given to the Reichs-bank as to how the check happened to be drawn, and to what purpose the funds were to be put.

"Rather embarrassed, the loser naively explained that he was making a private investment. After further correspondence, the Reichs-bank finally approved the draft, and he was permitted to draw his own money. I made it a point to ask why the draft had been questioned, and was told that the inspection department of the Reichs-bank desired to be satisfied, first, that the large amount of money was not to be used for espionage purposes, and secondly, that the money thus taken out of Germany would not be wasted. It may be questioned if the Reichs-bank's second purpose was fulfilled, but obviously such a watch over financial matters proves a deterrent to foolish expenditures."—From Herbert Bayard Swope's "Inside the German Empire."

A Soap That Blues Clothes.

An Englishman has patented a new laundry soap which he claims will blue clothes while lathering them for washing. It contains tallow, caustic soda, sodium thio-sulphate, and a suitable dye pigment, says The Popular Science Monthly for February. The question arises as to whether or not articles requiring more soaping than others will receive more than the desired amount of bluing, and whether the subsequent rinsing will remove the coloring obtained in the rubbing process.

Life's Span.

Perhaps the best cure for the fear of death is to reflect that life has a beginning as well as an end. There was a time when we were not. This gives us no concern. Why should it trouble us that a time will come when we shall cease to be? I have no wish to have been alive 100 years ago or in the reign of Queen Anne. Why should I regret and lay it so much to heart that I shall not be alive 100 years hence, in the reign of I cannot tell whom? * * * To die is to be only as we were before we were born.—Hazlitt.

Miss Sylvia Swanson, Theodore, Sask., writes: "I am letting you know what great value your B.B.B. has been to me. A year ago I started to grow pale and weak, the cause being bad blood. I got so many pimples and boils all over my face and body that I would not let strangers see me, and I used to avoid company. I tried many remedies but all seemed a failure. I read about how good your B.B.B. had been to thousands of people so I got a bottle and after I had finished the second one my pimples and boils had all disappeared. People thought it a miracle how well I looked.

REAL SUCCESS OF "SUBS" DOUBTFUL ASSERTS WRITER

"As Pirates They Add an Infamous Chapter to History."

WASHINGTON, D. C. — Sydney Brooks, the English journalist, gives some of the strategic reasons for Great Britain's silence relative to the success with which the British Admiralty is meeting in bagging the German sea snakes, the submarines.

"Just as Great Britain never advertises the feats of her armies, so she allows the world to think that the Prussians are having it pretty much their own way with their submarines," he says in a communication to the National Geographical society. "As a matter of fact, the German submarines have scored few legitimate successes — by which I mean successes that conform to the usages of civilized warfare. It is nearly two years since they sank a British man of war of any importance.

"As pirates, preying upon fishing smacks, trawlers, Atlantic liners, and the merchantmen of all nations, they have added a new and infamous chapter to naval history. Otherwise it is, I believe, the opinion of most naval men that in German hands the submarine has proved disappointingly ineffective.

The Deutschland Calpe.

"People, I remember, were thrown into a state of quite unbalanced admiration when the Deutschland appeared in American waters. It was spoken of as one of the most remarkable achievements of the war. Few stopped to remember—even, indeed, if they knew—that the war was only a few months old when ten British submarines crossed the Atlantic from Halifax to the British isles—the first submarines in naval history to make the journey under their own power.

"While we publish the number of vessels sunk by Prussian submarines we say not a word about the U-boats whose careers are brought to a sudden stop. I don not know how many of them we have caught, sunk, or destroyed. It may be 180; it may be 200; it may be 220. They come out and they do not return, and there is no use in Germany, and perhaps not half a dozen people in England who know what becomes of them.

The Mystic Toll.

"The reasons for secrecy must be tolerably obvious to any one who thinks the matter over. All that the Germans are able to infer from the failure of any given U-boat to return to port is that somehow or other it has been lost. But how or where they cannot tell.

"It may have been through some error of structure or design—a thought to send a chill down the spine of every admiralty official. It may have been through a mistake in navigation. It may have been through one or other of the endless and constantly changing devices that British ingenuity has evolved and brought into play against the new policy. It may, too, have happened near the German coast or after the U-boat had reached its appointed station. They cannot tell.

"They are faced with a blank wall of possibilities that they have no means of verifying. Weeks must often elapse before they can be sure that a submarine which they thought was operating in a certain area had really perished and that another boat should be dispatched to take its place.

No One Knows.

"Sometimes, however, the veil of mystery is partially lifted. Sometimes a German U-boat is towed up the Thames, moored to the embankment, and from $75,000 to $100,000 collected for some naval charity by throwing it open to the public. Sometimes, if you are dining with a naval officer you will hear wondrous tales of submarines netted, bombed by aeroplanes even, when they are well below the suface, hunted and caught by destroyers, induced by one ruse after another to show themselves where they can be got at.

"Sometimes, too, in a British port the men of the merchant marine will tell you of Homeric combats that would have warmed the heart of Nelson and Farragut and made Drake and Frobisher gasp and stare.

"But these are mere haphazard, personal gleanings. No one knows the full extent of the harvest or how it has been gathered in. But we do know enough—or at any rate we think we do—to feel fairly confident that the Germans can attempt nothing and can invent nothing that we cannot find the means of countering, and that confidence has been rather more than justified by all that has happened since Feb. 1."

ARMENIA WANTS PROTECTION OF AN ENTENTE POWER

LONDON. — In the midst of the hurly-burly of war there are a few persons in London—just a few—giving some thought to what is to become of Armenia after the war. Not Belgium, Serbia nor Poland has suffered as Armenia has suffered. These figures explain:

Armenians living in Armenia before the war, 2,000,000.

Armenians shot, knifed, burned, stoned, drowned and otherwise put to death by the Turks (well authenticated figures.) 1,000,000.

Armenians unaccounted for from among those driven into the desert, 400,000.

Armenians in Constantinople, western Asia Minor and Russia, 600,000.

The new Armenia that is to be reconstructed after the war thus has a basis of only 600,000 men, women and children, unless it be found that some of those driven into the desert have survived. These 600,000 must be brought back into Armenia from the other side of the Russian border and from Constantinople, where they have enjoyed comparative immunity.

The restoration of a nation from such a basis would seem almost helpless, but Armenians in London believe it will be done. Lord Bryce, former Ambassador to the United States, who, as he expressed it, has been studying the case of Armenian for forty years, believes it will be done.

"The change in Russia has been a most fortunate thing for Armenia," said Lord Bryce. "The Armenian people may expect more from the Russian people than they obtained from the Russian government in the past."

"We think that this may prove the last horror through which our people will have to go." A. S. Safrastian, who after two years' fighting with the Armenian Legion of the Russian army, has returned to the London School of Economics to earn his doctor' degree.

"We feel that all the suffering the Armenians have endured cannot count for nothing. Armenia has been almost exterminated more than once. Always she has recuperated and without outside assistance. Now we think the world will not accept a settlement of the other problem of this war without a real settlement of the Armenian question."

"We want Armenia for ourselves, entirely free of Turkish rule. A protectorate by Russia, Great Britain—or even the United States—could in a generation or two see an Armenian nation safely established and prospering. It is a fertile country and and we have proved our ability to take care of ourselves if given the oportunity. So long as European politics prevented any interference with the blood thirsty desires of the Turks, we could not have such an opportunity. The day of such politics is past, everybody hopes."

A limited monarchy is Safrastian's idea of the most progressive government possible immediately for Armenia. From t'is he believes a Republic would naturally evolve. But at first, he said, the old tribunal instinct probably would call for a prince at which to gaze as the embodiment of their nationality.

Nerves Weak Had Hysterics

Orillia Lady Tells of Her Pitiable Condition when the Nerves Gave Way and She Became Sleepless, Irritable and Excited.

Orillia, Ont., May 25.—There is an abundance of proof found right here in Orillia that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is unrivalled as a means of forming new, rich blood and building up the exhausted nervous system.

At this season almost everybody feels the need of restorative, tonic treatment to keep up vitality and ward off the tired, languid feelings. This letter will give you some idea of the splendid results to be obtained by using this great food cure:

Mrs. Percy Moulding, 28 West street, Orillia, Ont., writes:

"Some years ago my nerves got the better of me. I became so bad that on one occasion, during a thunderstorm, I had a severe attack of hysterics. Then I became anxious about my condition. It was sleeplessness and nervous debility that were my trouble. Some nights it would be 1 o'clock before I could get to sleep. Knowing the good results obtained from the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I commenced a treatment. I took about seven boxes, gradually I could feel my nerves becoming steady and my appetite returning. I could sleep well, and stay alone without any difficulty. Some little time ago I commenced losing in weight, and I began using the Nerve Food again as a tonic. I used only two boxes, and recovered the weight I had lost. I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and when I see anyone looking ill or nervous I say, 'Get busy and use some Nerve Food.'"

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, a full treatment of 6 boxes for $2.50, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Do not be talked into accepting a substitute. Imitations only disappoint.

Outworms, which make their appearance early in the spring, and nip off the melon and cabbage plants after they are set out, may be kept away to a great extent by throwing a handful of wood ashes on the soil. The wood ashes are also a protection against a number of other insects, and of high value as fertilizer.

A PRESBYTERIAN PASTOR NOT FAR FROM OTTAWA MAKES NOVEL DEDUCTION AND PROPHECY.

This war will end January 27th, 1918. This date is set in the Bible according to a certain Presbyterian minister near Ottawa, who believed that St. John predicted present day history in Revelations, and determined to find the meaning of the mysterious numberings and prophecies found in the 13th Chapter of that book of the Bible which has remained more or less of a conundrum through all the centuries of theological study.

The divine makes his point from the 18th verse which reads: "HERE IS WISDOM. LET HIM THAT HATH UNDERSTANDING COUNT THE NUMBER OF THE BEAST, FOR IT IS THE NUMBER OF A MAN, AND HIS NUMBER IS SIX HUNDRED THREE SCORE AND SIX."

The minister according to an alphabetic code numbering the letters from one to twenty-six, shows that Kaiser spelled with their corresponding figures instead of letters is 11-1-9-19-5-18. Adding six to each of these numbers, you have 116-16-96-196-56-186, which added together makes 666, the number given in the quotation as the number of the man.

BASIS OF PROPHECY.

In the fifth verse of the same chapter he points out that you read —"And there was given unto him a mouth speaking great things, and blasphemies; and power was given unto him to continue forty and two months."

So the minister figures as the war opened July 27, 1914, in adding forty-two months it brings you to Jan. 27, 1918. He sees further substantiation for this approximate date in Rev. 12-6, where it is said: "And the woman fled into the wilderness, where she hath a place prepared of God that they should feed her there a thousand, two hundred and three score days."

FIGURING IT OUT.

Dividing 1260, or the number of days given by 365 days, one finds that in years her period in the wilderness is three years and 165 days, or approximately three and one-half years.

In further support of this date he quotes the 14th verse of chapter 12: "And to the woman were given two wings of a great eagle, that she might fly into the wilderness, into her place, where she is nourished for a time, and times, and half a time, from the face of the serpent."

Of the same one, Daniel in his book, chapter 7-25, says: "And he shall speak great words against the most High, and shall wear out the saints of the most High, and think to change times and laws; and they shall be given into his hand until a time and times and the dividing of time."

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

CHILD'S UNDERWAIST WITH GATHERED OR CIRCULAR PETTICOAT.

By Anabel Worthington.

Your good judgment will tell you that this little garment will look better, fit better and last longer than a bought one if made at home from the pattern.

The under waist is cut on perfect lines, well shaped at the armholes and buttoned at back to the waist line. A waistband is fitted with buttons for attaching a gathered or circular petticoat, or the petticoat may be sewed to the waistband. When buttoned to the waist the petticoat should have buttonholes worked in its band at points to correspond with the buttons on the waist belt. Edging is used to advantage to trim the neck and armholes and for a ruffle for the petticoat lower edge. A small view of the model shows that embroidered flouncing may also be used for the gathered petticoat.

There is a silk embroidered skirting flannel in scalloped or hemstitching design, embroidered on both edges, enabling one to make two skirts out of one length. It costs less than fifty cents a yard and makes a very satisfactory purchase.

The pattern No. 8,063 cuts in sizes 6 months, 1, 3, 5 years. To make in size 3 requires 1¼ yards 36 inch material for the under waist and gathered petticoat, with 2⅝ yards edging; 1 yard 45 inch goods required when circular petticoat is preferred. For the under waist alone, ⅛ yard 36 inch material; for petticoat of flouncing, 1⅝ yards 11¾ inch width.

To obtain the pattern send 20 cents to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 10 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

SATISFACTORY PROGRESS IN DEALING WITH SUB MENACE

"We Dealt More Effective Blows During the Past Three Weeks Than in Any Corresponding Period." Is Lloyd-George's Cheerful Declaration in the House of Commons —Lull in Western Front Has Extended to the French Lines Where Only Minor Operations Are Reported To-day.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

LONDON, May 25.—"We dealt more effective blows at the submarine menace during the past three weeks than during any corresponding period," declared Premier Lloyd George in the House of Commons to-day. Our ship losses for May," he added, "probably will be under those for April. We are making satisfactory progress." The Premier paid eloquent tribute to the work of the American destroyers in the patrol fleet. "We can congratulate ourselves on unexpectedly early improvement with dealing with the submarine menace," he declared.

"If everybody economizes, and if all available land is used in the production of food, the submarines will not defeat us," he concluded.

NEW YORK, May 25.—The loss of the Cunarder liner Feltria, with at least two colored American firemen among the fifty-three missing, was reported by travellers from Europe who were in New York to-day. The Feltria was sunk May 5th they said, being a victim of an unwarned torpedo attack by a submarine. The vessel sank in ten minutes. Travellers also reported the sinking of the British steamer Maine, under American charter and flying the American flag. She was armed. The Maine was sunk by a torpedo without warning. All aboard were rescued. The same sources were authority for the news of the sinking of the British steamer Corfield by shell-fire and torpedo attack. Three of the crew were lost, including an American sailor.

PARIS, May 25.—The lull on the western front extended to the French lines to-day. The official statement indicated only restricted fighting and no major actions. The French forces made a successful attack in the region of Chevreux during the night. They found the enemy shelters demolished by the French artillery fire, and full of dead. Thirty prisoners were taken. German attacks were reported north of Vauclerc and in the region of Courcy.

WASHINGTON, May 25.—Stormy and protracted secret sessions of the Norwegian Parliament over the continuation of neutrality in the face of a threatened total demolition of Norwegian shipping from German submarines were reported in confidential official advices reaching here to-day. Parliament is said to be split with one section urging war upon England for forcing Norwegian ships to carry coal, another against Germany for her submarine warfare, and a strong peace party. The Minister of Justice, it is reported, has resigned. It is believed a serious governmental crisis is at hand. Public opinion is said to be at high pitch as a result of the sinking of sixty-three Norwegian ships in March.

ROME, May 25.—British monitors heavily shelled Austrian rear positions in the Gulf of Trieste early Thursday morning, according to despatches received to-day. The British craft went into action at dawn with a fleet of Italian aviators co-operating in bombing and observation work. Hangers for enemy planes an other important depots in the Austrian rear were destroyed, the whole operation greatly facilitating the great Italian offensive then in progress along the Carso front. No Austrian warships appeared from the port.

LOSS OF THE TRANSYLVANIA.

LONDON, May 25.—The British transport Transylvania was torpedoed on May 4, with the loss of 413 persons.

The Transylvania was torpedoed in the Mediterranean.

The following official statement was given out:

"The British transport Transylvania, with troops aboard, was torpedoed in the Mediterranean on May 4, resulting in the following losses: 29 officers and 373 of other ranks; also the ship's Captain, Lieut. S. Bruell and one officer and nine men of the crew."

VETERAN CAPTAIN LOST.

NEW YORK, May 25.—The Anchor Line steamship Transylvania was sunk in the Mediterranean off the French-Italian coast, it was learned here. The survivors—how many it is not known here—were taken into Savona, Italy, by rescuers. There they remained until May 12, cared for by the populace and administered to by Red Cross authorities. When they left Savona on another vessel for an unnamed destination a throng of thousands of persons assembled at the shore and cheered the departure.

Captain Bruell, who lived in Scotland, commanded the Transylvania when she went down. He was one of the oldest Captains in the Anchor Line service.

The Transylvania, an Anchor Line steamship of 14,315 tons gross, had been in the service of the British Government since May, 1915, when her sailings were cancelled. There have been no recent reports of her movements. When she was first taken over by the British Government she was engaged in transporting troops to Gallipoli.

The Transylvania was built in 1914. She was constructed especially for passenger traffic between New York and Mediterranean ports. She was 548 feet long, and had accommodation for 2,450 passengers.

In addition to the loss of the Transylvania despatches published elsewhere in this issue tell of the sinking of the British steamer Tela, of 7,000 tons, off the English coast, and of the French steamer Sontay, with a loss of forty-four lives.

ITALIANS TAKE 1024 PRISONERS.

ROME, May 25.—Further brilliant successes in the Italian Alps, reported this afternoon in the War Office statement, have brought the total of prisoners taken from Austrians on Wednesday and Thursday up to 1,024.

LOCAL ATTACKS REPULSED.

LONDON, May 25.—British official statement to-day says:

"During the night local hostile attack against one of our posts in the Hindenburg line southwest of Fontaine Les Croisilles, was driven off. A German raiding party northeast of Arleux was repulsed with heavy loss.

We had no casualties in minor British operations this morning. Southeast of Loos we captured a further portion of the enemy's front trench system in this neighbourhood and took twenty-eight prisoners. An enemy counter attack failed. There were successful raids by our troops south of Armentieres and west of Messines. We secured a few prisoners.

IRISH CONVENTION PERSONNEL NOT SELECTED YET.

LONDON, May 25.—Premier Lloyd George announced to-day he was unable yet to announce the composition of the convention which is to attempt the settlement of the Irish question. The situation was too important, he said, to permit of mistakes by premature choice of commissioners.

SABOTAGE SPREADING IN RUSSIA.

PETROGRAD, May 25.—Agrarian disturbances in the Minsk District are quickly getting beyond control of the militia. Soldiers and farmers sacked the estate of Prince Mirsky.

QUEBEC LIBERAL MEMBERS WANT COUNTRY TO VOTE

Will Not Follow Sir Wilfred if He Approves of Conscription Without a Referendum, One Quebec Member of Parliament States.

ARRESTS IN MONTREAL

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, May 25. — The Liberal members from Quebec will not follow Sir Wilfrid if he approves conscription without a referendum, according to a well informed source.

"Some would go so far as to vote against him," said our informant. "Others would either absent themselves or resign. In my own constituency, which is almost solidly French, I do not believe more than ten votes would be cast in favour of conscription."

"What would happen if a referendum were taken and the rest of the country outvoted Quebec?"

"Quebec would submit," said the member emphatically. "She is law-abiding and very strong for majority."

As to yesterday's riots in Montreal he said: "They are the outcome of foot talk from men like Lavergne, Tancrede, Marsil and Bourassa at a time when the situation is strained."

In Montreal last night, Mayor Martin said Sir Wilfrid assured him this week that he would positively take the stand that Parliament had no right to pass conscription.

Six persons were arrested last night in Montreal by the police, who were compelled to draw revolvers before the disorderly crowds would disperse.

BAN IN FORCE.

NIAGARA FALLS, May 25.—Canada is enforcing its ban on the passage of her eligible sons to the American side. At midnight last night the order went into effect. It was enforced on the stroke of twelve. American authorities are also enforcing the same order on their side. Exception is being made only for those whose daily business keeps them in need of crossing the bridge regularly. They will be allowed to hold permits.

ITALIANS SMASH AUSTRIAN LINE

GUNNER JAS. McCORMICK, who is officially reported wounded. He went overseas with Peterborough's first artillery quota, leaving here in August, 1914.

General Cadorna's Troops Win a Great Victory, Capturing Numerous Points of Vantage and More Than Nine Thousand Austrian Prisoners.

APPROACHING TRIESTE

Special to the Examiner.

NEW YORK, May 24.—The Associated Press issues the following:

On a front of nearly ten miles on the Carso plateau the Italian troops have smashed the Austrian line hard and taken various positions from the town of Castagnavizza to the head of the Gulf of Trieste. In their renewal of their offensive the Italians received valuable aid from some of the nine British batteries which have hauled their big guns down to the Isonzo front to help in the efforts aimed at the conquest of Trieste, Austria's big seapoint on the Adriatic.

Not alone were the Italians successful in capturing numerous points of vantage but more than nine thousand Austrian prisoners, including officers in excess of three hundred. The Austrians are declared to have been taken completely by surprise by the sudden onslaught of the Italians, who, to divert attention from the southern end of the Isonzo line, had struck a hard blow to the north. When however, the Austrians recovered from their surprise they launched heavy counter-attacks, but the Italians tenaciously held the ground they had won.

The new advance of the Italians brings them appreciably nearer Trieste, which, from the lower part of the line, is less than ten miles away. The ground traversed and yet to be passed over is difficult for military operations, and, even with other successful advances such as the last one, the objective of the Italians will not be attained except by fighting of a most ferocious nature.

Text of Official Report.

Rome, May 24.—Italian forces yesterday broke through the Austro-Hungarian lines from Castagnavizza to the sea, taking more than 9,000 prisoners, says the official statement issued to-day by the Italian War Office.

The Italian War Office announced that Italian forces had occupied part of the area south of the Castagnavizza-Boscomalo road, had passed Boscomalo, and had captured the town of Jamiano and strong heights east of Pietrarossa and Bagni.

The Italian official report said the Austro-Hungarians at first were surprised and nonplussed. Towards evening they launched counter attacks but were repulsed.

Italian aeroplanes, numbering 130, dropped ten tons of bombs on the Austro-Hungarians. Ten British batteries co-operated with the Italians.

Break Austrian Line.

The announcement follows:

"On the Carso yesterday, after ten hours of violent bombardment, the gallant troops of the Third Army assaulted and broke through the well-organized lines of the enemy from Castagnavizza to the sea. While we were heavily engaging the enemy on the left our troops, after carrying enemy trenches in the centre and on the right, occupied part of the

NO MORE RECRUITS TO BE TAKEN ON FOR THE C. D. F.

Lieut.-Col. Walker Receives Orders That Enlistment for Home Defence Force Has Been Stopped and the 57th Will Only Recruit for Service Overseas.

TO FORM C. E. F. COMPANY

The Canadian Defence Force is a thing of the past. According to instructions received by Lieut. Col. Walker this morning, recruiting for this branch of the Canadian army must stop at once, and no more men are to be enlisted in the battalions of the Canadian Defence Corps unless they are prepared to go overseas with the overseas companies of the same regiments. The order also states that no more recommendations for the appointment of officers to the C.D.F. will be made. Just what will happen to the men already signed on with the C.D.F. is not stated, but it is anticipated that they will be given an opportunity to transfer to the overseas company which has already been started, and that if they do not wish to join the overseas company but prefer to take their chances under selective conscription, they will be given an opportunity to return to civilian life. There are only three or four recruits in the C.D.F. here and one of them is under age for overseas service.

The 57th Regiment is, however, to go ahead with recruiting for overseas service and in view of the rapid approach of conscription, it is expected that there will be a better response to the appeal for men.

SEVEN FREIGHT CARS OFF RAILS AT OMEMEE

Minor Accident Occurred Between Switches in Town Limits.

Seven cars of an east-bound G.T.R. grain freight left the rails in Omemee yard about three o'clock this morning. The run-off occurred on the main line, fortunately between two switches, through which the regular traffic continued this morning without interruption. The cars were loaded with grain, but the train was not moving at full speed and it was expected that the loss would be light. This is the second mishap of that kind in the vicinity of Omemee within ten days.

ROYAL THEATRE CHANGE TO-NIGHT.

Remember that the Royal Theatre has an entire change of programme to-day. One of the best programmes can be seen to-night and to-morrow that we have had.

Men who enlist now should receive first consideration in promotions for non commissioned officers, a large number of whom will soon be required. See Lt.-Col. Walker at the Armouries.

A LOGICAL MOVE

At the end of the third year of the war we have one conservation enterprise adopted by the government. We have an embargo placed upon men of military age, to prevent them leaving the country. If the government had taken a real interest in helping young men leave the country as enlisted members of overseas forces, neither conscription nor the present embargo might have been necessary. An order-in-council has been passed prohibiting the emigration of the eligible class of men, without special permission of the government, and in these cases passports will be issued.

The government is to be commended for taking this action, a logical one in view of virtual conscription having been decided upon, and a necessary one, the class of men being fit, having heretofore, refused to enlist, would leak out of the country before their duty was authoritatively and officially brought home to them, if they were not fenced in.

Evan Nationalist shot-the-flag Blondin, Postmaster-General and recruiting sergeant, denounces the government that tolerates him for neglect of any attempt at organization for recruiting in Quebec.

WAGING WAR A BIG WORK.

In our attitude of appreciation of conscription for compulsory service, we must remember that it is only one cog in the wheel of the machinery of war making. Conscription or compulsory service is only one step, and a rather belated one, in the mobilization of the country's resources. The creation of a fighting force is only a beginning; it implies subordinate, but equally essential preparation all along the line. There must be equipment, there must be munitions, there must be food supplies, and preparations adequate and complete for the care of the sick and the wounded, the feeding of prisoners, and we must make full provision for the invalided, wounded and disabled, that come home, having had, in doing their duty an unfortunate share of the gruesome with their full share of the glorious. Conscription implies the employment of the money, the wealth as well as the manhood of the country. The burden must not be thrown upon the comparatively few; but all must share in some way in the work that is for the good of all. In providing additional fighting forces it is self-evident that we must provide for their support and for keeping the machinery of support in its broadest sense in full running condition. In selecting soldiers we must not make too great a clean up of men; we must provide for adequately manning or keeping adequately manned, our industrial activities, especially those associated with munition production. We must protect our food producing agencies. We must protect the people at home by providing that they should not be oppressed with high prices artificially raised by trade combinations, and the operation of conscienceless speculators and profiteers. We must also do our share in helping transportation of food to the Mother Country by the doing of our full share in adding to the shipping tonnage to the country.

It is thus seen that conscription or compulsory service is only a part of the business of the government in bringing about the fulfilment of our part in the war. The business of the government is to make the people realize that Canada is at war, and that the energies of the whole people should be directed to the success of prosecution of the war—and that the real call is to national service by a national government. We don't want a government saturated by the party spirit, but a government that has for its inspiration to action the good of the country and the cause, first, last, and always. The question become this—is the present government, as constituted, likely to measure up to the national demand? We don't so much want a Conservative or a Liberal government as we want a Canadian government—a government representing the spirit of the people, instead of the petty warped and dwarfed spirit of party.

Now that women have the new power of the vote they might warm up for its use by trying their hand on the food speculators and the indifferent government spectators of their sins.

TRUE STATESMANSHIP.

The Examiner has received the subjoined letter from the secretary of the Canadian Forestry Association, dated May 21st:

"To the Editor of The Examiner:

"Dear Sir: Permit me to thank you for the very generous sentiments expressed in your editorial of Friday, May 11th, under the heading 'Thrift in Forest Fires.'

"Your comments on the relation of the Forest to our electric power development, are not only entirely true but suggest a reason for public interest in conservation that is too often overlooked."

"Yours sincerely,
"Robson Black,
"Secretary."

This letter is published chiefly to emphasize the extent to which the action and apparently the ideals of governments and municipal corporations are differentiated from really patriotic organizations, such as the Canadian Forestry Association, and the Conservation Commission. These organizations embody the spirit of true statesmanship—outlook and forelook. While governments and municipal bodies chiefly expend their energies upon routine and dealing with the agenda of present needs and, sometimes, superfluities, a body like the Forestry Association, is looking to the future in a way that makes the present of national and patriotic importance.

Our forests can and should be regarded and dealt with as a source—not of mere destructive wealth—but of constructive wealth. We persistently remove forest growth, with all its climatic and potential industrial advantages, without an eye to conservation; literally killing the goose that lays the golden egg. Nature's plan is to use forest land or soils—rocky or sandy—that are unfit for other purposes. We cut these forests away leaving the country open to the sweep of destructive winds, with interference with regular rainfall and facilitating off-rush towards the sea.

There are in the hinterland of Peterborough County thousands of acres of such denuded and desolate lands, barren wastes, here and there slowly starving a scanty population, that might with a little care and foresight be recovered with a forest-bearing crop. The government takes scant interest in them, and scant interest in conserving the merchantile value that springs up in the wake of the lumberman's axe or the forest fire. The Examiner has often suggested to the County Council the acquirement of some of these lands for purposes of reforestry. Planted afresh with suitable trees, in time these forests with only nominal cost and nominal care, would become sources of revenue, enough in time to finance the needs of the county.

True, we should have to wait some time. The farmer who to-day plants a crop, has no assurance of living to enjoy its harvesting. But he plants because his action is in conformity with duty and faith in the future.

We must to be true to the responsibility of our place in the world—in human relations—true not only to the present, but to the future. We must look ahead and show as much providence, as much sense of conservation, as the squirrel who hoards his nuts, and looks to the future. We are fighting to save our country, not for the swiftly passing present, but for the future. In building a high-level bridge in Peterborough, we more than anything build for the benefit of a future Greater Peterborough.

Put speculation in food up the spout, and you lower the price.

Treasury Romances Become Literally War-the-War Realities

Among a heap of pamphlets connected with the war such as is often coming to a newspaper office these days, we find one by James Douglas with the suggestive title of "Treasury Romances." Mr. Douglas tells us that the war has created a new kind of citizen—one who does not lend his money to the State, but gives it. This new citizen, we are informed, is sometimes a man, sometimes a woman, sometimes a child. He lives in all parts of the Empire, and all parts of the world. He gives his money to the State because he cannot fight, and wishes it to fight for him.

As a sample, Mr. Douglas asks where is Sandakan, B. N. B. (British North America)? There is romance in the sound of Sandakan, and surely it was romance that moved a firm in Sandakan to send $2,500 to the British Chancellor of the Exchequer with this message:

In this territory we contribute nothing towards the Imperial Finances, while at the same time we enjoy all the benefits of British protection. We are, therefore, anxious to have a share, however small, in the financial burden which our fellow-countrymen have to bear at the present time, and by disposing of the above sum for us you will be assisting us to discharge a welcome duty.

Business is business, but this is the sheer romance of patriotism. It is a far cry from Sandakan to St. Louis, but the same spirit impels a business man there to send $500 with a similar message:

The British Empire has been forced into a war which may be a struggle for the life of the nation, and we of British birth in foreign lands who cannot devote our lives to the service of our country may at least uphold the right and encourage our people at home by sharing the financial burden.

From St. Louis we leap to Matsqui, in British Columbia. The Municipality of Matsqui sends $260. A civic romance! From Matsqui we fly to Fanning Island, (in the Pacific), which sent two gifts, and then to West China, whence comes a gift from an old missionary who sends it to the Chancellor with these words:

I wish you with the national burden on your shoulders to understand how the rank and file of us wish to carry with you the nation's sorrow and fulfill its obligations. A scrap of paper becomes burnished and imperishable gold leaf when inscribed with England's signature to a treaty.

And so it goes. A Baptist Minister in Ontario spent $5; an American citizen in Summit, New Jersey, contributed a cheque made payable to "The British Empire"; a Canadian sent a cheque for $1,000 "to cover moneys received by me whilst an engineer student at Keyham" nearly half a century ago; and old man in Saskatchewan sent a cheque for $100 to help beat the Kaiser, whom he described as "a compound of Nero, Judas and Aananias." A little girl sent a shilling out of her pocket-money, "to help you pay for the war"; her daddy wrote a footnote that this was entirely her own idea, and had cleaned out her money-box, and "Please don't return it whatever you do, or you will give great offence."

Many are the instances given of gifts from rich and poor alike. They show that the spirit of sacrifice is abroad, and they reveal how profound is the love for the British Empire in all sorts of out-of-the-way places throughout the world.—Montreal Herald.

Mrs. Justspliced Writes to Mama

Bliss Haven,
Canoodleum St...
Peterborough,
May 28th, 1917.

My Dear Mamma—

We have safely arrived home. As you know we did not intend coming back from our trip until next week. But Algy thought it would be nice to have a week all to ourselves before he goes to work. And it is such fun when he brings my breakfast up to bed. He sits on the side and has his with me.

This morning we had eggs and bacon. Algy said the eggs were scrambled. I think they were, as he dropped the tray coming upstairs. But they smoked ham was lovely. Oh! and that reminds me, I have found such a peach of a store to deal at. They are much cheaper than other stores, because they only deal for cash, and they keep such awfully jolly things. They had some new kind of chocolates in yesterday, and I bought six boxes, only 21c. a box. Algy wanted me to try some this morning, but we couldn't find any, but I didn't mind, as I did not feel like candies this morning.

Algy helped me get the dinner yesterday. I got the cookery book and sat in the rocker and told him what to do. Algy thought we ought to have some soup, so I went to my special store, and the nice man there showed me all kinds in packets and cans, so I bought some of each. The packets were only 5c. and the cans 18c., 25c. and 35c. each. When I got back I sat on Algy's knee while we decided which of them we would have for dinner. Finally we decided to try a can of Clam Chowder, and I got the book to see how to cook it, but Algy found the directions on the can. So he did that and I helped lay the table, and then we had the first course, and it was so delicious we never left a drop. Then we remembered we had forgotten all about the other courses. Well Algy looked at me, and I looked at Algy. Then I remembered my nice Grocery Man had put some cooked meat in my parcel, (pressed veal and tongue; I think it was and only 29c. a lb.) So we had that and a pie I got at the same place. And after that we had no appetites for anything else, so we decided not to try any more cooking to-day. Now I must close this long letter, but I will write again soon, so with love and kisses I remain, your loving—

MINNIE.

P.S.—Algy sends love and kisses too.

P.P.S.—If you can't find my house when you come to Peterborough, inquire at my Grocery Man. Everybody knows him. His address is—

Dear Mary:

Well, George and Anna are going to get married. I've already decided what we are going to give them—it will be furniture and furnishings for their home.

I wish papa and mama had given Frank and I furniture when we were married. I think furniture is such a sensible wedding gift. Young couples need it.

Let's buy our presents at the same time. Then we won't both get the same thing, and we can arrange the payments to suit us. I'll come for you and we'll go to the furniture store to-morrow. How about it?

"As for the wonderful books of the Encyclopaedia—they are simply treasures! When I was offered to compete for the position I now hold, I studied up every reference to the subject of dredge and hydraulic mining therein, with the result that I passed 87% on all the questions asked me. This was highest. Without the Encyclopaedia I could not have secured this excellent position."

A NEW VOLUME ABOUT THE WAR

The publishers of The Encyclopaedia Britannica announce that they have made arrangements for the issue, as soon after the end of the war as possible, of a new volume supplementing the great work in the light of the war.

The new volume will be written by scholars and experts of the entire world, and will be the authoritative work, free from bias, and by many of its own contributors. It will be absolutely impartial, confidence all partisan feeling and prejudice.

It will include a record of the real causes of the war, the purposes of the nations and peoples all over the world with whom, as necessary, to other changes in boundaries.

The lives of the new leaders, whether civil, military or naval, in the different countries.

The results of the war, outside the sphere of fighting, the progress of science, the prevention of contagious diseases, the new scientific discoveries, etc.

The new volume will bridge the gap between this story of events before and after the war. It will be the only work in which the whole world and the whole of its contents that can attract lovers of books and reading will be found. The publishers are sure that from the editorial point of view, the price of it to all who have already purchased the Britannica will be more than fair, and the opportunity a rare one.

President.

The time has come when you must decide and order. That is the whole story.

Today there is no use in telling you what the Britannica is, how valuable it will be to you in your work, what an advantage it will give you and your family to own it. You know now whether you want it or not. There is only one thing left for you to consider—will you order or not?

Unless you order NOW you will NEVER be able to buy the Britannica printed on genuine India paper. Because there is no more India paper for printing the Britannica. And no more can be made—war makes it impossible to import the flax and hemp for making India paper.

If you KNOW you want the Britannica, sign the "Reserve" Order Form in the corner of this announcement, attach a dollar bill to it and mail it just as quickly as you can.

If you are almost sure you need the Britannica, but want to be positive before you order, go to the store named here and ask to see the entire set. If the books convince you that the Britannica will be useful and helpful to you, leave your order in the store and make your first payment of $1.00. The entire 29 volumes will be sent you at once and you will have them to use and profit by while you pay for them.

This advertisement, in order to reach the newspapers of the extreme East, West and South had to be prepared and sent out ten days ago. At that time we estimated that the remaining sets of the "Handy Volume" Britannica—the last in the entire world—would take care of all orders mailed us on or before Saturday, May 26th. But orders have been increasing so rapidly that the last set may be gone before this.

BUT—Do not let this possibility delay you. Send your order TODAY! Every minute now is precious if you are really anxious to own and profit by the knowledge the Britannica will bring you.

(If the last set is sold before your order is received, your money will be returned to you immediately.)

Music Dealers of Peterboro Are Organized

Dealers of the City Form a Friendly Association—Several Objects in View

The music dealers of the city have just completed an organization of themselves into a friendly working body, having several objects in view, the principle idea being along an educational line. Advancing the cause of "music in the home," in accordance with a general publicity plan now being generally adopted all over Canada, will be given special attention.

The business end of the organization is designed to give both dealers and the public mutual protection, and as outlined at the first meeting, promises to be a good feature. Mr. J. P. Cunningham, as the dealer longest in business in Peterborough, was elected President, and Mr. J. M. Greene, whose efforts to bring about the organization were recognized, was elected Vice-President, with Mr. J. O. Fife Secretary-Treasurer. The entire membership constitute an executive, and it is hoped that the young organization will have a successful career and prove of real use in its field of labour.

John Welsh Lost His Life at Fenelon Falls This Morning

Special to The Examiner.

FENELON FALLS, May 25.—John Welsh of Lindsay, formerly of Peterborough, a painter in the employ of the G. T. Railway was drowned here this morning. Welsh, with a companion, was engaged in painting the G. T. R. bridge over the river. They were seated on a plank when a rope became loosened and the plank tilted, throwing Welsh into the water. He sank quickly and his companion was unable to save him. The accident occurred at 10.30 o'clock and the body was recovered at 1 o'clock this afternoon. Mr. Welsh, whose home was in Lindsay, formerly worked in Peterborough. His wife was Miss Rose Guerin of Peterborough.

BABIES' OWN TABLETS USED TEN YEARS

Mrs. W. J. Wilson, Carp Ont., writes: "I have used Baby's Own Tablets for the last ten years and can highly recommend them for babyhood and childhood ailments. My baby boy was very delicate; in fact we never thought he would live but thanks to the Tablets he is now a fine healthy boy." Baby's Own Tablets should be kept in every home where there are small children. They regulate the bowels and stomach and never fail to cure the minor ills of little ones. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

NORMAL SCHOOL PRESENTATION

$25 for Men Under Col. Walker's Command

At the annual Normal School celebration of Empire Day, held on Wednesday at the school, $25 which had been collected by the students was presented to Col. Walker, Principal of the School, to be devoted to the benefit of the men of his command. An appropriate address was read to Col. Walker by Miss Connor, expressing the regret of the pupils and teachers that the Colonel's military duties should take him temporarily from his school duties and their hearty appreciation of his work whilst with the school. The Colonel replied in an address appropriate to the occasion, not only of his going away, but to the coming closing of the school year.

An excellent programme, consisting of patriotic songs, readings and addresses, was given by the pupils.

Some of the new frocks are trimmed with ostrich.

MAXIM TO BEAT SUBS

Announces That He Has Perfected a Device To Make Torpedoes Harmless

NEW YORK, May 23. — Hudson Maxim announced to-day that he had invented and perfected a device which will make ships immune from the dangers of the submarines.

He said that torpedoes, even when fired at close range, and striking their targets, would explode harmless'y against the hulls of their intended victims.

The inventor made the announcement at a luncheon given in Brooklyn. He asserted that the invention soon will be demonstrated by the Government, which already has been advised of the details.

"The invention is practical for every type of vessel," he said. "It can be applied within a few months at a comparatively cheap price to the hulls of ships already constructed. The only change necessary in vessels already built will be a slight enlargement of their beam. My device is of solid material and encircles the entire hull of the ship from the bow to the stern. It is in no sense or manner resembles either a screen or a net."

NURSING SISTER SAFE AT MALTA

A despatch in Tuesday's Montreal Star says:—"Contrary to reports published several days ago, stating that Nursing Sister Edna Day, of Trenton, Ont., was drowned when the hospital ship Asturia was torpedoed and sunk in the Mediterranean on March 20th, information has come to hand which shows that Sister Day is on the Isle of Malta. A brother-in-law of Miss Day has received a letter from her dated April 9th from the Isle of Malta by which it appears that she is well and uninjured."

Why hesitate? You were always intending to enlist. The Armories are open daily from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m.

BALFOUR IS IN CANADA

British Foreign Minister is Met on American Side of Falls by Provincial Representatives

Special to The Examiner:

NIAGARA FALLS, May 25. — Arthur J. Balfour, British Foreign Secretary, and special envoy of Great Britain to the United States, with his distinguished party, arrived again on British soil at this point just before noon to-day. Brigadier General Bridges, Admiral De Chair and Sir Arthur Springs Rice, British Ambassador to the United States, were included in the official party. Dudley Malone, collector of the United States port of New York, was an unofficial member and a guest of the party. Mr. Balfour was met on the United States side by Sir John Hendry, Lieut.-Governor of Ontario, Sir William Hearst, Premier, and Major General Logie. So rigidly were the new crossing-the-border regulations informed, that the big company of Canadian newspapermen and photographers here to witness the meeting were stranded on this side and not permitted to see the historic event. Sir John Hendrie presented the greeting and best wishes of Ontario to Mr. Balfour, who made a suitable reply. After having a view of the Falls from the Canadian side and inspecting the power works, etc., the whole party entrained on a special and left for Toronto. A big reception is awaiting Mr. Balfour at the Provincial Capital at 4 p.m.

Municipal Purchasing Board Buys Large Quantity From Western Ontario Miller.

CHATHAM, May 25.— The Chatham Municipal Purchasing Board will offer the ratepayers of this city flour at $5 a hundredweight, more than $2.50 below the present market price, within the next few days.

Secretary George H. Wanda, at a meeting of the committee, produced samples submitted by a Western Ontario miller, stating that the firm had agreed to furnish a large quantity of the flour at the price stated.

ALDERMEN WANT TO BE CALLED ON THE PHONE

It Is Becoming Increasingly Difficult To Get A Quorum at Committee Meetings — A Job for Sherlock Holmes.

MEETING POSTPONED

For some time past difficulty has been experienced in getting together sufficient aldermen to constitue a quorum when meetings are called at the City Hall. A meeting of the Board of Works committee of the City Council was called for Wednesday evening and when Big Ben chimed out the hour of meeting only two aldermen were on hand. From eight o'clock until nine thirty the belated aldermen kept struggling in, but not in sufficient numbers to make a quorum. Between the hour of nine and ten o'clock they started straggling out, and Ald. Weir, chairman of the committee, was compelled to abandon the prospects of holding a meeting for the want of a quorum. The assistant City Clerk called up several of the aldermen by telephone, and in more than one case was informed that the alderman in question had left the house. It might be well for the wives of some of the aldermen to investigate this state of affairs and find out for themselves where their hubbies get to when they fail to connect with the City Hall.

Wait to be Called.

Seldom a meeting passes but what the City Clerk is asked to call up some of the aldermen and find out if they are coming to the meeting. Such a condition has almost become chronic and it would seem that some of the aldermen wait to be called. Ald. Smith is one member of the Council to whom the above does not apply, as he can lay claim to the proud record of not having missed a single meeting since his election. Moreover he is usually prompt. On Wednesday evening both Mayor Duffus and Ald. Dobbin were in Montreal on city business, leaving nine members of the City Council in the city. It required six to make a quorum.

GENERAL DEBILITY

General debility is a term used to describe a weak and run down condition of the system. Debility may come from a number of causes. The after-effects of acute illness, lack of nourishment due to poor digestion, overwork or worry, or anything that makes the blood thin, thereby preventing it from carrying nourishment and health to the tissues of the body. The symptoms of debility vary, but weakness is always present, often a tendency to be easily fatigued, spots passing before the eyes, weak back, dizziness, wakefulness caused by inability to stop thinking, and unrefreshing sleep.

Debility is dangerous because it weakens the body's defence against disease. For instance debilitated people take cold easily and changeable weather is always trying for them. When you are in this condition it is dangerous to neglect yourself. Your system needs building up and no time should be lost in taking the proper treatment.

The treatment of ones a run-down condition with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is based on sound medical principles and common sense. These pills actually build up the blood so that it nourishes every part of the body—the nerves as well as the muscles—and brings vigor, strength and health.

If you are feeling at all weak, if you do not feel that your health is at its best you should begin caring yourself at once with Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. You can obtain these pills through any medicine dealer, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

"The enemy was at first surprised and nonplussed by the sudden onslaught, but towards evening he counter-attacked in force, supported by an exceptionally heavy bombardment. He was repulsed with severe loss.

"During the day we captured more than 9,000 prisoners, including more than 300 officers.

"Aerial squadrons, consisting of 130 machines, including a group of navy seaplanes, dropped ten tons of bombs on the enemy's lines and brought their machine guns to bear on masses of the enemy. Our airmen all returned safely.

Ten British Batteries Busy.

"Ten British batteries, which are on our front as evidence of the brotherly co-operation of our ally, made a large contribution to the artillery preparation. Our naval guns also proved very effective.

"In the Gorizia area our troops repulsed heavy enemy attacks, captured a strong point on the northwest slopes of San Marco, and, after severe fighting, made considerable progress in the Monte Santo and Vodice areas."

REPORTS AT DISTRICT METHODIST MEETING SHOW A GOOD YEAR

The annual Methodist district meeting of Peterborough was held in the George Street Methodist church on May 22.

Rev. B. Greatrix, chairman of the district, presided. The ministers present were ministers: Rev. S. R. G. Peever, Crookshanks, Dr. J. F. Wilson, R. A. Whattam, B. Greatrix, Wm. Higgs, W. H. Clarke, W. T. Wickett, C. W. Barrett, J. G. McKee, D. R. Clare, J. G. Lewis. The laymen present were: H. C. Stabler, T. W. Robinson, J. M. Green, John Speer, J. O. Fife, G. E. Burnham, Thos. McIndoo, J. W. Dawson, W. J. Northey, Jas. A. Bell, Nathan Paine, W. H. Lee, W. H. Pollard, and Stephen Harrison.

Others present were Rev. F. Johnston, Rev. Jos. Wilkes and R. E. Benson. Of the ministers of the district, Major Frost and Sergt. Smart are on active service.

Fourteen of the fifteen circuits of the District reported and the growth of the work was seen to be quite gratifying. Thirty-nine preaching places in all and thirty-four report a total membership of 4,305, an increase of 60 over the total of last year, if those not reporting are taken the same as last year.

The total amount raised for Connexional Funds (incomplete) was $12,170, an increase of $400 over last year's total.

Missionary givings reported (incomplete) $7,704, an increase over last year's total of over $600.

The total raised for all purposes (incomplete) $67,408, an increase over last year's total of over $5,000.

Rev. J. G. Lewis was elected to the Conference Stationing Committee with Rev. R. A. Whattam as alternate.

A motion of regret at the early departure of Rev. R. G. Peever was passed and kindly expressions of his companionship and co-operation in all the affairs of the Church and district were made by several of his associates.

Rev. Peever replied with very fitting words, speaking of the interest he had in Methodism, and priding himself in his connection with such an expansive and aggressive denomination.

Congratulations were extended to Dr. Wilson on the recent well-deserved honour conferred upon him by Victoria College.

The pastor and people of St. James' Church were congratulated on their splendid work in the erection of their new church.

The next district meeting was voted to be held in St. James' church.

Your friend's sympathy is like your own bank account. It's best not to draw too heavily upon it.

There is a lot of foolishness in the world and we all contribute to the output.

TURNBULLS

K. C. Initiation Was Held On The Holiday

Initiation ceremonies were held by the Peterborough Council of the Knights of Columbus in the Foresters Hall, Simcoe street yesterday. The candidates were from Bowmanville, Oshawa, Cobourg, Picton, Belleville, Trenton and Peterborough, and members were present from these and other towns of the district. In the morning high mass was celebrated at St. Peter's Cathedral by Rev. Father Meagher of Lakefield assisted by Rev. J. V. McAuley, of Peterborough and Rev. Father McCarthy of Norwood. The sermon preached by Rev. Father Heffernan, of Montreal, was an eloquent exposition of the ideals of the order and the duties of citizenship. In the afternoon the first degree was exemplified by Grand Knight Bawden, of Belleville, and the second by Mr. Peter Kennedy of Lindsay. In the evening District Deputy James E. McGlade of Brockville exemplified the third assisted by Mr. Joseph O'Brien and staff of Montreal. The evening concluded with a banquet in the T. A. S. rooms.

FIRST-CLASS WORK.

If you desire any kind of a carpentering or building job done, big or small, you cannot get any better satisfaction, both as to service and price than from George Sloan, Carpenter and Builder, 618 Chamberlain

"A GREEK SLAVE"

The Peterborough Operatic and Dramatic Society, under the direction of Mr. R. J. Devey, rose to new flights of success yesterday when two sparkling performances of Sydney Jones' comic opera, "A Greek Slave," were given at the Grand Opera House to a large attendance at the matinee, and to a crowded auditorium at night. In presenting a work of such calibre undoubtedly the most ambitious essayed by amateur performers in this city or elsewhere in Canada for that matter, Mr. Devey set himself and his talented company a task that meant many weeks of faithful work, but director and performers triumphed over all difficulties and offered a production that was a wonderful success from the opening chorus to the finale. Rich in music that is full of warmth and colour, with a well developed and logical plot, the scenes laid in a period that permits a lavish display of beautiful costumes and effective stage pictures, "A Greek Slave" makes heavy demands not only upon the vocal but also on the dramatic ability of its caste, and Mr. Devey's company showed themselves fully worthy of the confidence imposed in them by their director by outshining their previous successes in "San Toy" and "The Geisha," and giving a performance that was remarkable indeed.

The work of the company throughout was of a calibre that indicated not only individual cleverness and talent, but also unmistakably the successful results of the training methods of Mr. Devey. It is only necessary to say that the production surpassed Mr. Devey's earlier presentations than which no greater praise of an amateur performance may be given.

The Story of the Opera.

The story of "A Greek Slave" is rather more complete than that of the average musical production. The action is hinged on the machinations of Heliodorius, a Persian sooth sayer and necromancer whose oracle is in much demand in Rome. Princess Antonia visits the wizard for the purpose of learning why she is unable to love and is persuaded by the Persian's daughter Maia that she is loved by one of the Gods, no less than Eros, God of Love. Maia's lover, Diomed, a Greek slave, has been the model for a statute of Eros, and when Maia pretends to bring the statue to life, Heliodorius, anxious to get rid of Diomed, sends him instead of the statue to Antonia, who tries ardently out vainly to win his love. Marcus, prefect of Rome, desirous of winning the Princess himself, promises dire and awful penalties to Heliodorius unless the magician's fates can persuade Antonia to favour his suit. The Princess learns how she has been tricked, but also finds that she has learned how to love, so Maia and Diomed are forgiven, Heliodorus escapes the Tiber and Antonia smiles on the Prefect.

Where all did so well, comparisons are perhaps invidious, but it is but simple justice to pay tribute to the work of Mrs. Nicholls in the exacting part of Maia, in which she won all hearts by the charm of her singing and the ease and grace of her manner. When it is considered that up to two weeks ago yesterday Mrs. Nicholls had never even seen the libretto or the score of the role, having been called upon unexpectedly when Mrs. W. G. Perks, through a bereavement, was unable to continue after rehearsing for many weeks, Mrs. Nicholls' performance must be considered a wonderful one, and she is indeed to be congratulated. She invested the role of Maia with a delightful charm, while her pure soprano, which never lost its sweetness in the higher registers, made her singing a treat. Perhaps her best number was the beautiful song, "The Golden Isle" in the second act, which she sang with a full appreciation of its possibilities. She was delightful, too, in "The Lost Pleiad" and in her duet with Diomed, "All is Fair."

Mr. Fred Hartshorn had the title role and repeated the triumph he has won in other productions of the Operatic Society. He was manly and likeable as Diomed and free from amateurish awkwardness, while added to his effective stage presence was a rich baritone voice that was heard to great advantage. His biggest number was the solo, "Let Me Be Free," when Mr. Hartshorn sang in splendid style. He scored again in the second act in the melodious number, "The Girl of My Heart," and altogether gave a most finished performance.

To Mr. Vernon Dredge, as Heliodorus fell most of the fun making of the opera, and Mr. Dredge quickly proved that the part was in capable hands. His funny lines and equally amusing "business" kept the audience convulsed whenever he was on the stage. The part is a lengthy and difficult one, and Mr. Dredge made the most of his opportunities in a manner that added materially to the success of the production.

The Princess Antonia.

Miss Leila Smyth, both in appearance and bearing, made an admirable Princess Antonia. Her role was played with charm and restraint, while her two song numbers, "I Cannot Love" and "A Song of Love," were given in splendid voice and charming expression.

Miss Lila Waterman as Iris, the confidential slave of the Princess, had a part that fitted her splendidly, and she was natural and pleasing throughout. Some of the most lilting of the song numbers fell to Miss Waterman's lot and they were effectively presented, especially the sprightly number, "I'm a Naughty Girl," in which the chorus also shone. The incidental dancing that accompanied her song numbers was effectively done by Miss Waterman.

Mr. W. H. Barry was dignified and successful as Marcus, Prefect of Rome. In his scenes with Heliodorus Mr. Barry especially shone, and the audience found much amusement in some of the unusual punishments that he threatened. His topical song, "I Want to be Popular," in which he introduced such timely subjects as the Hunter street bridge and the bathing beach question was enthusiastically received.

Mr. James Liddell was most pleasing as Archias, the sculptor, his work being marked by a refreshing ease. His song number, "The Revels," one of the most stirring in the opera, was most effectively given, with the assistance of some splendid work by the chorus.

Miss Dorothy Fenwick gave a very successful interpretation of the part of Melanopis, head of the slaves, and Miss Jordan was pleasing as Nepea, the attendant.

The four Patrician ladies, Miss Quartermaine, Miss Francis, Miss Eason and Miss Raper, thoroughly looked their part, while Messrs. Boyle, Devey, Hutchinson and Taylor were splendid as the Roman nobles. The eight scored heavily in their number, "Topsey Turvey" in the second act.

Graceful in their dancing, and effective in their singing were the four lute players, Misses Amy and Doris Rathbone, Minnie Allen and Ethel Sheppard.

The Dancing Features.

A big feature of the production was the dancing there being no fewer than seven dance numbers in all. Little Miss Betty Burnham made one of the biggest hits of the evening in her dance number, in which she proved the poetry of motion. Dainty and graceful, the little danseuse took the audience by storm and an encore had to be given. A tarantella dance arranged by Miss Annie Bickersteth and given by sixteen of the chorus, was delightfully presented, as was Miss Bickersteth's solo dance which followed it.

No description of the performance would be complete without a tribute to the grand work of the chorus. Strong in numbers and in vocal ability, their singing was a most delightful treat. The invocation scene, when the statue of Eros apparently comes to life and sings, was a concerted number that was admirably presented, the trio of two sopranos (Mrs. Nicholls and Miss Smyth) and baritone (Mr. Hartshorn) being accompanied by the full chorus in a manner that aroused the enthusiasm of the audience. The chorus also scored in the accompaniment to Mr. Hartshorn's solo, 'The Girl of My Heart," and in the "Hail to Thee, Antonia" and other choruses, showing a volume and an accuracy of attack that were refreshing. An especially harmonious choral number was the opening of the second act, "Here at Baiae on the Bay," in which the voices blended most harmoniously.

Although he had no lines to say or songs to sing, a most difficult part was that of Gunner Wilfrid Hartshorn, who posed as the statue of Eros and did it so successfully that a number in the audience were completely deceived.

Mrs. R. J. Devey and Mr. R. G. Sturgeon did splendid work as stage managers.

'A Greek Slave" will be repeated to-night, and the third and final performance should surpass in enjoyment and merit the first two offerings.

MONEY FOR TOBACCO IS APPRECIATED

Mr. Francis Jones of the Overseas Club Writes To Thank Peterboro Contributors

Mr. H. Dearle, Honourary Secretary of the Peterborough branch Overseas Club has received the following letter from M. Francis Jones, the acting secretary of the Parent Organization, London:

April 27th, 1917

H. Dearle, Esq.,
Hon. Sec. Overseas Club,
Peterborough, Ont., Canada.

Dear Sir,—Your letter of March 28th has reached me safely with a draft of £30 towards our Tobacco Fund for the members of our Peterborough branch. Please will you convey to all of them our cordial thanks for their generosity? No doubt, the ready addressed post-cards will reach us in a few days' time, and we shall then be able to despatch the gifts without delay.

It is with great pleasure that I welcome you, as Honourary Secretary of the Peterborough branch. Mr. Wrench asks me to convey to you his cordial greeting. As you, no doubt, know he is at present serving in the Royal Flying Corps, but his duties permit him to continue to take an active interest in the work of the Club and in the news of all our branches.

To return to the contribution towards our Tobacco Fund, we shall be glad to address the gifts in the way you request, and hope that a plentiful batch of post-cards will be returned to you as evidence that the parcels have been safely received.

Unfortunately, I find that Canadians are the most remiss in returning the reply post-cards, and in this way a great deal of disappointment is caused to Canadian contributors. But acknowledgments from Commanding Officers for the cases of smokes which are addressed to them are almost in every case returned to us, so that we know that the cases have arrived safely at their destination even if the individual soldier may not send his personal thanks back to Canada. The recent hard fighting, no doubt, accounts for this remissness to a very large extent and is, therefore, readily forgiven.

I shall be very pleased to send you by next mail some data, giving a summary of contributions received from Canada and other Dominions of the Empire.

Yours very truly,
FRANCIS R. JONES.
Acting Secretary.

You will note that I am in London, trying to do Mr. Wrench's work. I am sure all you in Peterborough will do your best to help us and for the sake of the great cause, I should be sorry to feel that our undertakings suffered in his absence. My kind regards to all Peterborough friends.

FRANCIS R. JONES

LES DARCY IS DEAD VICTIM OF PNEUMONIA

Passed Away in Memphis, Tenn., Yesterday Afternoon—Enlisted As Aviator.

MEMPHIS, May 24.—Les Darcey, the Australian pugilist, died at a hospital here this afternoon from pneumonia. He had been ill more than a month. Darcey died about 1.45 o'clock. Manager Gilmore and Trainer Hawkins were at the bedside. Gilmore at once sent a cablegram to the dead man's mother in Australia and the body will be held here pending instructions from her.

Darcy had enlisted in the Aviation Reserve Corps shortly before he was taken ill. Then he was pronounced by the officer in charge as the most perfect specimen of manhood that had applied for enlistment in the corps.

New York, May 24.—Les Darcy, the Australian pugilist, arrived in this country on the tank steamer Cushing on December 23 of last year. He was met by "Tex." Rickard, the boxing promoter, who was then making arrangements for the Australian middleweight champion to meet Georges Carpentier, the French champion. This as well as several other matches in which Darcy was to have been a principal, had to be abandoned.

In the first place Carpentier declined to leave France during the war. Then there were rumours that Darcy left Australia to avoid joining the British army, and Gov. Whitman of New York issued an edict forbidding the Australian champion to appear in any glove contest in this State.

Meanwhile other bouts were being promoted between Darcy and other light heavyweight and middleweight American boxers, but none of these matured. In Ohio and Louisian the Governors followed the lead taken by Gov. Whitman.

Darcy never appeared in a real ring contest in this country, and the only opportunity he had to show his ability and cleverness was when he went on a brief theatrical tour giving boxing exhibitions.

COBB ENROLLS FOR SERVICE IN ARMY AND WOULD BE A GUNNER

DETROIT, Mich., May 24.—Tyrus R. Cobb of the Tigers strolled into the City Hall here at noon to-day on his way to the ball park and formally enrolled himself as an eligible for war under the new selective draft law which is now operative. The Georgian dislikes publicity of a personal sort, and when he gave his name to the clerk and at once found himself the centre of attraction, he hurried through the formalities and left the building as fast as he could.

"Sure, I'll go any time they want me," said Ty, in response to a query, and added, "and so will every man on the Detroit team." The famous fielder expects to join the artillery branch of the army, going preferably with a Georgia corps, if it can be arranged. Cobb on his enrollment card gave his age as 30. Seventeen other members of the Detroit team have also enrolled.

Father Crowley Is Transferred To Sudbury

Profound regret would accompany the announcement of the removal of Rev. Father T. J. Crowley from Copper Cliff to take charge of the new Irish parish in Sudbury were it not that the change means a promotion for the esteemed clergyman, for Rev. Father Crowley is a man who is highly respected and greatly admired, not only by his own congregation, but by the whole town.

As a citizen the Catholics of Copper Cliff have much to be proud of in their pastor. A genial fellow, a good mixer, one who loves the great out doors and interests himself in all manly athletic sports. A keen enthusiast of lacrosse, a zealous curler, baseball fan, sportsman, angler and an enthusiast in all fair-minded contests.

That Father Crowley's opinion is taken as an authority on the games he interests himself in has been shown time and time again. He was elected president of the lacrosse team in 1914, was president of the Gun Club the same year, was chosen as one of the senior skips in the new Copper Cliff Curling Club when the rink was built in 1915-16, and in many other ways by his affable manner and genial disposition, together with his executive ability and sportsman accomplishments has been recognized as a leader in many fields.

And although Father Crowley is as good a sportsman as one would care to meet, his participation in these things does not lose for him the dignity of his office. He is highly respected everywhere.

As a church worker Rev. Father Crowley has been tireless. He has done much to build up the little parish he came to over five years ago until now it is one of the important parishes of the diocese. At Creighton Mine, where he is also pastor of St. Michael's Church, he recently instituted Mass twice a month instead of monthly, as was the former custom, and there stands to his efforts at Creighton Mine a new church, recently dedicated, for his successor.

Rev. Father Crowley leaves St. Stanislaus' on July 1st to become parish priest of the new Catholic congregation in Sudbury. He will conduct services in Jubilee Hall until the new edifice is built.

MILITARY NEWS

Lieut. C. R. Widdifield, formerly O. C. of A company, 93rd Battalion, and now in France with another Canadian battalion, writes to a member of the Examiner staff as follows:

France, May 4th, 1917.

Just a line to let you know that things are going just the same in France as in England, which means that we are victorious all along the line, even if it is somewhat slower. Old Fritz keeps pounding away, but we do twice as strong, so there is only one end in view, and that is victory. When victory will come I cannot say, but the end should not be far away, as it is only a question of how long Fritz can hold out. He seems to have all kinds of shells, as he keeps sending them over at a great rate, but they do not do much damage.

I was sorry to hear that Peterborough did not win the O.H.A., but they are helping a whole lot to win this game. Remember me to all the boys.

Yours sincerely,
C. R. WIDDIFIELD.

C. A. M. C. WANT MEN.

Sergt. T. R. Blunt of the Canadian Army Medical Corps (Queen's) training depot, Kingston, is home for a few days. During his stay in the city he expects to secure a number of Peterborough recruits. Now that conscription is close at hand it is expected that the attractive nature of Army Medical Corps work will appeal to many young men. The recruits are given a splendid training under ideal conditions at Kingston, and drafts are sent overseas periodically for work in the hospitals, field ambulances, etc. The work is fascinating and young men who will be called out in the first draft under the selective draft scheme are advised by Sergt. Blunt to consider the matter well. It may be too late to get into the C. A. M. C. when conscription comes into effect.

The Norwood Register has the following reference to the death of Sergt. John Rathwell, formerly of the 93rd Battalion who was reported a week ago as killed in action.

The announcement by wire last Thursday morning of the death of another of Norwood's representatives on the far-flung battle line of the Allies was the cause of the town flag being again placed at half mast. An official telegram from the Militia Department at Ottawa to Mrs. Rathwell brought the sad news that her husband, Sergt. John Rathwell, had been officially reported killed in action on the 8th of May.

Sergt. Rathwell, who was in his 39th year, leaves a wife and four boys—the eldest of whom is in his fifteenth year and the youngest about four years of age.

As a marksman Sergt. Rathwell was probably the best in the Norwood platoon if not in the Battalion. At the ranges in England he made a perfect score and was awarded the cross-rifles—a mark of distinction greatly coveted by soldiers. He was afterwards chosen as a musketry instructor and served in that capacity for several months in England. He might have remained in that position indefinitely had he not insisted upon going to the front to do his bit. On the 93rd Battalion being broken up he, with the other non-commissioned officers, was reduced to the rank of Pte. On the field in France he was raised to the position of Lance-Corporal and was in line for further promotion when he was killed.

Lance-Corporal Rathwell (as he is now officially designated) was observant, cool and resourceful, and was never happier than when he was tramping through the woods with his rifle. He was an all round sport and a member of the old Norwood hockey team and other local sporting organizations, and also played with the Midland hockey team for two or three seasons.

He was a member of Norwood Lodge A.F.&A.M., No. 223, and was held in high esteem by his brethren and the people of the community.

A memorial service was held Sunday evening in the Presbyterian Church. The attendance was very large, the church being filled to overflowing, which tells the story, without words, how the deceased was regarded in the community. The service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. E. J. Wolland, B. D., whose discourse was in keeping with the occasion. Rev. A. Mapsell Irwin, B.A., B.D., pastor of the Methodist church, was present, having withdrawn the evening service in order that the members of his congregation might pay their tribute to the brave soldier by their attendance. Rev. Mr. Irwin also spoke briefly, voicing his admiration of Sergt. Rathwell and exhorting the eligible men of the community to fill up the broken ranks.

If you are anxious to go overseas Lt. Col. Walker will take care of you at the Armories. Apply now.

FAIR AND A THIRD WAS HOLIDAY RATE

Single Exception of New Regulations Was Provided Yesterday.

The holiday traffic out of town on the railways was lighter than usual for Empire Day, but in spite of the weather was comparatively large. A special holiday rate of fare and one-third, returning Friday, obtained, although it was unknown to most of the travellers. It had been announced early in the year that there would be no special holiday fares, but a circular was received regarding this reduction two days before the holiday. However, it was stated that this is the only occasion during the year that there will be any form of exception.

MAY ESTABLISH CONVALESCENT HOME IN PETERBORO

The Oriental Hotel May Be Used For That Purpose

A movement is on foot to secure the Oriental Hotel for the purposes of a Convalescent Home. The property will cease to exist as a hotel after this week and an auction sale will follow the closing of the doors. Mr. J. H. Burnham, M.P., has been notified of the circumstances and he has consented to bring the matter to the attention of the authorities at Ottawa.

There are a number of Peterborough soldiers in the Convalescent Home in Kingston and the establishment of a similar institution in Peterborough will mean that Peterborough soldiers will be cared for in their own home town.

Empire Day In the Schools

On account of the inclemency of the weather no out-door celebrations of Empire Day were held at the public schools, but splendid patriotic programmes, prepared by the Education Department, were followed, these consisting of patriotic songs, and lessons in the geography and history of the Empire. Special addresses on Sir John McDonald and the Honourable George Brown were given by invited speakers.

HAPPY CHILDREN

Are the ones that get along best. They play better and grow better, and do better work at school. Often the cause of a child's dullness can be traced to poor eyesight, and it is too bad to have their progress hampered in this way when it can be so easily corrected. Dr. Fowler makes a special feature of the care of children's eyes and advises an examination if there appears to be eye trouble.

One precious to our hearts has gone,
The voice we loved is stilled;;

BRAZIL WOULD WELCOME THE ALLIED WARSHIPS

Existence Depends on Freedom of Seas, They Say, Urging Opening of Ports — Newspaper Comment Indicates the Growth of Public Opinion That Neutrality is Ended.

SCORNS WAR DECLARATION

RIO JANEIRO, May 26.—Opening of all Brazilian ports to the war ships of the Entente Allies was advocated in the Chamber of Deputies by Nilo Pecanha, the Foreign Minister, Antonio Bueno de Andrada and several other members of Parliament during a spirited discussion of the proposed new Brazilian policy in the international situation. Senhor de Andrada, in urging the opening of the ports, declared that such a measure would be in the interest of Brazil, whose existence depended upon freedom of the seas.

Antonio Carlos, government leader in the Chamber, declared that the text of the message of President Braz proved that the government had no intention of influencing the action of Congress, and that its purpose was to leave to Congress the final decision of Brazil's course. The President's message recommending the rescinding of Brazil's declaration of neutrality was read in the Senate to-day. Much interest centres in the outcome of the conferences of various parliamentary commissions held to-day.

Forced Into War, Says Minister.

Foreign Minister Pecanha declared in the Council of Ministers, according to the newspapers, that it was necessary for Brazil to declare war on Germany, because she had been virtually forced into a state of war by circumstances. He said that the torpedoing of the Brazilian steamer Tijuca did not essentially modify the situation created by the destruction of the Parana.

Senhor Pecanha said that in regard to co-operation between Brazil and the United States, the government should devote its entire attention to military and naval organization, especially with respect to co-operating with the United States in the policing of the South Atlantic, and should prepare for any eventuality. After the meeting of the Council Senhor Pecanha was asked as to the possibility of Brazil's declaring war on Germany. The Minister replied:

"Brazil declares war on nobody. She defends herself. It is Germany which declares war on all neutrals."

Senhor Pechana will send to the Chamber of Deputies and the Senate to-day the result of the inquiry into the sinking of the Tijuca. He will also furnish details of the diplomatic exchanges regarding the international situation.

The comments of the newspapers indicate a hardening of public opinion on the necessity of declaring war against Germany as a step to effect the solidarity of Brazilian policy with that of the United States. The Jornal de Commercio says:

"In the presence of German barbarity there are two attitudes to chose from, either co-operation in the cause of liberty or the humiliation of Brazil. Brazil will not humiliate herself. Our government is not free to declare war—that is for Congress to decide—but the government is fortified by the confidence of the entire country. It is not the torpedoing of the Tijuca which has determined the firm attitude of the Brazilian government. That is the consequence of more elevated considerations.

"Aligned With America."

"Our neutrality is ended. We are not yet in war, but we are aligned with and for America, and we will enter freely into a state of belligerency without considering for a moment an alliance with Europe. Such is our point of view at present. The sequel depends not on the government, but on Congress, and the nation waits for Congress to do its duty as the government has indicated it."

The Correio da Manha says: "The action of the United States was inspired by the supreme interests of civilization. This circumstance places American intervention, with which we associate ourselves to-day, on a superior plane. We have become deliberate collaborators in American policy."

O Pais considers the torpedoing of the Tijuca of secondary importance compared with the events which preceded it. "The torpedoing," says this paper, "will not oblige us to make a theatrical declaration of war against Germany, but it will oblige us to take measures of national defence, which Germany can interpret as she may."

Freckles and Blotches Are Easily Peeled Off

If you are bothered with any cutaneous blemish, it's a poor plan to use paint, powder or anything else to cover it up. Too often this only emphasizes the defect. Besides, it's much easier to remove the disfigurement with ordinary mercolized wax. Applied nightly, the wax will gradually remove freckles, pimples, moth patches, liver spots, sallowness, red blotches or any surface eruption. The affected cuticle is absorbed, a little each day, until the clear, soft, youthful and beautiful skin beneath is brought wholly to view. Ask the druggist for one ounce of mercolized wax and use this like you use cold cream. Remove in morning with soap and water. Many who have tried this simple, harmless treatment report astonishing results.

If troubled with wrinkles or furrows, a wash lotion made by dissolving an ounce of powdered saxolite in a half pint of witch hazel, will prove wonderfully effective. There is nothing better for drawing in a flabby skin and improving the facial contour. It acts instantly and will not irritate even the most sensitive skin.

Rich Buyers Pay Any Price That the Dealers Ask.

PARIS, May 25.—With the inauguration of the regime of two meatless days a week, beef went to one dollar a pound to-day and vegetables and fish followed the upward tendency. The rush for meat supplies to carry over until Wednesday swamped the butchers, although they had laid in extra amounts. There was a good deal of crowding, and some sharp talk was heard against rich buyers who paid any price the dealers asked, sending the quotations too high for modest purses. Beef on the hoof at the stockyards was higher than last week although the receipts were larger. Wholesalers appear to take the view that the new regulations will not reduce consumption.

Diet during the War: Those who write to us the details of conditions in Europe at the present time tell us that the people were never before so alert, quick in thinking, and in physical action. That they are brighter and were it not for the horrors of death in nearly every household they would probably be happier than before the war. Those that have been upon a restricted diet, but still had enough substantial and nourishing food are in much better physical condition than before.

If we observe animal life we find an abundance of examples to point the way to good health and energetic action. When a cat, dog, horse or any other domestic animal is overfed it becomes fat and lazy. The fat dog has hardly sufficient energy to bark if a stranger appears, the fat cat will not hunt the mice, the fat cow will not give so much milk, fat hens will not lay eggs, fat horses cannot stand rapid trams or heavy loads up hill.

Fat and overfat people seldom have much initiative. Well fed people do not cause revolutions. Pictures of revolutionary patriots of our own country do not show aldermanic proportions.

Now, the dietetic advice I have been giving in the Home Health Club lectures for about a quarter of a century is about to be acted upon by all the people of all the world, and it is not because the people want better health but because the quantity of food in the world is less than at any time for at least a century, and because there is going to be a more even distribution than ever before. Everybody must work while war is on and everybody must be fed. I am going to make a suggestion that may prevent hunger from coming into your home as well as into the home of your neighbor.

I have here in my office some potatoes, carrots, onions, cabbage, parsnips, celery, pumpkins, apples, pears and berries that are four years old. They are bone dry and have been kept in boxes and bags. By adding tepid water any one of them is within a few hours restored to the same condition they were when fresh in the garden. Fresh green peas, string beans, sweet corn, anything that is fresh and good to eat can be kept six months or six years in a perfect state by the same simple and inexpensive method that has kept these and the fresh taste is not in the least impaired.

The principal problem heretofore has been to preserve the delicate volitile oil that gives odor and flavor to fresh vegetables and fruit and still remove the water. By the process I have used the water only is removed and a potato or a cabbage as well as any other vegetable or fruit will not freeze or rot without water. There is a shortage of tin cans and glass fruit jars have doubled in price. We do not need either. Heretofore potatoes, the finest that can be grown anywhere in the world have been allowed to rot in the Montana fields because the freight to market was prohibitive. When the water is removed the weight is reduced 75 per cent., so that four car loads could be shipped in one car. Eight car loads of cabbage could be shipped from the bountiful Texas fields to Chicago or New York in one car. There is plenty of water in the cities and the housekeeper that lives in an apartment house with no cellar for storage or fresh vegetables can keep her supplies on the pantry shelves and in a small space.

By the new process all of the crop can be saved, the small as well as the large. There need be no waste and if a surplus is grown during any bountiful year it can be as cheaply and as easily kept over as wheat.

I wish I could tell you more of the details of the dry fresh vegetables and fruit, but many would not be interested. I will gladly write personal letters to help you. Don't worry about starving but begin while things are plentiful to cut down the quantity, chew more thoroughly, and gain more real strength from what you eat.

CLUB NOTES.

I will gladly answer all inquiries for information on health subjects from readers of this paper if the same are addressed to Home Health Club, 5039 Cottage Grove Ave., Chicago, Ill. Send full name and address with 4 cents postage.

DEAR DOCTOR: I write to thank you many times for what your instructions on Special Diet for the Thin, Nervous Folks, has done for me. I have gained 25 pounds in 2 months, and am looking like a different person. The three days of fasting was the hardest for me. The third day and night I felt so weak and sick with nausea that I had to break the fasting by taking the juice of an orange, and I felt better.

For the last three weeks I have been troubled with a strange sensation in my legs, worse in the left leg. When I sit down it feels as though I must move it. Am not troubled with it when I walk around. My ankles and heels ache and feel tired before night, even if I do rest during the day. Do you think this is caused by the change of diet? Have an aching feeling in the upper part of my spine when I work much with my arms. Have taken the tissue elements regularly. Maybe I should not take them with the milk diet? In your first lessons on Dynamic Magnetism, is it necessary to sit in a chair I can relax so much better lying down.—S. E.

(ANSWER): I am gratified to know that you have worked out through my directions the problems of successful home treatment of your case in such a satisfactory manner. You do not need to fear in the least that the change of diet has had anything at all to do with the aches and the pains that you experience in your limbs and back. It has, instead, cleared your system of waste matters and impurities to a very large extent, although of course it may require a little longer time before all of these impure substances will be entirly removed. Look up in your Vol. II. the home method of treatment, under the heading Lumbago. Secure assistance and apply hot fomentations towards the whole length of the spine in accordance with the instructions furnished in that book. Observe also the chapter entitled Uric Acid Diathesis. The proper selection of tissue foods would also prove to be an important factor in restoring you to health. You would be wise to continue with them for some time longer. Instead of taking ordinary milk use buttermilk. I believe that you will gain better and speedier results from so doing than by taking the sweet milk with fruits.

In practicing my lessons on Dynamic Magnetism, it is always best to follow the directions closely since by so doing I am satisfied that better results will be accomplished. You may be able to relax by lying down, still I prefer that you follow the directions as stated.

EVASIVE EYES.

"Angelina, my angel, can you tell me why your eyes are like you and me" was the query put in one love letter.

The reply: "No Augustus, I can't. Tell me, or, tell me, why they are thus?"

In the following letter came the answer: "Because they correspond but never meet."

"Nature" chose Assam

Scientists tell us that Assam in northern India was the original home of the tea plant. Thousands of years ago "Nature" chose the climate and soil of this favored region as most suitable for growing tea.

It is, therefore, natural that the hillside gardens of Assam (see picture) grow the teas which to-day are famous for their flavor, fragrance and rich strength.

It is of these Assam teas, skilfully blended with choice Ceylons, that Red Rose Tea consists. It is this rich Assam strength that users of Red Rose Tea must thank for its splendid economy—for the greater number of cups it yields to the pound, fully one-third more than ordinary teas.

To make certain that these Assam qualities are fully preserved for you we put Red Rose Tea into dust, odor and air proof sealed packages. Red Rose Tea reaches you pure, fresh and full strength—we guarantee it.

White Deer Skins as Cash.

In China, the first country in the world credited with using banknotes, certain skins were so valuable that they were accepted as cash and passed from hand to hand in the same way as banknotes are at the present day. The negotiability of these skins arose thus:

The Emperor Ou Ti, being in want of money, gave his treasurer to understand that such a state of affairs must not continue. At that time it was customary for princes and courtiers on entering the royal presence to cover their faces with a piece of skin. Taking advantage of this custom, the treasurer ordered a decree to be issued forbidding the use of any other skins for this purpose except those of a certain white deer in the royal parks. Immediately there was a demand for pieces of these skins, which, being a monopoly, were sold at a high price and the royal coffers refilled. The steady value of the skins thus secured made them readily pass and acceptable as an equivalent of coin of the realm.

Storm Stories.

History repeats itself even in storms at sea. The Norwegian steamer Spica was broken from her moorings at Blyth and pitched like a cork over half a mile of dangerous rocks until she bumped against the pier. But this is nothing to the adventure of the Ebenezer, a craft of ninety-five tons, which was once driven by a gale toward Chesil beach, near Portland. An enormous wave seized hold of the ship and carried it to the very top of the bank, where it was left high and dry. The sailors stepped over the side and walked into Portland, "where they were greeted by some as liars, by others as men who had come out of the jaws of death," as the record puts it. But the Ebenezer was found exactly as they had said it would be, and two days later she was launched and brought round to Weymouth bay.—Westminster Gazette.

Its Backbone Is a Spring.

The snapping bug has a spring in his back like a knife. When not in use as a spring it serves him as a backbone, so you see he is a believer in scientific efficiency and makes one part of his machinery do the work of two. His spring backbone, or backbone spring, if you prefer, gives him power to jump, which in turn gives him his name. Nature probably gave him the spring to help him get on his feet when he's on his back. You've noticed how helpless some insects are when you lay them on their backs. Not this one, however. He slips his backbone out of its groove and then slips it back again suddenly. The spring pops him up in the air; he turns a somersault and drops right side up. Spring backbones are common in several other beetles, remarks the Philadelphia North American. The beetle of the pestiferous wireworm, which destroys the farmer's crops, has a spring in his back. Other members of the family make their homes in trees or decayed wood.

If a large, flat pan is set on the kitchen table and all used spoons, forks and knives laid upon it, the table top will be saved from messing.

For greasing baking pans a bowl of one of the cheaper greases, unsalted drippings or one of the butter substitutes may be kept in the ice box with a small flat brush in it. This brush need not be washed every day, but when it is washed a strong soap lather and soda should be used so that it may be thoroughly cleansed.

Economy of time, which is second only in importance to economy of output, is achieved by planning the cooking so that utensils may be used for various purposes without washing. If the dry ingredients are measured first, the solids next and the liquids last, the same vessels may serve. Milk may be put in the same bowl where whites of eggs have been beaten. Molasses may follow yokes of eggs, and breadcrumbs may be ground after meat to work out all the particles adhering to the knives of the grinder.

Pleasant Evening Reveries—A Column Dedicated to Tired Mothers as They Join the Home Circle at Evening Tide

CRUDE THOUGHTS FROM THE EDITORIAL PEN

WHAT IS HOME?

Ask the above question of any person you chance to meet, who has wandered from home and in nine cases out of ten the answer will be that Home is a green spot in memory, a centre about which the grandest recollection of his grief oppressed heart cling with all tenderness of youth's first love. Home has an influence that is stronger than death. It is law to our hearts and binds us with a spell which neither time nor change can break. Not merely friends and kindred render that home so dear but the very hills and streams throw a charm around the place of one's nativity. It is no wonder the grandest harps are tuned to sing of "Home Sweet, Home." No songs are sweeter than those heard among the boughs that share our parent's dwelling, when some evening hour found us gay as the birds that warbled o'er us. We may wander away and mingle with the world's strife, form new associates and fancy we have forgotten the land of our birth; but as we listen, perhaps to the sound of the summer wind, the remembrance of other days come over the soul and fancy bears us back to the childhood days and home. We may find climes as beautiful and friends as dear, but they will not usurp the place of "Home, Sweet Home."

WORK WILL NOT HURT.

It was Robert J. Burdette who said —My son, you have to work, whether you handle pick or pen, a wheelbarrow or a set of books, ringing an auction bell or writing funny things, you must work. If you look around you will see the men who are the most able to live the rest of their lives without work are the men who work the hardest.

Don't be afraid of killing yourself with overwork. They die sometimes but it's because they quit work at 6 p.m., and don't go home till 2 a.m. It is the interval that kills my son. The work gives you an appetite for your meals; it lends solidity to your slumbers and gives you a perfect and graceful appreciation of a holiday.

There are young men who do not work but the world is not proud of them. It does not know their names even; it simply speaks of them as "old So-and-so's boys." The great busy world doesn't know that they are there.

So find out what you want to be and do, take off your coat and make a dust in the world. The busier you are the less harm you are apt to get into, the sweeter and happier will be your holidays, and the better satisfied will the world be with you.

APPRECIATION.

I always look forward to the coming of your paper with much anticipation, as to what good thing the Home Circle will have for us this week, and am never disappointed. You seem to have an inexhaustible supply of wholesome truth for all in the home—old and young. Every phase in life receives its illumination from your pen and somehow life seems a bit brighter, the atmosphere purer and hope stronger after absorbing the thoughts that you present, and in appreciation of all this and many other excellent features, I write these lines.—A Western Reader.

If men would remember that women can't always be smiling, who have to cook the dinner, answer the bell half a dozen times, get rid of a neighbor who has dropped in, tend to a sick baby, tie up the cut finger of a two-year-old, gather up the plaything, of a four-year-old, tie up the head of a six-year-old on skates, and get an eight-year-old ready for school, to say nothing of sweeping, cleaning, etc. A woman with all these to contend with may claim it a privilege to look and feel a little tired sometimes, and a word of sympathy would not be too much to expect from a man, who during the honeymoon, wouldn't let her carry as much as a sunshade.

* * *

The evening is the hour when crafty Satan preaches most eloquently. It is also the hour when he can gather the largest and most attentive audience. In our great cities, Satan's churches are crowded every evening. But, fortunately, the evening hour is also the hour in which the good angel can gather the largest audience, and he who would baffle Satan's influence must preach in the evening. The evening is the hour when the protesting power of home is greatest; it is the hour when its protection is most needed.

* * *

A mother who really has the good of her children at heart, will teach them as soon as they can walk not only to help themselves but to help others. She will not bring them up under the impression that they are unfledged angels, but dear, wilful little mortals who must learn they came to serve and not to rule. Self sacrifice is a good quality in a mother, but it is possible to carry that spirit too far; it is possible to make sacrifices which are not only uncalled for and not necessary but really harmful in their effects.

In the home all that is characteristically feminine in woman unfolds and flourishes. Home without woman is a misnomer, for woman makes home, and home is what she makes it. If she is illiterate, her home partakes of this quality; if she is immoral her home cannot be the abode of virtue; if she is coarse refinement does not dwell where she resides. If she is cultivated, pure, refined, those qualities will characterise the home which she creates. The higher the degree of her culture, her purity, her refinement, the more will these qualities characterise the home of which she is the centre.

One-Piece Dresses Call for Smart Coats

Youthful Sports Skirts and Summer Blouses Vie With the One-Piece Frock

New York, May 24.

One-piece dresses have come to stay. In silk, satin, foulard, taffeta, pongee, Georgette crepe, chiffon, voile, crepe, in fact, running the entire gamut of materials, these dresses are spring favorites. Of course this type of dress demands a separate coat, for even in summer a wrap is necessary. The velours, duvetyns and other piled fabrics were so popular for the winter that we have for spring and summer similar fabrics, only in a weight suitable for the weather. Lightweight velours in white, sand color, gray, and many brighter shades are particularly appealing for the separate coat. The model illustrated shows the latest effect in spring coats. It is developed in sand colored velours and has the smart barrel or bowling-pin effect in its wideness at the hips accentuated by pocket sections. A wide soft collar and cuffs in gauntlet effect, are other features which aid in giving this model style. For automobiling this coat might be successfully developed in one of the dust-proof satins, and will be practicable for wearing in the car and quite stylish when loosened at luncheon or dinner at the hotel.

THE YOUTHFUL SPORTS SKIRTS.

The new sports clothes show a youthful note and yet embody that simplicity which is requisite to make gay colors practical for every-day wear. The skirts gathered or shirred at the waist line, sometimes straight hanging, and sometimes brought in at the ankles to give the new barrel effect, are made of a wide variety of materials. Tussah, rajah, pongee and similar weaves are the mainstay of the more expensive skirts while cotton fabrics, in white with gay squares, discs, balloon dots, and in striped effects, may be had at varying prices. Cretonne, which has had such a vogue for smocks and trimmings in seasons past is pressed into use again this season for these same sport skirts. They are often made cross-wise of the goods so that the selvage of the cretonne is used instead of a hem, and the other selvage edge makes a heading around the waist.

THE TREND OF SUMMER BLOUSES.

Never has there been a greater variety of styles for separate blouses than there is this season. It makes very little difference what type of waist you like best; if the sleeves have the proper look and the collar is well designed you may be able to wear it. The Russian and peplum effects, in Georgette, chiffon, crepe de China and satin are having a wonderful vogue, but so are the waists which come only to the waist and tuck themselves modestly beneath the skirt band. A very new mode of trimming waists of crepe de Chine is to have collar, cuffs and belt not of a contrasting but of the same colored linen. Organdy waists are being combined with silk and satin overblouses. A novelty in waists, and one which is most practical as well, is the blouse of fine gingham for sports. Blouses of this type are made up in stripes and checks which remind one of children's rompers and play frocks. Sometimes they are combined with white pique. I saw a pretty pink one recently which had a white pique vest with the fronts of the waist cut in scallops and stitched onto the vest.

THE VALUE OF SOUPS

Although clear soups, which are largely water, contain little nourishment, some thick soups, broths and chowders are a meal in themselves, according to dietary specialists. Even a thin soup, taken at the beginning of a meal, may stimulate digestion so that the heavier foods are more easily digested. The combination of soup and bread is pleasant and leads to the eating of more bread or crackers than would be consumed ordinarily.

One of the purposes which food serves in the body is to furnish energy for its muscular work, and one way of comparing the relative food value of different foods is to compare the Amounts of energy which they furnish or their "fuel" values. A cup of milk soup flavoured with vegetables yields a little more energy to the body than the same amount of milk. A thick meat soup, with pieces of meat and vegetables in it, a fish chowder, or a rich vegetable soup such as cream of tomato, yields half again as much energy as the milk, while a thin soup like bouillon, consomme, or clear tomato soup, yields not quite two-thirds as much as the milk, and less than half as much as the thick soup or chowder. A generous serving of thick meat soup or fish chowder yields more energy than an ordinary portion of roast beef, and even a moderate helping of vegetable milk soup usually furnishes fully as much body fuel as a moderate sized rib chop of lamb.

There are other things to be considered besides energy, in connection with the food value of soups. One is the amount of protein with out which the body can not build and maintain its tissues. Milk, and milk soups contribute some of the needed protein. Meat, poultry, fish, eggs, milk, cheese, dried peas, beans, and other legumes are the common foods in which protein is most aboundant, though it also appears in fair amounts in the cereal foods, such as bread, breakfast foods, macaroni, rice and the like.

SEASONABLE SUGGESTIONS.

Harden off all plants before setting in the open ground. This is done by reducing the amount of water given and allowing more air to the plants. It is simply a hardening of the tissues to withstand field conditions better.

Treat all potatoes before planting with corrosive sublimate or formalin to kill the scab. Formalin is easily prepared by using a pint to forty gallons of water. Leave the potatoes standing in it for two hours. Cut into sets and plant without delay.

A supply of wire netting such as is used in chicken yards, will prove useful in training peas. Space is economized and the wire may be used later for the tomato plants. This permits closer planting of both peas and tomatoes.

"SPECIAL" DUNLOP "TRACTION"

HOW THE MONGOLIA SANK A SUBMARINE

The story of how the steamship Mongolia, on April 19, fired the first shot of the war between the United States and Germany and drew the first blood of the conflict was dramatically told by Lieut. Bruce R. Ware, U.S.N., who was in command of the gun crew of the ship, at a testimonial dinner given to him and Captain Emery Rice, of the Mongolia, at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Lieut. Ware was given a great reception when he arose, boyish-looking and smiling.

"I am very happy to tell you," he said, "how I fired the first shot of the war, and the first shot that drew the blood of the enemy.

"The problem was put up to us to take a big cargo ship to England. Five and one-half days out, in longitude 25 west, the captain and myself stood constantly on the bridge, never leaving it. We rested when we could. Generally from ten o'clock at night to two o'clock in the morning.

"On April 19 the sun came up one minute before five o'clock when we were nine miles southwest of Beachy Head Light in the English Channel, on the southerly part of the English coast. We drove into a thick fog, which obscured the sun. At twenty-one minutes past five o'clock Captain Rice ordered a sounding taken, and when the quartermaster came back with the report of his soundings, we went into the chart house to determine our position.

"The chief officer at twenty-two minutes past five o'clock, looking from the chart house, shouted, 'A submarine, and he's got us!' Captain Rice shouted, '..ot by a h—— of a sight!' and, leaping to the wheel, threw the helm hard a starboard and zigzagged to leeward. Righting ourselves quickly we charged the Hun U-boat and made the d—— black snake that attacked up on our port bow submerge.

"I leaped to the chart house and shouted into my transmitter for the gun crew to man No. 3 gun and train on the starboard quarter. The answer came back from the gun crew, 'We sight her wake.' 'Contral,' I shouted, and then gave the range 1,000 yards, scale 50.

"We saw the thin smoky oil coming to the surface in slow bubbles and suddenly a periscope appeared. 'Commence firing!' I shouted. 'It's gone,' was the answer from the gun crew. 'Fire at will,' I cried and suddenly the blackened six-inch shell hurtled from the muzzle of the six-inch gun, preceded by a puff of smoke, and struck the water six inches from the periscope.

"I saw that shell plough through the water six inches from the periscope and shatter that slim object. End over end hurtled the submarine, the smoke rising to the surface while the gun crew jumped up and down shouting, 'Hurrah! we've got her!'

"Again came the cry through my transmitter. 'We sighted her again, shall we fire?' I shouted, 'No; it's all over.'"

"John, I, too, am going to scrap some old 'machinery,' install new, and make my workshop efficient."

"Yes? And what's the new equipment?"

"A gas range that has big capacity built into compact space; that has everything at the right height to work without stooping; that burns the economical real 'blue flame'; and has an oven with glass front so you don't waste heat and spoil a cake just to see how it's doing."

"A millennial dream, Margaret."

"No, indeed! Mrs. Naybor has one—a McClary's." 35

Murdered Brother Of Girl He Loved

DETROIT, May 25.—His hands trembling as though with palsy and great beads of perspiration standing out on his forehead, Harry Seon, 54 years old, sat in a chair in the office of Chief of Detective Fox and made full confession of the murder of little Eddie Barber, the pretty four-year-old boy, whose body horribly mutilated was found in a vacant house on Columbia street, in the heart of the down-town residential district last Tuesday afternoon. Seon said jealousy was the motive for the crime. He was in love with Bessie Barber, the pretty sixteen-year-old sister of little Edward, but when the girl's parents refused him permission to pay his attentions to the girl, he said he decided on murder "to get even."

All through his recital Seon spoke and acted like a man anxious to unburden his soul of a crime, and he gave in detail every particular of the crime.

The wounds on the child's body, he said, he inflicted with a pair of shears but on this point the murderer would say very little.

"It makes me feel to talk about it," was the way he explained his reticence."

CATTLE TRADE THIS WEEK WAS SLOW

Prices Lower in the Early Markets —Picked Up A Little Later.

The total cattle receipts for the week were not heavy, being over 1,100 head below the receipts for the previous week. There was not, however, any too keen a demand, and trade in the early markets dragged rather slowly, with an easing off in prices of 10 to 15 cents for the good to choice butcher class, and 25 to 30 cents for medium butcher and heavy beef steers. The week-end markets, with very light receipts of fresh cattle, which, added to held-overs from earlier markets, provided enough for all requirements, saw prices a little firmer, and about, but not quite, up to the previous week's average.

Choice baby beef steers sold up as high as $12.50, and several loads of choice well-finished heavy steers sold during the week around $12 to $12.25, but on the whole the demand for the heavy cattle was not as active as in recent weeks.

The stocker trade was a little slow during the week, but there was little change in prices, particularly for good grass cows, for which there was a steady, good demand.

Calves held steady to strong for choice veal.

Choice fat cows and butcher bulls continue in good demand, and hold steady to strong.

Canners and cutters steady at good prices.

Choice milk cows firm and good demand.

Choice light sheep and yearling lambs, steady to strong, but spring lambs are not much in demand at the present time, in conformity with the plan to kill very young lamb until about July.

Hog market was slightly weaker, through the week, the packers succeeding in getting prices down 60c from the high point of $17.50 at the beginning of the week to $17 fed and watered, in the closing markets, with prospects said to be lower for next week.

Cattle Receipts.

Union Stock Yards — Total receipts for the week, 556 cars, with 4,453 cattle, 1,126 calves, 10,220 hogs, 232 sheep and lambs and 3,490 horses.

City Cattle Market — 45 cars, with 736 cattle, 145 sheep and lambs, 626 hogs and 165 calves.

CONSCRIPTION, NOT UNDEMOCRATIC.

One objection that has been raised to conscription is that it is a German invention and should, therefore, have no place in a British democracy. The objection, even if it could be shown to be well founded, would not be fatal. Germans use rifles, machine-guns, field-guns, aeroplanes, submarines, food controllers, and various other inventions and discoveries. Does that mean that we are not to use any of these things? Germans are even suspected of using food when they can get it. Does that mean that we are no longer to eat?

But, as a matter of fact, conscription is not a German invention, nor has Germany any exclusive claim on it. Conscription might be said to be a French method, were it not that it is British. In France the service of every man capable of rendering service is regarded as belonging to the state. Nobody thinks of it as compulsion; it is simply accepted as a matter of patriotic duty. Until a comparatively recent period the British employed the compulsory militia levy for the raising of troops. As a matter of fact some of the most brilliant victories of the British navy in the past were won by men who fought under compulsion. Conscription was employed by the United States, by both North and South, during the Civil War. Compulsory service has been part of the law of Canada practically ever since Confederation.

But after all, the question is not as to the origin or nationality of conscription but as to the value of it and the need for it. And apparently there is no longer any question as to the need for it, and as to the advantages of it, in Canada.—Woodstock Sentinel Review.

CUBA'S REVOLUTION CUTS SUGAR CROP

But, Producers' Organ Says, There is No Danger of Famine Here—80 Pounds for Every One

More Than Half the Amount Needed is Now Grown on United States Soil.

The Cuban revolution has reduced the amount of sugar available for American use this year by 500,000 tons, but there is still no danger of a sugar famine, according to "Facts About Sugar," published by the Domestic Sugar Producers, Inc., a semi official organ of the sugar trade. In spite of reductions in the new crop of sugar in Cuba and elsewhere, there will be produced for the American market, it is asserted, about eighty pounds of sugar for every man, woman, and child in the United States, which is about the average annual amount.

"The public should not be misled by alarmist reports," the article says, such as have been published of late, or by a temporary scarcity which may exist in certain localities. There is no occasion for paying exorbitant prices or laying in stocks beyond immediate needs. The wholesale price of sugar in New York is eight cents a pound, and it should be obtainable from retailers at from nine to ten cents. There will be plenty of sugar to go around.

"The people of the United States ordinarily consume about 6,000,000,000 pounds—4,000,000 tons—of sugar in the course of a year. Approximately 4,500,000,000 pounds are grown from American soil, and the remainder is imported, chiefly, from Cuba. The sugar grown in the United States comes from four main sources, Louisiana, Hawaii, Porto Rico, and the sugar beet farms and factories scattered across the country from Ohio to California. Only a limited amount of cane sugar is brought from the Philippines.

"The estimated production of sugar from these sections during the present season is now placed at the following figures:

	Tons.
Louisiana and Texas	275,000
U. S. beet sugar crop	940,000
Hawaii	665,000
Porto Rico	480,000
Philippines	100,000
Total	2,300,000

"All of these crops, with the exception of Louisiana, are turning out much less than was estimated earlier in the season. Beet sugar production was 150,000 tons below early predictions, and we have just reduced our estimate of the Porto Rico crop of 50,000 tons, as a result of the strike among the workmen of the island during the last month and unfavorable weather for harvesting

"Cuba was expected to produce a bumper crop of sugar this year, the probable outturn being figured at 4,000,000 tons, but these calculations have been upset by the insurrection. Reports received from our correspondents within the past few days indicate that a vast amount of standing cane throughout the eastern half of Cuba has been burned. Sugar mills have been fired, railroad bridges have been destroyed, and many plantations which have escaped serious injury in other ways have lost their mules and other farm animals, and most of their laborers. Probably 500,000 tons or more of sugar have been sacrificed as a consequence of the insurrection. Based on latest reports, we have reduced our estimate of the Cuban crop now in the making to 3,100,000 tons, and should the disorder continue or the spring rains begin early it is likely to be less than 3,000,000 tons.

"Half a million tons of the Cuban crop have been contracted for European account, and still further purchases of Cuban sugar for consumption in England and France are being made from time to time. Even if we get only 1,500,000 tons from Cuba this would mean a cutting down of only 5 per cent. on the amount available as compared with last year, which would be unfortunate, but not a matter of serious inconvenience to the average consumer."

PERFECT HEALTH DUE TO THE BLOOD

No Girl or Woman Need Be Constantly Ailing and Unhappy

Nature intended every girl and every woman to be happy, attractive, active and healthy. Yet too many of them find their lives saddened by suffering—nearly always because their blood is to blame. All those unhappy girls and women with colorless cheeks, dull skins and sunken, lusterless eyes, are in this condition because they have not enough blood, red blood in their veins to keep them well and in the charm of health. They suffer from depressing weariness, and periodical headaches. Dark lines form under their eyes, their heart palpitates violently after the slightest exertion, and they are often attacked with fainting spells. These are only a few of the miseries of bloodlessness. Nothing can secure girls and women from the inevitable decline that follows anaemia except a generous supply of new, rich, red blood, and nothing has ever proved so successful in creating red, good blood as Dr. Williams' Pink Pills for Pale People. Thousands and thousands of girls and women owe their good health and charming complexion to the use of this medicine. Here is one example of its power to cure. Miss Dorina Bastien, St. Jerome, Que., says: "For over a year my health was gradually failing, my blood had seemed almost to have turned to water, my cheeks were pale, my lips bloodless, and the slightest exertion left me breathless. I suffered frequently from severe headaches, my appetite failed, and my friends feared I was going into consumption. I had been doctoring but did not derive any benefit, and finally I had to give up my work and return home. It was at this stage that a friend brought me a box of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and urged me to try them. By the time the box was used I thought they were helping me, and decided to continue using the pills. I took a half dozen boxes more, when my strength had completely returned, my appetite was restored, my color returned, headaches had disappeared and I was feeling better than I had been for years. I would urge every weak and ailing girl to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a fair trial."

These pills are sold by all medicine dealers or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Artificial Coloring of Sugar Prohibited by the Government

FOR many years the Canadian Public has been eating Artificially Colored Sugars. Government reports show that some refineries have used Ultramarine Blue to make their granulated sugar look better than it actually is. Others made use of Aniline and Vegetable Dyes to give a brilliant appearance to their soft or yellow sugars.

The use of dyes or coloring matter of any kind is unnecessary in refining Cane Sugar. This is emphasized in a notification sent to all refiners by the Dominion Government prohibiting the coloring of sugar, and in cases where it is found, prosecution proceedings will be entered under the Adulteration of Foods Act.

We Wish the Public to Know that we Have Never Used Coloring Matter in Lantic Pure Cane Sugar and Never Will Lantic Pure Cane Sugar was first put on the market about two years ago. Since that time over 200,000,000 lbs. have been consumed by the Canadian public, and we are now turning out 750,000 lbs. of Pure Cane Sugar each day.

The reason for this enormous business is not hard to explain. It means that the discriminating consumer has learned by actual use that Lantic Pure Cane Sugar is superior to all others.

Having erected the most modern sugar refinery in the world, costing over $4,000,000, we steadfastly adhered to our original policy of making only absolutely Pure Cane Sugars of highest quality, in which

NO BEETS ARE USED
NO ULTRAMARINE BLUE IS USED
NO ANILINE DYES ARE USED
NO VEGETABLE DYES ARE USED

During the last two years we were told that we could increase our business in certain sections of Canada, if we would color our yellow soft sugars, as the public were accustomed to the more brilliant color. We refused and are glad we did so. The recent action of the Government has since vindicated our judgment.

Look for the Red Ball Trade-mark

To be absolutely certain of getting Lantic Pure Cane Sugar, see that the Red Ball Trade-mark is on every bag or carton. It is our guaranty to you of Canada's Purest Sugar.

Your grocer has Lantic Sugar in stock or will get it for you if you insist.

SUNDAY SERMON

For Those Who Do Not Go to Church

(By Jas. Sutherland)

The Parable of the Unjust Steward. Luke 16th chapter.

All the children of men are here represented as stewards of what they have in this world. We are but stewards for what we have; the property of it is God's; we have only the use of it, according to the direction and honour of our Lord. This steward wasted his master's goods. We are all liable to the same charge. We have not made a due improvement of what God has entrusted us with in this world. Yet how few consider themselves in this light! His Lord speaks as one sorry to be disappointed in him, and under the necessity of dismissing him. The stewmust make up his accounts and begone. We can learn a lesson from this teaching that we should keep our accounts with our Master correct and do all according to his directions, because like this steward, death may come and find us not ready to make up our account. We will then be deprived of the opportunities we now have of doing good to others and of laying up treasures in heaven. Now he began to consider; What shall I do? He knows he cannot earn his bread by hard labour. It is not a natural but a moral disability, so since we have all received notice that we must shortly give up our stewardships we are concerned to consider what we shall do then.

It may remind us that we cannot get life for our souls by any labour for this world. He was ashamed to beg. This was the language of his pride, as the former of his slothfulness, but he was not ashamed to steal; so he sits down to deliberate what he can do to relieve his circumstances. He therefore determines to make friends of his lords' debtors or tenants. Now I will oblige them, that they will bid me welcome to their houses. He would make them his friends by striking off a considerable part of their debt to his lord; so he says it must be done quickly; so he makes them partners in his guilt. He called all his lord's debtors, and we have here two specimens of his dishonesty. To the first he put the question, How much owest thou? and he said an hundred measures of oil, and he said take thy bill and sit down quickly and make it fifty. Likewise to the second debtor and perhaps many others. But our sins will find us out, and his master found him out. See here what uncertain things our worldy possessions are—how true it is that riches take wings and fly away, and what treachery we often find among those in whom our trust is reposed. When this was known to the lord referred to in this parable, he commended the policy of his steward in providing for himself in this manner; he condemned the iniquity of the crime but saw the plan he had adopted of providing for himself against distress. In that respect alone does he take notice of it. Worldy men are more prudent in respect of their present interests than the people of God are respecting their eternal concern.

In the choice of their object they are indeed foolish, but in their perseverance and in their activity they are wiser than the children of the light. Though we need the prudent foresight of this steward we do not need his carnal policy, for the way of acceptance and duty is plainly marked out for us. Indeed there are many who cannot enter into heaven by obeying the law, yet are too proud to ask it as the gift of God through Jesus Christ. They are not even willing to labour for the meat which endureth unto everlasting life, and to seek the blessing by fervent prayer. The unjust steward is not proposed to us as an example in cheating or to justify his dishonesty, but to point out the management of worldy men as an example for our attention in spiritual things. Thus chap. 12:39. The coming of Christ is compared to the coming of a thief, not in respect of theft but of the sudden surprise. The context shows, it is the master who is represented as commending this self interest, and not Christ. It is in consequence of such commendation that Christ remarked as to the children of this generation being wiser than the children of light.

It would be well if the children of light would learn wisdom from the children of the world, and having chosen their object would pursue it as singly and as constantly as worldly men do their comparatively worthless interests. In that case wealth would be a privilege and prove a blessing, and though we cannot dig to purchase salvation yet we must beg, incessantly beg, at the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy and find grace to help us in our time of need.

The Lord counselled his disciples to make themselves friends of those worldly riches, which men idolize, as if they worshipped the idol Mammon. The right use of riches is evidence of men's faith and love, and when the believer shall fail, shall be removed from his stewardship by death, they whom he has thus befriended and helped, shall receive and welcome him to everlasting habitations. Not that this can merit a blessed recompense, yet it may and must be made use of in subserviency to our pursuit of that which is our happiness. Though we cannot find true satisfaction in it, we may make ourselves friends with it, not by way of purchase or merit but recommendation; so we may make God and Christ our friends, the good angels and saints our friends, and the poor our friends. It is desirable to be befriended in the account to come.

As Christ's disciples usually were, and are, poor, he assured them that if any man were faithful in a very little, and consulted his Lord's will and honor in the use of it, he would be accepted as certainly as if much had been committed to him. The same disposition of mind would have rendered him faithful in more. The true riches signify spiritual blessings; and if a man spends upon himself or hoards up what God has entrusted to him, as to outward things, what evidence can he have that he is an heir of God through Jesus Christ? He that serves God and does good with his money will serve God and do good with the more noble and valuable talents of wisdom and grace and spiritual gifts; but he that buried the one talent of this world's wealth, will never improve the five talents of spiritual riches. God withholds his grace from covetous worldly people, more than we are aware. The riches of this world are deceitful and uncertain. Let us be convinced that those that are truly rich, and very rich, who are rich in faith and rich towards God, rich in Christ, and in his promises, rich in the earnests of heaven, and therefore let us lay up our treasures in them, and expect our portions from them. If the Lord be God let us serve him earnestly and faithfully and devote all to his glory.

The debtors' bills referred to in the 6th and 7th verses, it would seem were both bonds and contracts—probably engagements—whereby those who took land obliged themselves to pay a portion of the produce. To alter the terms of such a contract would be a lasting advantage to the tenant, and entitle the steward to much gratitude. (Macknight.) The explanation of the 9th verse (by Guyse) says. Use as much foresight and diligence about the concerns of eternity as worldly men do about the things of time. Instead of employing unrighteous riches in any unrighteous way use them in acts of piety and charity, with a subservience to real and everlasting happiness, that when flesh and heart fail, and you come to die, God may receive you as faithful stewards, to eternal mansions in the heavens, the holy angels may take charge of you, to conduct you to glory and the poor members of Christ may receive you with joy in the other world whose prayers were offered for you in this.

Yours sincerely,
James Sutherland,

HEALTHY CHILDREN

It is natural for little ones to be well, and with care every baby can be kept well. The main thing towards keeping little ones well is to keep their little stomach sweet and their bowels regular. Baby's Own Tablets will do this. Thousands of mothers keep the Tablets in the house as they find them an efficient guard against illness. Concerning them Mrs. Hilaire Desmarais, St. Joseph de Sorel, Que., writes: "I believe Baby's Own Tablets are the best medicine in the world for children. My baby was terribly constipated but the Tablets promptly cured him and now he is a big healthy child." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

SAYS COAL SHOULD NOT COST OVER $7 DELIVERED IN CITY

London's Representative Has No Fear of a Shortage — Saw Many Big Stocks

Dealers People are Being Held Up, and Urges Government Action.

LONDON, May 25.—"We can get coal right now, and all we want of it, if we want to pay the price," said Frank McVean who has returned to the city after investigating the possibilities of obtaining a supply, for the city to retail through a municipal coalyard next winter. "I think we can eventually get our coal here and, if we work it right, I think we can get it at the circular price of $4.50 per ton, which if the freight rate is added would bring it up to $7.40 per ton of $2,240 pounds. This would make the cost of 2,000 pounds (the Canadian ton) about $6.70, and adding a small margin for expenses, it should sell to the people for slightly over $7.

Great Stocks of Coal.

"There is no cause for a panic whatever," added Mr. McVean, "for there is lots of coal. I found that there were hundreds of thousands of tons piled up there in the Pennsylvania coal fields, and the people tell me that it has been there for years, in case of some such eventuality as a strike. There is no danger of a shortage whatever, and the whole thing is a gigantic bluff put up by the coalmen from the Atlantic to the Pacific to scare the people and then to gouge them. There is no shortage of cars, nor of coal, but there might have been a slight shortage of locomotive power.

Calls $8 Exhorbitant.

"The best price that I obtained was $8, which would enable us to sell at $8, but this was exorbitant, and it would simply mean that the dealers here would cut their prices to $7.50, and put us out of business. The big operators control 90 per cent. of the output, and they will sell only to the dealers, and the dealers co-operate with them; so we have to buy from the independent dealers. Their prices are usually about 10 or 15 cents higher than the big operators', and owing to the panic at present, the independent men's prices are fluctuating according to the number of orders received from them, and they simply sell to the highest bidder. For instance, one man quoted me a price of $7.25 one day, and the next morning he offered it to me for $6.

Told to Start at Home.

"The biggest part of the hold-up is at our own end, and the profits here far exceed the amount they should be. The operators there told me to go to the Government here. 'Start at home,' they said, 'and get the Government to regulate the price. The mayor and the board of control and the council have got to do their share, then we have got to go to the Government, and if the Government allows this thing to go on, we are beaten. I think eventually that we will get it without going to the Government, but we certainly cannot get it from the big dealers without going to the Government.

The Circular Prices.

"The circular prices at the mines are $4.50 for chestnut, $4.45 for stove and $4.30 for pea coal, and in Scranton the dealers sell at a profit of one dollar, that is $5.50, and their difficulties of delivery are much bigger, having to haul up the mountain sides. I found that we are behind the times in our coal houses, and delivery system here, and that a ten-year-old boy using their system could deliver more coal than a dozen men here. Allowing the dealers the same profit of one dollar here, and adding on the freight rate, the dealers here should be able to sell for $7.50. When I told them about $10 coal here, they laughed and said, 'Why don't the Government set the price?'

Want the Long Haul.

There is a big injustice in the freight rates also, I inquired regarding the routing of coal by way of Erie, Ashtabula or Conneaut, and then across the lake, and I was told that they wouldn't send it that way, because all the places west of London would want it that way also. The railroads own the mines, and they want the long haul to Buffalo, for which they get two dollars. They told me that they wouldn't haul it to Buffalo and then back to Erie or Ashtabula, if desired so long as they got their two dollars.

"The miners were last fall given a raise in pay, but the feeling between the owners and the miners is very bitter. In order to make up for the raise, the owners removed the supporting posts or columns of coal, which were worth only a few dollars, from under the part of the city of Scranton where the working people reside, with the result that their homes, churches, stores and theatres have all fallen in. The gas pipes were broken, and the people nearly suffocated, a cemetery was undermined, and some of the bodies exposed. The working class of Scranton are on the verge of a revolution.

U. S. Takes Over Mine.

"One mine has been taken over already by the United States Government because the owners were not acting right, and when all the towns and cities all over the country protest, as we and a few others have done already, I think the Government will take over all the mines.

WILD BIRD TRIUMPHS.

Jack Miner Gives Some Interesting Information About His Pets.

Mr. Jack Miner tells some striking stories of his feathered wild pets at Kingsville, Ont. At his farm over thirty years ago Mr. Miner conceived the idea of providing a refuge for the wildest of birds, the Canada goose. In the interval Mr. Miner's pets have increased by the thousands, and his "preserve," now being too small, he is raising money to extend the birds' sanctuary. He says that the wild bird hunter who hunts for the market is a brutal murderer.

"Women in Sunday school tell the children about the wickedness of Pharaoh, while they wear great plumes in their hats, without giving a thought to the fact that King Pharaoh never demanded that a child should die a lingering death, or that the egret plume hunter left young birds in the nest to die after hours of starvation." The only bird in Canada Mr. Miner did not commend is the vicious English sparrow. No flies would be found around a house where swallows had their home, and the swallow was the greatest destroyer of typhoid-carrying flies, for it killed these by the millions when the flies were in flight. During the last five years Mr. Miner had fed 2,000 bushels of corn to his wild birds, and his experience had been that wild birds only looked for somebody who would give them food and protection and they would in time become as tame as domestic fowl. Referring to the migration of birds, Mr. Miner said that in 1915 he tagged six wild geese. Four tags were returned by Hudson Bay Indians and one had been returned from North Carolina. There were almost 5,000 geese in his last flock, and every bird would answer his call.

Volcano Harnessed.

Volcanic heat is now being used successfully in the development of 15,000 h.-p. near Larderello, a village in Tuscany, Italy. The first of three 3,000-kw. groups of turbo-electric engines driven by steam issuing from the earth's interior was put into service in January, 1916, the second in April and the third this past fall. The power is transmitted electrically to Florence, Leghorn, and numerous other cities and towns in Tuscany, supplying industries that had been crippled since the war by the scarcity and high price of coal.

Near Volterra, in central Tuscany, there are numerous cracks in the ground, from which powerful jets of very hot steam spout high in the air with great violence and constancy, bringing up boric acid and other substances of less importance. These jets have been utilized for many years in the production of boric acid and borax, and occasionally for warming houses in the near-by village of Larderello. Most of the steam, however, was lost.

The first use of this superheated steam for the production of motive power was made in 1903, according to the Engineering Record. Prince Ginori-Conti, president of the Societa Boracifera di Larderello, first applied a strong jet to a small rotary motor, then to a small reciprocating steam engine connected to a dynamo, which generated enough current to light part of the borax works.

Meanwhile, to get a more ample supply of steam he bored holes in the ground to the course of the steam, which is under a hard stratum of rock from 300 to 500 feet below the surface. The holes vary from 12 to 20 inches in diameter, and are lined with iron pipes. They give forth steam at a pressure of from two to three and occasionally up to five atmospheres, and temperatures varying from 150 to 190 degrees C. These jets have not diminished in their activity, and new borings do not interfere with the preceding ones provided they are at least 50 feet apart.

After the outbreak of the war coal became extremely scarce and prices prohibitive. This caused a trial installation using the volcanic energy to be undertaken. The results have been satisfactory, and it is probable that hundreds of thousands of horsepower will be so developed soon.

Sicilian Orange Boxes.

In Sicily, you frequently see neat little circular boxes, pale yellow in color, painted in "pehafdic" designs and giving off the sweet smell of oranges. They are used for pins, small jewels, or collar buttons, and are, in fact, orange skins. The process of making them is simple; there is, indeed, no reason why Canadian girls should not make them as well as the Sicilians do.

Cut a thin-skinned orange or tangerine in half from its "north pole" to its "south pole" and carefully remove the edible part. Without cracking the skin, turn each half inside out, says the Youth's Companion. Into one-half press the lower part of a small round pasteboard or wooden box; into the other press the cover. Then bind the two half skins so that they will adhere closely to the box. Trim the edges with a sharp knife and let the skins dry. When they are tough and leathery, paint the cover design in oil.

Heraldic designs, college and family coats of arms and monograms in bold colors make effective patterns. The oil that remains in the skins will continue to perfume pleasantly the little box.

At Grips With a Leopard.

A correspondent in Port Elizabeth, South Africa, of the London Express, sent an account of a thrilling battle between a British officer and a full-grown female leopard in German East Africa. An expeditionary force was on the march when the animal was sighted, and Lieut. Bouwer dropped out to try a shot. The leopard, suddenly charged the officer, and (he best he could do was jam his rifle in the open mouth of the beast. Bundles of burning grass were thrown toward the animal to distract her attention from Lieut. Bouwer, who was badly hurt, and Dr. Ivor Haslem finally sent a dum-dum bullet home, which closed the career of that leopard.

"Best in the Long Run"

HUNS FINED THOSE WHO DID NOT HAVE WATCHES ON TIME

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, May 21.—Germany's efforts to "Kulturize" the occupied districts of France and Belgium by the introduction of German "system and organization" reached such a degree that the civil population was subjected to fines of the most extortionate amounts if their watches and clocks did not agree to within a few seconds of the official time as established by the "Kommandateur."

Every new town retaken by the French armies reveals fresh facts regarding the almost incredible system employed by the Germans to "Germanize" the local inhabitants.

Officers had the right to stop any civilian on the street and demand that he show his watch. If the hands varied even to the slightest degree from the "German official time," as carried by the officer, the unfortunate civilian was heavily fined.

Officers could also enter private houses to look at clocks. If the latter did not have enough "German system and organisation" in their mechanism to register the hour as fixed by the "Kommandateur," the unfortunate house owner was subjected to a fine so severe that it amounted to confiscation of property.

While the system of fines originally was obstensibly for the purpose of bringing the civil population up to the German standard of "discipline, system and organisation," this pretext has now been completely abandoned.

Forced as the Germans now are to realise that they cannot hold indefinitely the occupied districts of France and Belgium, the fine system is now being used for the open purpose of extorting the last penny that the civil population possesses while they still have it in their power to enforce the extortion.

At Brussels alone the fines now being imposed are declared to amount to millions of francs every month.

UNBELIEVABLE CRIMES

Some idea of the nature and amount of these fines can be secured from the following cases in towns recently retaken by the French.

At Guivry two horses were in some mysterious manner injured in a stable. For this four inhabitants who knew nothing about the affair were found guilty, and forced to pay 3,000 marks. In Ugny-le-Gay a house was burned down by the Germans themselves. Nevertheless they charged that the owner had set fire to the structure. The village as a whole was held responsible and forced to pay 10,000 marks.

At the same village a civilian was heavily fined for driving a horse which the Germans declared was not sufficiently curry-combed. As a search of the man's premises failed to reveal sufficient money to pay the fine, he was given fifteen days in prison.

Failure in every instance to produce the amount of cash fined by the Germans is invariably followed either by deportation or long prison sentences.

At Channy, three prominent citizens were imprisoned. An offer was then made to release them upon the surrender of a certain amount in municipal bonds. These are three men finally secured, whereupon the Germans, deciding they wanted the amount demanded in cash instead of bonds, refused to accept the latter and confined the three men in a humid room without fire, light or bedding and a diet of a pint of coffee in the morning, and a piece of bread in the evening.

The men were kept in this condition until friends succeeded in raising in the neighboring villages the sum demanded.

Up to date five cemeteries have been found at Bray Saint Christophe, Champion, Amy, Beursignes and Crapeaumesnil, where all of the more promising looking tombs had been dynamited and the coffins stripped not only of the metal lining, but of any objects of silver that adorned them. Not in a single instance were the bodies ever placed back in the tombs, and it can only be supposed that the remains were scattered to the four winds.

Cotton stockings are much better than lisle for children's sensitive feet.

Doctors Tell Why They Prescribe Bon-Opto. Explain How It Strengthens Eyesight Remarkably In a Week's Time In Many Instances.

Has Seen Eyesight Improve from 75 to 100% in Remarkably Short Time.

Boston, Mass.—Victims of eye strain and other eye weaknesses, and those who wear glasses, will be glad to know that Doctors and Eye Specialists now agree there is real hope and help for them. Many whose eyes were failing say they have had their eyes restored and many who once wore glasses say they have thrown them away. One man says, after using Bon-Opto: "I was almost blind. Could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without my glasses, and my eyes do not hurt any more. At night they would pain dreadfully. Now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can read even fine print without glasses." Another who used it says: "I was bothered with eyestrain caused by overworked, tired eyes which induced fierce headaches. I have worn glasses for several years, both for distance and work, and without them I could not read my own name on an envelope or the typewriting on the machine before me. I can do both now, and have discarded my long distance glasses altogether. I can count the fluttering leaves on the trees across the street now, which for several years have looked like a dim green blur to me. I cannot express my joy at what it has done for me."

It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time, and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses.

Dr. Beck, an eye specialist of nearly twenty years practice, says: "Two prominent eye specialists, after a thorough examination of a young girl aged twelve, decided that to save the sight of her right eye the left must be removed. A friend advised her father to try Bon-Opto before permitting the operation. Within three days a decided improvement was noticeable, within a week the inflammation had almost disappeared, and at the end of six weeks all danger was past and the eye saved. I saw the case again to-day. The eye ball has perfect motion. When she began to use Bon-Opto it was in a fixed position. The conjunctival inflammation has disappeared. Her vision is now 20/20 (20/20 is normal as you know) as against 20/2000 when she began the use of Bon-Opto. Another patient came to me suffering from Blepharitis Marginalis with all the usual symptoms such as morning agglutination of the lids, chronic conjunctivitis and epiphora. Her eyes had the dull, suffused expression common to such cases. She used Bon-Opto and not only overcame her distressing condition but so strengthened her eyesight that she was able to dispense with her distance glasses and her headache and neuralgia left her. In this instance I should say her eyesight was improved 100 per cent."

Dr. Jedkins says: "While house surgeon at a New England Eye and Ear Infirmary and during many years in general dispensary practice, I found oculists too prone to operate and opticians too willing to prescribe glasses, and both inclined to neglect the strengthening and developing of the eyesight. The success of Bon-Opto in strengthening the eyesight will soon make eyeglasses old-fashioned. The Director of Medical Inspection of Boston Schools in a report published February 26, 1917, states that only 14,016 pupils out of 85,175 examined need to wear glasses now, a marked decrease over the previous report. Bon-Opto is hastening the eyeglassless age in bespectacled Boston."

Dr. Smith, an oculist of wide experience, says: "I have treated in private practice a number of serious opthalmic diseases with Bon-Opto and am able to report ultimate recovery in both acute and chronic cases. Mr. B. came to my office suffering with an infected eye. The condition was so serious that an operation for enucleation seemed imperative. Before resorting to the operative method I prescribed Bon-Opto and in twenty-four hours the secretion had lessened, inflammatory symptoms began to subside, and in seven days the eye was cured and retained its normal vision. Another case of extreme convergent strabismus (cross eyed) escaped the surgeon's knife by the timely use of your treatment. The tightened external muscles yielded to the soothing and anodyne effects of Bon-Opto. By cleansing the lids of secretions and acting as a tonic for the eyeball itself the vision is rendered more acute, hence the number of cases of discarded glasses."

Dr. Connor says: "My eyes were in bad condition owing to the severe strain arising from protracted microscopical research work. Bon-Opto used according to directions rendered a surprising service. I found my eyes remarkably strengthened, so much so I have put aside my glasses without discomfort. Several of my colleagues have also used it and we are agreed as to its results. In a few days, under my observation, the eyes of an astigmatic case were so improved that glasses have been discarded by the patient."

Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by the use of Bon-Opto and if you want to strengthen your eyes, go to any drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and let it dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start, and inflammation and redness will quickly disappear. If your eyes bother you even a little it is your duty to take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have saved their sight if they had cared for their eyes in time.

NOTE—A city physician to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Yes, Bon-Opto is a remarkable eye remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to almost eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. I have used it very successfully in my own practice on patients whose eyes were strained through overwork or misfit glasses. I can highly recommend it in case of weak, watery, aching, smarting, itching, burning eyes, red lids, blurred vision or for eyes inflamed from exposure to smoke, sun, dust or wind. It is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family." Bon-Opto is not a patent medicine or secret remedy. It is an ethical preparation, the formula being printed on the package. The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances, or refund the money. It is for sale by all good druggists in this city, including

Where Did She Get It?

By ALAN HINSDALE

Jim Warfield and I were chums at college, and Jim invited me to spend the holidays with him. We arrived late at night. The next morning I arose early and went downstairs.

In the library warming her hands before an open fire was a little girl about nine years of age. Her young face was the very antipodes of the familiar witch warming her hands, but there was in it an intelligence beyond the child's years.

"You're Jim's chum, aren't you?" she said.

"Yes."

"In your college are they all men?"

"They are."

"Men think they know a lot, don't they?"

"A-ha! I perceive that you are one of the votes for women party, or your mother is. Since you are too young to hit upon this reform yourself I presume you get it from mamma."

She neither affirmed nor denied this, but continued her anathemas upon men.

"Don't you think that when a woman marries it's mighty mean that she should give up her name and be tagged on to her husband?" she asked.

"If that were not done, what would be the names of the children? What's your first name?"

"Imogen."

"Well, suppose you grow up and are married. But perhaps since you don't like men you won't ever be married."

"Yes, I will. Do you think I want to be an old maid? But I won't take my husband's name, though."

"You'll be Imogen Warfield. Now, suppose you marry a man of the name of Brown. What will your daughter's name be?"

"She'll be Imogen Brown-Warfield."

"And suppose she marries Mr. Jones. What will their daughter's name be?"

"Why, it can be Imogen Brown-Jones-Warfield."

"And suppose this girl marries Mr. Smith. What will be their daughter's name?"

"Imogen Brown-Jones-Smith-Warfield. But she needn't keep them all. She can be the same as I am—Imogen Warfield."

I smiled. She had been too smart for me. Why not retain the name of Warfield instead of the names of the successive husbands?

"Is your mother president of a woman's organization for propagation of the votes for woman's cause?"

"No. Mamma doesn't take any interest in that."

"Well, I'm sorry that you have imbibed such notions."

"Why, don't you think women ought to vote?"

"No. I'm an anti. I don't like that sort of women. I'll never marry one of them."

The child's attention was attracted from me to some one who entered the room at the moment. Turning, I faced a young lady.

"Good morning, Mr. Ellis," she said, putting out her hand. "I'm Jim's sister Alice. We've heard a lot about you from Jim and have wished to see you for some time. Run away, Imogen."

Imogen went out of the room, leaving me alone with her older sister. After a few general remarks I asked:

"Has she such a prejudice? She certainly cannot have imbibed it from me. I have no such prejudice myself."

Other members of the family came into the room, and the matter of woman's aspirations was not again mentioned. We all went in to breakfast together, and my visit had begun.

If Jim had invited me down for my company he must have been disappointed. I spent most of my time with his sister, who was a very pretty and otherwise attractive girl. I saw nothing more of Imogen, but became so wrapped up in Alice that I forgot to pursue by inquiries as to whom the child had drawn her ideas from with regard to men. Her mother was a very feminine woman, and, as for Alice, she was gentle as a dove. At any rate, if she regarded men as tyrants she surely accepted me, for she accented every attention I gave her, and when I left the house the day before the opening of the new year I certainly had made myself an object of interest to the rest of the family as a possible party for the oldest daughter.

When the spring recess occurred I availed myself of it to go down and see Alice again and proposed to her. I was duly accepted and rejoiced in the prospect of possessing one of the most unobtrusive, self abnegating young women I had ever met.

I was graduated in June and went to the city. There I encountered a convention of suffragists. On the day following my arrival there was a large feminine parade. Curiosity led me to stand on a curb and view the procession. What was my surprise to see at the head of one of the divisions, mounted astride, in man's riding costume, my fiancee, Alice Warfield!

As soon as I was apprised of her return to her home I called.

"Why have you concealed from me that you are a suffragist?" I asked.

"I haven't concealed; I have merely not mentioned it. The morning after your arrival I heard you say to Imogen that you would not marry a suffragist. I determined that you should."

And she had her way. All women do, before marriage and after marriage. Why they want any more of their way, if that were possible, I can't imagine.

Above the Vulgar Gaze.

Until 1870 it was against the law and sacred custom for any subject to look at the emperor of Japan. His political advisers and attendants saw only his back. When he first left the palace the shutters of all the houses had to be drawn, and no one was permitted in the streets. Even today, when the emperor has the privilege of driving through the streets like one of his subjects, it is not considered quite proper to cast a glance at him.

Couldn't Ruin Their Eyes.

Sir Henry Holland, the noted English physician, had his studies interrupted by a youth who wanted advice. The young man, with considerable swagger, said he proposed locating in some town as an oculist. A city in which a large number of students were located was preferred. "There," he continued, "I would have unlimited opportunities of treating the eyes of overstudious scholars."

Dr. Holland was reluctant to have a community's eyes endangered because of his indorsement of a doubtful practitioner. He thought a few moments and then advised the ambitious oculist to locate in a small town near Liverpool, stating that a large school was located there.

The young man thanked the doctor. In a few days he reached the suggested field for his experiments. The large buildings in the distance indicated a magnificent school and splendid opportunities.

He investigated and collapsed. The school was one for the hopelessly blind.

Identified.

In many parts of England, and especially in the villages of the Black country, it is quite a common thing for a man to be known so exclusively by a nickname that his real name is forgotten. A gentleman had occasion once to ask a potter for the whereabouts of a certain John Williams.

"John Williams?" repeated the man thoughtfully, knitting his brows. "I have heard tell of it. John Williams—it is familiar. I say, sir," he exclaimed, as if seized by a sudden inspiration, "do he be married?"

"That's so," was the reply.

"And hez three of a family?"

"I believe so."

"Well, sir, I'm John Williams."—London Globe.

Too Highly Complimented.

"Doctor, do you have a fixed charge for your operations or do you charge what you think your patients can afford to pay?"

"Well, I wouldn't say that that is always my custom, although sometimes I do make liberal discounts to the poor."

"I thought so, Doc, and I just called to let you know that your bill flatters me more than I deserve." — Detroit Free Press.

A PROPHECY OF A CENTURY AGO.

Philadelphia Ledger (letter in):—In 1.17 Richard Rush of this city was appointed American Minister to the Court of St. James. He had several sons for whom he had engaged a tutor. One day the tutor asked one of the young lads to lend him "The Star Spangled Banner," as he wished to read it. He accordingly took it home with him, and the next day he returned it, with the following verses added to it:

Now, hushed be that strain, they our foes are no longer,
Lo! Britain the right hand of fellowship extends,
And Albion's fair land he beholds with affection,
The land of our fathers, the land of our friends.

Long, long, may ye flourish, Columbia and Britain,
In amity still may your children be found,
And the Star Spangled Banner and Red Cross together
Wave free and triumphant the whole world around.

This was written a hundred years ago. Mr. Rush, his sons and their tutor are long since dead, but the verses remain. May they not be regarded in the light of a prophecy, which please Heaven, is coming true?

Hurrah! How's This

Cincinnati authority says corns dry up and lift out with fingers.

Hospital records show that every time you cut a corn you invite lockjaw or blood poison, which is needless, says a Cincinnati authority who tells you that a quarter ounce of a drug called freezone can be obtained at little cost from the drug store but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every hard or soft corn or callus.

You simply apply a few drops of freezone on a tender, aching corn and soreness is instantly relieved. Shortly the entire corn can be lifted out, root and all, without pain.

This drug is sticky but dries at once and is claimed to just shrivel up any corn without inflaming or even irritating the surrounding tissue or skin.

If your wife wears high heels she will be glad to know of this.

Woman Home from Germany Has Proof of Starvation

LONDON.—That it is impossible for Germany to hold out much longer is the considered opinion of the wife of an Englishman who for the whole period of the war up till now, has been interned at Ruhleben, and who herself within the last two or three weeks has been permitted by the German authorities to return to the land of her birth. Her knowledge of Germany is especially thorough, as she has resided there with her husband, who was associated with a commercial house, for nearly twenty years, and her account of the conditions of the country when she left last month is so balanced and restrained as to carry full conviction of its truth.

"The people," she said, "are starving, and yet most of them think that if they hold out they will be the victors. Only defeats on the battlefield will bring it home to them that their starving is no good, and then they will turn round upon their government.

"My husband and I, after so long a stay in Germany, were on the point of returning to England in September 1914, when the war broke out in August, and then there was no chance to get away. We had to give up our pretty home and go into the interior of the country, whence he was taken to Ruhleben, where he has been ever since. For the first two years wives situated like myself were not allowed to see their husbands and it was not until June, 1916, that I met mine for the first time after his arrest. You can perhaps imagine the shock I got when I saw him again—thin and hollow cheeked, as he had lost forty-five pounds while in the camp. After that we were allowed to visit every three months for two hours, which was better than nothing at all, especially to me, as I had a brother also there and many others I knew.

MONEY IS HELD BACK.

"I held out as long as I possibly could because then I could occasionally see my husband, and besides I had money, which, as soon as I came over the frontier, I had not. No one was allowed to take out of the country more than 200 marks, which should be worth $50; but when I crossed the change came to not much more than $25. Thanks to the help of friends, I am now being financed in a small way, but I am only too thankful for this, because things are so distressingly bad in Germany that I am much afraid we should be starving if we still were there. The food riots are becoming worse and worse, and every one knows the worst times are yet to come. These will be in May and June, until some of the new crops are available; but if they eat these as soon as they come out of the ground there will be none for the coming winter. And what then?

"That is why there were many Germans I knew who envied me for being able to leave the country, where things are going from bad to worse as the weeks pass on. Now, it seems, the bread rations have been made smaller, instead of larger as was promised to the people some months ago, and it is less than three and a half pounds a head per fortnight, and very poor stuff at that, it being made chiefly of swedes. The largest amount of meat allowed per head weekly is one-half pound, including bone, and for the last seven months we in——did not see anything in the shape of pork, bacon, lard or any other fat. The fat problem, of course, is for the Germans the worst. All we saw in that way for the last seven or eight months was about three ounces of butter a head per week, and there were many towns that were allowed only half that weight and even less. You can get nothing unless you have plenty of money. Jam—dreadful stuff it is—costs 1.50 mark a pound and one can get only half a pound of that every fortnight—and the same with coffee.

"You can imagine that, with this slight amount of nourishment, the health of the people as a whole is giving way. Of course, the rich can now and then get extras, such as a small fowl or from two and a half to three pounds for them $2.50 to $3, while at Christmas geese were bought at prices up to $50 and $75, and there were folks who were glad to have them even at that price. Foreign lard can now and again be had at $2.50 a pound, but there are very few who can buy that.

NO MORE SUGAR.

"All sweet shops were closing down when I left, as there was no more sugar to make sweetmeats, and chocolate and cocoa were not to be had the last three or four months. Milk was hardly to be got any more, and, in fact, there are many towns which have not seen a drop of milk for weeks and weeks, and when I came away last month it was publicly known that in April and May there would be hardly any meat or milk to be had and the shortage would be acute. Soap is scarcely to be got, and one piece of toilet soap, costing about half a dollar, was allowed a month. Coals were very short when I left, and one could get only a hundredweight at a time and then fetch it one's self and wait two or three hours for it.

"Clothing was also giving out, and every article, from a handkerchief to a coat, was very scarce, while one could not get a new dress without giving up an old one in exchange. I have met many there who said, 'We cannot exist in this way and we must give in. Whoever says we can live on these rations has secret stocks to fall back upon.' That may be so, but I am sure the German people as a whole do not yet believe they will be starved into submission."

CORROBORATED BY A MAN

A corresponding and to a degree corroborative picture of the domestic situation in Germany is furnished by a London merchant, who, after being interned in Ruhleben from nearly the end of 1914, has just been "exchanged" because of being over military age.

Sitting at a much condemned "Ruhleben lunch" of two courses, the returned detenu remarked that he did not understand the complaint of its being a short menu, for it was as long as a Berlin one in the same conditions two and a half years ago, and would be the envy of Berlin today. Naturally he knew little at first hand of the food problem as it affected individuals in Germany during his incarceration; but he was aware at first hand of the semi-starvation of the poorer dwellers in the villages close to the great internment camp situated within a few miles of the Prussian capital.

He had been a frequent visitor to Germany on business for fifteen years and he was well acquainted as a traveller with every mile of the country between Berlin and the Dutch frontier.

"The most significant sign of impending crash I noted on my slow journey back," he said, "was that there was not a single head of live stock to be seen on the farms all that long way, not a horse, not a cow, not a pig, not a sheep. The women and the old men were tilling the ground and doing animals' work, for there was not an animal left on the land.

"At a station getting toward the frontier," he added, "I was allowed to get out of the train to stretch my legs, and I met on the platform a German lady with whom I had been acquainted in happier days. She was well to do in those times, but now she was worn to a shadow from privation and anxiety. 'I envy you being able to go away, my friend,' she exclaimed, 'but,' pointing suddenly to a flock of birds right over our heads in full flight toward Holland, 'I even more envy those birds. They can pass the frontier every day and can find a full meal. That to us is now impossible.'

"From all I could hear in Ruhleben, from all I could see on my way home and from all I know of the country for so long I give Germany until July to last out. By August, barring a miracle, it will be through."

Many people still plant in beds, but that is a poor plan unless the land is wet. Likewise hilling up is often practiced where level culture would be much better. The mounds of earth throw the water away from the plant, and expose more of the soil to evaporation.

Bribery Alleged Against Aldermen at Kitchener

Summons Issued For Appearance of 4 Councillors Over Discharge of Engineer.

KITCHENER, May 25.— Summonses have been issued by Magistrate Weir at the instance of David T. Heisey, who alleges that Ald. Bowman attempted to bribe Ald. Brubacher and that Alds. Bowman, Ritzer and Uttley collectively attempted to bribe Ald. Reid. The summonses are returnable to-day.

The charge arises out of an alleged attempt to get Ald. Reid to return from Owen Sound to vote on the question of the appointment of B. G. Michel as city engineer and the discharging of Herbert Johnson from the same position.

This new turn of affairs has created a sensation. Special counsel will be secured to handle the case on Friday, and it promises to create considerable interest, as it is the first of its kind in twenty years.

WHEAT MARKET STILL WEAKENING

Ontario Flour Is Down Another Fifty Cents

The wheat and flour markets continue to weaken under restrictions on speculative trading. Cash wheats are again 10c lower, and Ontario flour was yesterday quoted another 50c lower. Manitoba flour holds steady at the last decline to $14.50 per bbl., while cash wheat at lake ports was yesterday quoted at $2.90, a drop of ten to fifteen cents in the past few days. The option markets continue their downward course, under pressure of improving crop prospects.

FRECKLE-FACE

SUN AND WIND BRING OUT UGLY SPOTS—HOW TO REMOVE EASILY.

Here's a chance, Miss Freckle-face, to try a remedy for freckles with the guarantee of a reliable dealer that it will not cost you a penny unless it removes the freckles; while if it does give you a clear complexion the expense is but trifling.

Simply get an ounce of othine — double strength—from any druggist, and a few applications should show you how easily it is to rid yourself of the homely freckles and get a beautiful complexion. Rarely is more than one ounce needed for the worst case.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double strength othine as this is the prescription sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

When dwarf corn, like golden bantam, is grown, it is better to plant in drills than in hills, and the stalks may stand as close together as eight inches. The Golden Bantam is mentioned for the reason that it has grown in popularity, and is preferred for its flavour.

- Gregory Rasputin and His Court - In the Trail of the Enemy -

Gregory Rasputin, the Monkish Philanderer, surrounded by his court. History contains no stranger story than that of the sham-monk, Gregory Rasputin—illiterate, grossly immoral, unclean in person, of a most unpleasing exterior, and a common criminal to boot—who, by dint of some strange mesmeric gift, won the admiration of women in the highest society, cast an unholy spell over the Tsarina, and, under her high protection, was able to defy the Holy Synod, to make and unmake Ministers, and to promote German propaganda. Chief of the "dark forces" that were leading Russia to perdition, Rasputin was the immediate cause of the downfall of Tsardom. With his death the new era began. (Two photos above.)

The Prince of Wales and General Nivelle watching a march past at Beauvais.—Beauvais, an old French cathedral city, and capital of the Department of Oise, was recently the scene of a very interesting ceremony, at which General Nivelle, the French Commander-in-Chief received a British decoration from the hands of the Prince of Wales. The investiture took place in the picturesque square known as the Place de l'Hotel de Ville, where stands a monument to Jeanne Hachette, a heroine of Beauvais, who captured a banner from the troops of Charles the Bold when he attacked the city in 1472. The Prince of Wales, it may be recalled, was home on leave a few weeks ago, and attended the funeral of the Duchess of Connaught. He returned to the front on March 22. (Photo to left.)

MARY'S letter is surely a puzzler. She has so mixed up the letters in the names of things she would like Percy to give her for her birthday gift that they spell something different entirely. Sometimes she has even made two or three words out of one name, so in number nine, which is undoubtedly "Diamond Ring."

Each of the words in Mary's letter represents a present that any girl would like to receive for her birthday. You know one of them; now try to solve the remaining names, and when you do, re-write Mary's letter, substituting what you consider the correct names and send your solution to us. In this interesting contest we will award

PERCY'S PLAN WILL HELP YOU

THE first thing Percy did was to walk through the stores and make a list of all the things that would make nice presents for a girl, so that he could compare his lists with Mary's and see how many names would fit the puzzling words. He was surprised to find the number of nice things one could get for a girl, for very soon his list contained the following: Sewing set, umbrella, wrist watch, silk waist, manicure set, jewel case, kid gloves, lace handkerchiefs, napkin ring, earrings, silver thimble, diamond ring, candy, photo frame, necklace, books, bracelet, slippers, card case, travelling bag, purse, brooch, shawl, toilet set, perfume, flowers, set of furs, lace collar, etc., etc. These suggested presents may help you. Get a pencil and paper and try!

How to Send Your Answers

USE one side of the paper only in writing out Mary's letter and keep it the same in form as given above, merely substituting your solution of the puzzled names in place of the jumbled ones. In the lower left hand corner instead of the postscript put your full name (stating Mr., Miss or Mrs.) and your full address. Anything else must be written on a separate sheet of paper. Do not send fancy, drawn or typewritten answers. A contestant may send as many as three sets of answers to the puzzle but only one set may win a prize and not more than one prize will be awarded to any family. Entry to the contest is barred to all employees of this Company and their relatives.

MANY KILLED BY AIR ATTACK ON ENGLAND

The Italians Are Masters Of The Austrian Positions

Seventy-six Killed During A Great Air Raid Over England

Greatest Toll of Dead Recorded in Any Aerial Sally Reported As a Result of an Attack by German Aeroplanes and Zeppelins Last Evening. The Killed Included 27 Women and 23 Children. 174 People Were Injured. Houses and Stores Seriously Damaged. Exact Locale of the Attack Not Stated.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

LONDON, May 26.—German air raiders inflicted the greatest toll of dead in any aerial sally since the start of the war between 5:15 and 6:30 last night. Sixteen aircraft participated. Their total list of victims, as announced by Lord French, Commander of the Home Defense Forces to-day, was seventy-six killed and 174 injured. The dead include twenty-seven women and twenty-three children. Among the injured were forty-three women and nineteen children, Lord French stated. The raid occurred over the southeast coast, according to official announcement. Most of the damage was done in one town. Three of the enemy aeroplanes were brought down.

Sixteen enemy aircraft bombed the southeast coast last night, Lord French's statement says. Bombs were dropped at a number of places, but the damage was mostly in one town. Three enemy aeroplanes were downed. R. F. C. aeroplanes pursued the enemy and they were also fought by Royal Naval Forces at Dunkirk in retiring.

Some houses and shops were seriously damaged, the official statement declared.

Coincident with the announcement of these air battles, the Admiralty announced a raid by British naval aeroplanes on the enemy aerodrome at St. Denieswestrah yesterday, in which many bombs were dropped.

An Admiralty statement issued subsequent to General French's report said that the Royal Naval Air Forces met the returning raiders off Dunkirk three Germans and brought one of them down. Far aloft the two forces met and gave battle over the English Channel. One British machine fought sallied and manoeuvred and fought and two more Germans were brought down, all the German aircraft dropping into the sea. It is understood the German raiding force were composed of both aeroplanes and Zeppelins.

Assuming the casualties in this latest raid were of non-combatants, the total number of civilians killed in England since the start of the war by German air raids—Zeppelins and aeroplanes both—is raised to 805 killed and 739 wounded. The only other air raid which approached this present one in destructiveness of human life was that of March 31, 1916. Six or seven Zeppelins were part of this raiding force and their depredations extended over six eastern counties, the victims totalling 59 killed and 101 injured.

The German War Office statement says: Folkstone and Dover were the towns bombed by German airships.

ROME, May 26.—Italian troops to-day stood victors as masters of the vast and complicated system of fortifications which the Austrian forces have been constructing all winter long to bar the way to Trieste and Laibach. It is along this series of fortifications that the Italians have secured their grip and were reaching out to-day still more graspingly toward Trieste and Laibach.

Battlefront despatches to-day told of the repulse of furious counter-attacks by both wings of the Italian front. They were continuing almost with staccato-like insistance and the fighting was intense.

"A network of Austrian trenches extending eastward from the mouth of the Timavo River was captured by Italian troops following a series of hand-to-hand fights," the statement said. "We also captured heights north of Flondar and Medezza

"Enemy defenses in the labyrinths running east from Boscomalo were taken and our positions north of Tivoli extended. At Vodice the enemy launched a desperate attack in an effort to dislodge our troops from commanding positions. | The attack failed, the positions remaining firmly in our hands."

CADORNA BAGS MORE AUSTRIANS.

ROME, May 26.—Three thousand five hundred prisoners and further progress in the Carso front fighting was announced as the latest achievements of the Italian offensive in the official War Office report this afternoon. Much material was also captured.

LONDON, May 26.—A slight improvement of the British positions to the right of the river Scarpe was reported by Field Marshal Haig to-day in a statement revealing a continued general lull on the western front.

"North of Gouzeaucourt and east of Armentieres at night hostile raiders were repulsed," he said. "To the right of the Scarpe, our positions was slightly improved at night. Between Croisilles and the Scarpe hostile artillerying increased."

PARIS (French Official), May 26.—"Further progress" around Mount Cornillet and the taking of 120 Germans prisoners there, was reported in to-day's official statement. No general offensive movements were detailed. Along the Chemin Des Dames, the War Office said, there was considerable artillerying. West of Corny two German attacks were repulsed.

LONDON, May 26.—Berlin official statement to-day says along the Chemin Des Dames south of Parghyive, we carried an attack with slight losses to us and considerably improved our position. The enemy was surprised anad lost 530 prisoners, fifteen machine guns and much material. A counter attack was easily repulsed.

Large Russian Offensive Impossible at Present Time

There Is, However, No Fraternizing With Enemy Now and No Deficiency in Shells

PETROGRAD, May 26.—Gen. Nicholas V. Ruszky, who arrived here after relinquishing the command of the Russian army on the northern front, spoke hopefully of the improvement in the morale of the troops on that front. He said that there was no fraternizing with the enemy now, and no deficiency in the shell supply, but that, owing to local conditions an offensive on a large scale was impossible.

If the improvement continues and the Russian armies fulfil their duty toward their own country and their allies, Gen. Ruszky believes the Germans can be beaten by autumn and forced to accept the allies' peace terms. Gen. Ruszky places great reliance on the personal influence with the troops of Minister of War Kerensky.

EVERY EFFORT TO MAKE CONVENTION A COMPLETE SUCCESS

All Sane Opinion in Ireland Will Accept Plan Promised by Lloyd-George, but the Cranks Are Not Appeased.

FACTIONAL LUNACY

(By T. P. O'Connor, M.P., from Central News.)

LONDON, May 26.—The atmosphere in the House of Commons, though not entirely cloudless, is inclined to fair weather. The debate over Premier Lloyd George's proposal for a convention of Irishmen, of every political complexion, to settle the Home Rule question, though marred by two very unwise speeches, one of a stubbornly Orange buge by Sir John Lonsdale representing the Ulstermen and the other a wild, inconsequent and facetious speech by William O'Brien, was otherwise conciliatory and sanquine. Everybody regarded the speeches of John Redmond and John Devlin as greatly contributing to the hopefulness of the convention. Sir Edward Carson actually saved the situation from the impasse threatened by Sir John Lonsdale, by temperate and friendly utterance.

There is now little doubt that all sane opinion in Ireland will accept the convention in the spirit proposed by Premier Lloyd George, and that every effort will be made to make it a success. However, the factionists and cranks are not appeased and their policy will be one of pure wrecking. As they found no difficulty in uniting amid all their differences in an effort to destroy the Redmond constitutional movement, so they will do nothing that might bring about a settlement of the Irish question even though full liberty for Ireland was offered them on a gold salver.

This factional lunacy, which is doing its utmost to dash the great gift of freedom from Ireland's hands, is nothing short of suicidal. That Irish hands themselves seek to destroy the golden opportunity presented by the convention, is even more tragic than even any of the many tragedies which colour Irish history.

The prospect of a settlement of the Home Rule question, however—becomes brighter with each passing hour. The chief difficulty at present lies in the selection of a chairman for the convention. General Smuts of Boer War fame, would have been an ideal selection for the place for to-day he is the idol of all parties in both England and Ireland, but William O'Brien in the course of the debate, made a sneering observation concerning General Smuts, which was rather calculated to discourage the great South African from undertaking so difficult a task.

SIGNALLER DOWNEY OF PETERBOROUGH, MEETS DEATH AT THE FRONT

Left Here With the First Artillery Quota and Had Been in France for Over Two Years. Private Harry Orr of the 93rd Battalion Is Also Killed in Action. To-day's General Military News

KILLED IN ACTION.

Signaller E. J. Downey, 4th Battery, C.F.A., 158 Edinburgh street.

Pte. Harry Orr, late 93rd Battalion, Millbrook.

Pte. L. F. Rowe, Infantry, formerly of 57th Regt. Bugle Band.

WOUNDED.

Pte. F. A. Tanner, late 93rd Battalion, Apsley.

SIGNALLER E. J. DOWNEY.

The tragic news was received this morning that Signaller Earl J. Downey, a well known Peterborough member of the 4th Battery, Canadian Field Artillery, was killed in action on May 22nd. Signaller Downey was one of the first artillerymen to enlist in Peterborough, leaving here with the first draft from the 24th Battery, of which he had been an enthusiastic member for a number of years before the war. In peace time he was known as one of the best signallers in the artillery branch of the Canadian Militia, having made a splendid showing each year at the annual training camps. When the call came for men for overseas service Signaller Downey was quick to respond, and the good work he had done in the militia was continued overseas. He had been at the front with the 4th Battery since February, 1915, and although he had many close calls, escaped without a scratch. "A fine signaller and a splendid all-round artilleryman," was the tribute paid by Sergt. T. R. Cooper, secretary of the Great War Veterans' Association, who was with Signaller Downey in France. Signaller Downey's wife, who is treasurer of the Soldiers' Wives' and Mothers' Club, resides at 138 Edinburgh street. Two children also survive, as do Signaller Downey's parents, residing on Hunter street. The bereaved relatives will have the sympathy of the entire community.

PTE. HARRY ORR.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Orr, of Millbrook, have received an official message from Ottawa stating that their only son, Pte. Harry Orr, formerly of the 93rd Battalion, has been killed in action. Pte. Orr had a host of friends in Peterborough who will be grieved to learn of his death. He enlisted here with the Band of the 93rd Battalion, and is the first former member of the Band to figure in the casualty lists. Pte. Orr transferred from the Band to the Signalling Section of the 93rd, and went overseas as a signaller. He was very popular in the battalion and a favourite with all ranks.

PTE. L. F. ROWE.

Word has been received of the death in action of Pte. Leonard F. Rowe, a former Peterborough boy, and a member of the Buble Band of the 57th Regiment, Peterborough Rangers, for a number of years. Pte. Rowe was formerly employed by the Bell Telephone Co. here, and had many friends in Peterborough. He enlisted in Toronto with the 20th Battalion in the early stages of the war. His relatives live in Brockville.

PTE. F. A. TANNER.

Pte. Frank A. Tanner, a well-known Apsley boy, who enlisted here in the 93rd Battalion in the early autumn of 1915, is officially reported wounded, his name appearing in to-day's list. No particulars as to the nature of his injuries have been received.

PTE. WOODROW BACK.

Mrs. Woodrow received word to-day that her husband, Pte. W. Woodrow, late of the 93rd Battalion, has landed in Halifax. He was wounded Dec. 19, 1916, losing his right arm.

Lieut.-Col. T. J. Johnston, who recently returned from France, will, in all probability, be given command of a training Battalion for overseas if conscription goes through. It is said that the new policy of the Federal government will be to place all officers who have been overseas in charge of all departments of training in Canada. Lieut.-Col. Johnston was all through the training routine of troops destined for service in France as was Major R. P. Watt, Major K. G. Lech and Capt. J. H. Burnham, M.P. The latter has offered his services to the Government without pay. His present leave which was granted without pay, in order to enable him to attend the present session of Parliament, expires when the Session ends. Capt. Burnham has offered to serve in any capacity that the authorities may choose and without pay. The 93rd Battalion was as fine a unit and as well trained as any that went overseas, and it is altogether likely that the services of all the officers who went overseas with the Battalion will be required in case of conscription.

FOR SALE—Net for dog catching. In good condition. Never used. Apply City Hall.

PTE. F. A. TANNER, 93rd Battalion, who is reported wounded.

AN URGENT APPEAL FOR SUPPLIES FOR THE RED CROSS

Demands Upon the Stores Are Increasingly Heavy as a Result of the Hard Fighting in Which the Canadian Troops Have Been Engaged.

THE NEED IS GREAT

The Canadian Red Cross Society, in its latest "bulletins" makes the following urgent appeal for supplies:

"There is no need to tell our readers that when our armies are actively engaged with the enemy, the stores of the Red Cross are in urgent request. During the winter, there is comparatively little activity and few casualties. With the spring, all is changed. This winter, Canadian women haven't sent to the Red Cross such a large quantity of supplies as in the previous year, while owing to the present number of our Canadian troops, the demand has greatly increased. Urgent cables from England tell the story of the fear of our representatives lest supplies run short and warn us of the consequent sufferings of sick and wounded.

The "Bulletin" adds: "We have most fortunately been able to make such arrangements for the transportation of Red Cross stores as will enable us to accept shipments of all suitable supplies, but we urge workers to confine themselves to making what we ask for. We append a list of articles required, and we call upon all women to respond to this appeal for the supplies, which alleviate the sufferings of the men who have risked their life and health for us.

The following supplies are required, in unlimited quantities: Socks, flannel shirts with collars, pyjamas, dressing gowns, housewives, towels, pillow slips, sheets and bed socks. It is satisfactory to know that these are the very articles which the Peterborough Red Cross Society and its auxiliaries have concentrated in making for some time. There is also an urgent appeal for kit bags, in order that every wounded Canadian soldier may be supplied with a filled kit bag immediately upon entering a hospital. Fortunately we have at present on hand 100 of these kit bags, ready to be filled and sent away.

It is also most satisfactory to know that our local Red Cross Society anticipated this urgent appeal for supplies, and in January and February of this year, forwarded to England a splendid contribution valued at $4,500.00 for materials alone. We are glad to know that these supplies are in France now, where they are needed most.

However, in view of the fact that the need is still very great, it would seem that we should make plans for increasing our shipments, and that we should try to prevent the usual falling off in work during the summer months. We know that, when the need is brought before the auxiliaries, and the women of Peterborough, they will not fail in their response.

During March and April, the Peterborough Red Cross Society has sent material to the following societies:

St. Andrew's Patriotic League.
Berean Bible class of Knox church.
Murray street Baptist church auxiliary.
St. Paul's church Auxiliary.
St. Peter's Patriotic Society.
South End Auxiliary.
Trinity Church Auxiliary.

Many of Our Boys in the Trenches Are Without Tobacco Except the Small Government Issue—Interesting Figures That Show What Overseas Club is Doing.

$500,000 FOR TOBACCO

From the audited statement of the receipts and expenditures on account of the Overseas Club Tobacco Fund last year, which is in the hands of Mr. H. Dearle, the Honourable Secretary of the Fund in Peterborough, it appears that subscriptions from Canada reached the total of a little over $94,000, which was only exceeded outside of the United Kingdom by subscriptions from Australia and New Zealand, whose people contributed over $130,000.00.

Whilst the second place is not to be despised in so worthy an effort, it would have been particularly gratifying to see Canada at the head of the list and to realize that Peterborough had done her share towards placing her there.

Over half a million dollars was expended by the Club last year in the purchase of tobacco in its various forms of soldiers in the trenches of which the Canadian boys received their due share, as they also would participate in some of the distributions made to the Imperial forces to which they might at any time be attached.

The following table, which accompanies the statement, shows the tremendous amount of work done by the Club; and the certification of the statement by Messrs. Layton Bennett, Sons and Co., well known chartered accountants, as follows, shows that every cent subscribed goes in tobacco, the club bearing all its own expenses now, assisted by the government, who have heartily endorsed the scheme.

The following is Layton Bennett, Sons and Co.'s report:

"We have examined the above statement with the books, vouchers, and records of despatch and receipt of supplies and find the same to be correct. The expenses of administration are not being charged to the Tobacco Fund."

(Signed)
E. Layton Bennett, Sons & Co.

Following is the table showing the approximate quantities of cigarettes, tobacco, cigars, etc., despatched to His Majesty's forces through the Fund during the two years ending 31st December, 1916:

	Cigarettes	Packet Tobacco
British Exp. Force	70,560,000	1,260,000
Anzac Army	36,000,000	720,000
Canadians	33,600,000	700,000
Belgian Army	6,000,000	100,000
S. African Con.	3,360,000	60,000

	Cigars
British Exp. Force	150,000
Belgian Army	200,000

A great undertaking and a great good work.

A great many of the Peterborough boys now in the trenches are absolutely without tobacco except the small government ration, for the simple reason that the amount of money subscribed by Peterborough citizens has not been sufficient to meet all demands.

Subscriptions may be left at any bank in the city or at the Examiner or by mail to Mr. H. Dearle or Mr. H. A. Cranfield.

Twenty-five cents sends 50 cigarettes and 1-5 pound of tobacco; one dollar a month will send this each week. Arrange with your banker to debit your account a dollar a month, and have the enjoyment of knowing that you have helped some poor fellow to bear a little better the agony of some wound, or enabled him to wait with some patience for the stretcher to take him away. Make somebody glad, anyhow.

Lord French said: "Tobacco helps them to hang on."

Get a collecting book to-day and make up your mind to help. There are lots at the Examiner and at the Bank of Montreal.

HOW DO YOU FEEL?

SPELLING REFORM.

We are so much under the spell of the war; our reading, writing and talk are so much of "graves, worms and epitaphs," that it will be a little relief to consider something that doesn't savour of sanguine scenes, and deeds of dolor. Th United States are a progressive, if not a "previous," people. They had before they became gallant allies in a great cause, set themselves to Americanize the English language; and vernacularly they have made it a rag-time dialect. Its literrary authorities have tackled spelling reform—in a way more autocratic than logical. In the last number of a leading magazine, we have an example of the inconsistency of their reform. Our "Yankee" literary reformers have abolished the doubling of the final consonant in forming the past tense and present participle. Thus, "kidnapped," becomes "kidnaped." For instance in one part of the magazine we read, "He kidnaped Tobey * * * * and Allaire thought he must be planning, etc." Now, this way of forming the past tense destroys the pronunciation and changes the meaning of words. The "orthographical expedient," in authoritative and recognized use for centures, makes the letter "a," preceding a consonant long by placing an e after it. Thus cap becomes cape, mat, mate, man, mane, and so on. According to the United States spelling reformers, if the Admiralty orders a ship to be scrapped, it is not "scrapped" but "scraped"—the reformed spelling at once changes the pronunciation of the word and the meaning of the word. "He was "stripped of his honours," becomes "striped of his honours," another double destruction. And so on through a long list of words. But the arbitrary reformers are not consistent. In the above quoted sentence, "kidnaped" is followed by the word "planning," the final consonant being doubled in the orthodox way. These self-appointed arbiters of language changes are not authorized — the only authority for change is custom—of the recognized guild of literary men. Some Canadian journals, with no higher authority than their own will, get in the thin edge of the wedge, and change the spelling of perhaps one word, for instance writing "program," and leaving infinitely more clumsy spellings go "through," when the Toronto World taking the Josh Billings' almanac for a lexicon, goes the "whole hog" with "thru," "tho," "thoro," etc. These be great journals and newspapers, but neither has reached the point of power to invest them with authority to change the forms of spelling the highest literary authorities have established and so far maintain. The English language is too sacred a vehicle of human thought to be profaned by the prentice hand of penny-a-line protagonists.

The spelling reformers would no doubt have Byron roosting at midnight on the Bridge of Sighs; which would be quite correct—if the people pass the bylaw—applied to the high level bridge on Hunter Street.

HELPING THE BLIND SOLDIERS.

There is almost no end of the philanthropic literature, in the interests of the suffering and disablement that attend the courses of the dreadful war, coming to a newspaper office these days. All are deserving and all appeal to the softer side of our humanity. One of particular interest we refer to the fact and work of St. Dunstan's Hotel, in London, for blinded soldiers (including Canadian), and sailors. If one of the bodily senses is more precious and indispensible than others, it is the sense of sight, and to most of us no greater loss than the loss of sight can be dreaded.

Mr. Otto Kahn, a well known United States financier, generously placed St. Dunstan's Regent Park, a magnificent house and estate, at the disposal of the Blinded Soldiers and Sailors Care Committee. The original house has been greatly enlarged, and the last report gives the number of blind inmates at 354, and accommodation has been provided for as many more. This house and home has been called the "happiest house in London" for the blinded men have been given new lives, since the light of their old lives went out. They have lost their sight but have kept their spirit. The chief feature of this domiciled beneficence is that the newly blinded soldier or sailor is taken in hand and given the highest form of human relief almost before he fully realizes his loss.

The men are taught to read, typewrite, and some one of the trades by which sightless men may make a living. So far 224 men have passed out with new eyes—at their fingers' ends. They have learned at least one, sometimes more than one, bread winning occupation—massage, shorthand writing, telephone operating, boot repairing, mat making, basket weaving, joinery, poultry farming and market gardening. With every trade is taught the Braille printing, and each man is taught to communicate with his friends by learning typewriting, and every man on passing the writing test is presented with a machine as his personal property, and well supplied with Braille literature; and the National Institute for the Blind has arranged to lend books free for life, sent postage free to all soldiers blinded in the war. This great work is chiefly designed to help equip the blinded soldiers and sailors, to make their own way in life.

We owe the soldiers and sailors what we can never repay except in part. They have won for us salvation of liberty and civilization, but we and the world have learned something which if not better, something which makes our liberty and civilization better worthy, giving larger and tenderer hearts for the sufferings of others, and a deeper sense of the mutual obligations of human relations, and knitting nations closer together.

Even Parliamentary Hansard, the "cave of winds," degenerates, spelling "nickel," nickle.

THE FUNCTION OF GOVERNMENT.

The government of the day is the constitutional and only available official medium through which the people of Canada can express their various activities in helping win this war. The government, therefore, becomes a matter of first importance; its policy and course of action, and its personnel through which these are given effect, are matters of vital concern.

The government in relation to the people is like any other servant; it may be trusted if it has given warrant for trust, but it must be watched, for it is human and prone to err, especially if it is under any other influence than that created by interest in the national effort.

It is, therefore, not a fault, but a duty to keep the government up to the mark, and estimate its future by its past. We all know that in the past our government has not taken a lively official interest in recruiting, leaving nearly all to voluntary spirit and private patriotic enterprise.

Quebec was not only negatively but positively neglected. The government not only refused to take efficient official interest in Quebec as elsewhere in the Dominion, but it refused to permit General Lessard, the man with the largest military influence and magnetism, to devote his energies to the sister province. That this fact is not stated through prejudice, is shown by Lt.-Col. the Hon. E. P. Blondin, Postmaster-General. In an interview published in the Montreal Gazette (Conservative), on Monday, he said:

> The few meetings we have held show how erroneous was the opinion abroad that the people of Quebec are not as brave and loyal as elsewhere. The Blondin-Lessard campaign, short as it was, was enough to show that if Quebec had been well organized from the French-Canadian point of view, as the beginning of the war, and if the organization had been immediately placed under the direction of a man like General Lessard, and an appeal made to all French-Canadians to enlist in French-Canadian units, and preserve their identity, Quebec would have replied en masse.

Here we have confirmation by a member of the government, of the contention of all who take a non-partisan interest in the war, of the government's neglect of Quebec, and the consequent failure of that province to come up to the recruiting mark with other parts of the Dominion. The campaign of Mr. Blondin and General Lessard, only fairly began, was the first real attempt to put recruiting upon a practical basis of appeal in Quebec, as conscription was the first official recognition by the government of a practical interest in recruiting.

There is proof furnished that if the government had earlier taken a real official interest in recruiting we should have by this time had our full quota of 500,000 enlisted, and would not have had to resort to conscription. The simple announcement that conscription was proposed, the first real token of government interest, served to give a big impetus to recruiting all over the Dominion; an impetus that would probably have been continuous if the government had nearly three years previously shown itself to be in earnest in the matter of recruiting.

Now, the question arises, does the government's action to compel the enlistment of men, who have not before had a fair official presentation of their duty placed before them, qualify it for representing the need of Canada at the present time, for strong leadership and energetic, unbiassed action. The government has outlived the confidence it filched from the country, and has lived one year on borrowed time. The question the honest patriotic Canadian should consider is whether the government has used the extended lease of life the past year in a way to meet the needs of the hour.

In the matter of Quebec recruiting the responsibility of the Borden government for failure in recruiting antedates the indictment of one of its own members. What really killed recruiting in Quebec, bedevilled the patriotic spirit of French-Canadians, has been the government's countenance and encouragement of Nationalism, which holds that Canada has no duty to the Empire, and is not called upon to send soldiers to fight for the Empire. The Borden party before it was a government party, was present as midwife and monthly nurse, at the birth of Nationalism. It financed the Nationalist candidates at the election of 1911, and has actually held power for six years by the help of Nationalist support. Sir Robert Borden not only adopted and fostered anti-British Nationalism; he not only winked at the preaching of its damnable doctrine to the poisoning of the imperial sentiment in Quebec, but he encouraged it, officially, by keeping in his cabinet for six years three members of the Nationalist anti-British cult which is responsible for the killing of the recruiting spirit in Quebec.

In view of these things and taking all the circumstances into consideration, has the Borden government earned another lease of life, after its formal popular confidence has lapsed with time, without the people having something to say about it?

Nobody wants a general election now, but great as its distraction of popular share in the war would be, it could not be worse than a continuation of the administrative muddle of the government for the past three years. A way of avoiding an election and serving the interests of the country and the Empire at the same time, would be the formation of a coalition government, embracing the best elements—and there are many strong ones—of the present government or party, and the strongest elements of the Opposition—a win-the-war government, with no politics but the country, with no party, but the state. Win-the-war should be the politics of every Canadian solidly behind a non-partisan win-the-war government. We want statesmanship, not partisanship.

The Borden government should solidify itself in the confidence of its leading party friends before it draws at sight upon the confidence of a disappointed country.

A NEW VOLUME ABOUT THE WAR

THE publishers of The Encyclopaedia Britannica announce that they have made arrangements for the issue, as soon after the end of the war as possible, of a new volume, containing a full and authoritative history of the war.

The new volume will be written by soldiers and experts of the same high character as those who wrote for the Britannica itself, and by them of its own contributors. It will be absolutely impartial, excluding all partisan feeling and prejudice. It will contain

1. A historical account of the real causes of the war, the pressure of the colonial and the rumble all over the world which made, as necessary, to show chances for boundaries.

2. The lives of the men leaders, whether chief, officers or naval, in the belligerent countries.

3. The results of the war outside of a sphere of fighting, the progress of surgery, the introduction of new engines therein, the new scientific discoveries, etc.

The new volume will bridge the gap between the days of peace before and after the war. It will be published and issued as nearly the Britannica and the publishers guarantee that no matter how difficult and costly the supplementary volume may be from the editorial point of view, the price of it to all who purchase the Britannica during the present sale will not be more than that of a corresponding volume of the Britannica.

W. H. Harper, President.

IMPORTANT—PLEASE READ

As so few sets are left of The Encyclopaedia Britannica, "Handy Volume" issue, printed on India paper, we are obliged to state that no order can be accepted with the privilege of returning the set. Any other course would be unfair to our customers and to ourselves. It is evident that we shall receive thousands of orders in excess of the number we can fill. To take back sets from some customers after refusing, for the want of stock, the orders of others, would be manifestly unjust to those whose orders were refused. It is understood, therefore, that this order for The Encyclopaedia Britannica is not subject to our usual rule of return of goods and refund of money. We guarantee delivery in perfect condition and that The Encyclopaedia Britannica will be entirely as represented. Please bear in mind that this is the condition on which we ask you to send in your order.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

"A GREEK SLAVE" SCORED HEAVILY LAST NIGHT

Another large audience saw the third and final performance of "A Greek Slave" by the Peterborough Operatic and Dramatic Society at the Grand last night and the presentation scored even more heavily than on the preceding night. Principals and chorus alike were in fine form and handled themselves with a refreshing confidence and ease, with the result that the production was a most enjoyable treat. The applause that punctuated the performance was a sufficient indication of he enjoyment of the audience.

Mr. Devey, who on the previous night refused to allow any encores, yielded to last night's audience and the result was Mrs. Nicholls, Miss Waterman, Miss Betty Burnham, Mr. Hartshorn and Mr. Barry were all recalled.

In all respects last night's presentation was the finest of the three and the big audience enjoyed every minute of the performance. Peterborough is to be congratulated upon having a director of Mr. Devey's ability and a galaxy of talent such as has been conclusively demonstrated by the Peterborough Operatic and Dramatic Society. "A Greek Slave" undoubtedly was the biggest amateur production ever attended in Peterborough, and its great success was most gratifying. Financially, too, the production was a success and the Kitchener League, and therefore the boys in the trenches, will benefit.

Every Effort To Make Convention A Complete Success

The composition of the convention is engaging the close attention of Henry E. Duke, Chief Secretary of State for Ireland, who is one of the warmest friends of Ireland. Even Premier Lloyd George midst his many war problems, and other anxieties, gives some hours nearly every day to helping the Chief Secretary, while Sir Edward Carson is exercising his utmost influence among his own followers in trying to bring them to a reasonable state of mind.

It is certain that the convention will bring together for the first time in a century the men of Ulster and the rest of Ireland; it will bring about a saner, more tolerant and more sympathetic temper between the people who are divided perhaps even more by personal unacquaintance than by old racial or religious passions.

One satisfactory episode of the debate in the House of Commons was Ginnell's astrocious lie that the Irish party had cheered the Dublin executions, which had done duty in the Counties of Roscommon and Longford, was stuffed down his throat by the Irish members and by the solemn word of the speaker of the House of Commons, who was in the chair when the alleged incident was said to have taken place.

Bathe Internally And Keep Well!

Nature has mightily equipped us all, old and young, to resist disease—but she requires that we give her a chance.

We give her no chance if we permit the Lower Intestines to be more or less clogged with accumulated waste. Yet that is a universal condition to-day, as is proven by the number of laxative drugs that are consumed.

You can help Nature in Nature's most effectual way by Internal Bathing, and in an easy, non-habit-forming way keep the Intestines as sweet and clean as Nature demands it to be for perfect health and surer defence against contagion. Over half a million keen, bright, healthy people testify to its results.

Mrs. C. G. M. (name on request) of Strathroy, Ont., writes:

I am pleased to have this opportunity of testifying to the merits of the J. B. L. Cascade. I have been using it now for a year with satisfactory results. I am an old woman, but my health is so improved that I have a renewed lease of life. You are at liberty to give my address to anyone privately who may desire to write to me regarding the Cascade.

Just call at Warne Drug Co., Peterborough and request free booklet, "Why Man of To-day is Only 60 Per Cent. Efficient." The most efficient device for Internal Bathing, The "J. B. L. Cascade" will also be shown and explained to you if you so desire. If you prefer, write for Booklet to Dr. Chas A. Tyrrell 163 College street, Toronto.

Yes, Builds You Up in 5 to 10 Days

Iron For the Blood and Phosphorus For the Nerves

Weak, anaemic, run-down, nervous persons will be glad to know that they can be restored back to their youth vigor by the discovery of this new drug called Bonised Phosphorus with Iron.

It is spring time now and every person needs something to build them up. Now you know as well as any doctor will tell you, the curse of spring time is impure blood. It takes many people to their grave, ruins health, makes you weak, runs you down and finally you are a physical wreck.

This new drug is a combination of iron and phosphorus. The iron acts directly on the blood while the phosphorus soothes and strengthens the nerves. You start today and take two or three tablets of Bonised Phosphorus with Iron after meals and in 5 to 10 days you will be 100 per cent. stronger.

This drug does not act like other iron tonics you have taken, but instead, it does not blacken the teeth, upset the stomach or make you constipated. This new drug is dispensed by one druggist in each city. F. C. Weber dispenses it for Peterborough.

PRISONERS SELL IRON CROSSES FOR SMOKES AND EATS

The following extracts are from letters received by Mr. A. MacNab, of the G. T. R., from his son Pte. Alan MacNab, who enlisted in the second month of the war with the Cyclists' Corps:

France, April 29, 1917

Dear Folks: Your welcome letter of March 31st arrived last p.m., and as this was the first Canadian mail in three weeks you can imagine how very welcome it was.

Parcel No. 5 came in a few days ago with everything tip-top, and all the eats went west in short order. There are four of us in a tent and we have a makeshift stove manufactured from an old petrol tin, bits of wire, and a length of pipe from—well, never mind where from. Well, it was a cold wet night when that parcel arrived, so when we fished out the can of cocoa and milk we decided to have a sort of an afternoon tea party before turning in. Believe me it was "Jake," with cocoa, homemade marmalade, toast, and with cigars to finish up on. Yum! yum!

Yes, Dad, things are pretty lively down our way these days, as you said, but don't let that worry any of you. I am guarding and searching Frises, at present. We get all kinds of souvenirs from them, for a cigar, a bit of tobacco, or some eats. These prisoners do not even value their Iron Crosses but will sell them for a couple of francs or something to eat. I have sent out one parcel of souvenirs and another one is almost ready.

France, April 30.

I had to cut short yesterday to go on guard. In the meantime parcel No. 6 arrived and it is a dandy! especially as regards the two suits of light underwear. We are having it very hot over here and cannot always manage to get light underwear. The sox were just the right size and weight.....

Well, I think we are sure of being home for Christmas this year. According to the prisoners the war will finish in from two to four months, while some say that it is the German Socialists and not the Allies who will finish it—guess it will be a bit of both. All of the prisoners or at least 99 out of 100 of them are tickled to death at being in our hands. I am enclosing some pictures of "Square Heads" whom we have captured, and whom have given me these for souvenirs. Notice how many iron crosses there are among them....I have quite a few more that I will send later....This is some of Frits's writing material I am using. "Made in Germany." We are living on him these days. I will now cease fire, hoping that this will find you all well.

ALAN.

In a post card dated previous to this he says: Am quite well but very busy, as you have no doubt figured out from the papers....am on a new job herding Fritzes....can you imagine little me trotting about with anywhere from 10 to 50 ferocious Huns in tow....received nine Examiners the other day.—Alan.

Murray Street Baptist Choir

To Give Concert Tuesday Evening Next, May 29th

Next Tuesday night, May the 29th, music lovers of Peterborough will be offered one of the finest programmes attempted here this season. The Murray street Baptist church choir of forty fine voices will give their first concert, under direction of Mr. Asa Huycke.

The choir has been rehearsing for weeks back and will be assisted by Mrs. L. J. Pettitt, elocutionist, Mrs. Pettitt is widely and favourably known as a teacher of elocution; Miss Ida Sanderson, pianist and accompanist. The newly organized Olympic Male Quartette. This organization has not been heard in the city before, and if you enjoy good male quartette work do not fail to hear them. Mr. Otto Gliddon, the well known clarionettist. Miss Littlefield's class of 18 young ladies of the Y.W.C.A. will give an example of their art.

The choral numbers include Gounod's Babylon's Wave, the mighty chorus from the Redemption, Unfold Ye Portals. The dainty old English Madrigal, You Stole My Love; a fine medley of old songs. Also a tuneful setting of the fine old hymn, There is a Land of Pure Delight, of Mr. Huycke's own composition. Mr. Huycke is already well known in composition.

Altogether this is a remarkably interesting programme.

George Street Methodist Church

The services to be held to-morrow in George Street Methodist Church are of a very interesting character. In the morning the Rev. R. G. Peever will take for his subject—"A Model Congregation in Worship, or the Challenge of the Few to the Pulpit." At the evening service, Mr. Peever will take for his subject—"The Empire, Canada and Conscription."

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS

Sooth and Heal Inflamed Kidneys

The great danger with Kidney trouble is that so many people try to cure the symptoms instead of getting at the root of the trouble. In backache, pains in the side, lumbago, swollen joints and ankles, and rheumatism, local applications are of little use—such as plasters, embrocations and liniments. Gin Pills go right to the Kidneys, healing and soothing these organs so that the functions are restored to normal and the pain stops.

So many thousands have been relieved of Kidney and Bladder trouble that you cannot afford to neglect the remedy for your trouble. All dealers sell Gin Pills, 50c. a box, or 6 boxes for $2.50. Sample free if you write to National Drug & Chemical Co. of Canada, Limited, Toronto

You need Gin Pills if you suffer from or Gravel, in case of Suppression or Incontinence of Urine, Brick Dust Deposit or other bladder trouble.

Outbreak of Typhoid Fever Caused By Impure Milk

140 Cases in Neighbouring Town

Only a few days ago, the newspapers gave the particulars of a serious outbreak of Typhoid Fever in a Northern Town, not a hundred miles from Peterboro, in which it was stated that 140 cases and 2 deaths had occured in two weeks.

Investigation was made by the Ontario Board of Health, and the epidemic proved to have been caused by Milk supplied from a Farm where several people had Typhoid Fever.

QUESTION:—

What is the Lesson for Peterboro

ANSWER:—

That all are Protected from MILK IMPURITIES who use

The Statement of Dr. J.W.T. McCullough of the Provincial Board of Health on the Outbreak in Orillia is herewith annexed:—

Pasteurized Milk Endorsed

Dr. McCULLOUGH Says:—

"At the beginning of the present year the board sent up to all municipalities that had not a milk by-law a copy of a model by-law, and suggesting that these be established, and further suggested the pasteurization of milk. If this had been done in Orillia, there would have been no typhoid fever there from a cause such as milk, as pasteurization destroys the germs.

"Now the board has ordered the Council of that place to establish pasteurization without delay, and other municipalities will do well to follow in this line."

Pure Pasteurized Milk From The Peterborough Creamery

All Sediment and Dangerous Impurities are Removed. You are protected against contamination from infected cows, as well as from all other dangers liable to arise from Raw, Unpasteurized and Unclarified Milk.

Forty-one Peterboro Boys Are Now in Hunland and All Are Getting Parcels Regularly from the Local Branch — Letters of Acknowledgment Received

The following from the Peterborough Red Cross Prisoners' of War Department will be of great interest:

The care of the Peterborough men who are prisoners of war has always been a matter of grave concern to the local society, which is unanimous in its desire that so far as lies in its power, those who have fought for us and who are now prisoners in an unfriendly and far-off land, shall not want for anything that will help to make their exile more bearable than it would otherwise be.

Every month the treasurer forwards the sum of five hundred dollars to Mrs. Rivers Bulkeley in London, England, to pay for the parcels of food and bread sent to our own boys. In every parcel sent is a card intimating that the parcel is from the Peterborough Red Cross Society, so in addition to the required food the cheering assurance is carried to the receiver that his home city remembers him in his enforced exile from friends and home.

DO THE BOYS GET THE PARCELS?

Yes they do, acknowledgements are reaching us constantly. Around Christmas time there was considerable delay and many non-arrivals. We sympathized most warmly and to the fullest extent with the anxiety of friends, but it is only fair and just to the Society to say that the dislocation and delay was not its fault. It can only send the parcels regularly, the rest of the transaction is controlled by the Germans.

In December the Germans closed all railways for three weeks, and no parcels were delivered to prisoners, but the reason for this and for non-delivery in other weeks is not known. However, the boys are now getting them again, and the temporary disarrangement seems over. The Society will continue to guarantee their regular and systematic despatch by British mail boats and not by uncertain neutral shipping ,and trust that the Germans will continue to deliver them.

Acknowledgements have been received recently from:—Pte. E. Orford, Gunner LeBar, C. Fraser Davison, Corp. J. L. Davis, Corp. A. Dickson, Pte. Arnold Parrington, Pte. Alex. Benzie, Pte. A. Pritchard, Pte. F. Pearce, Pte. B. Davidson, Pte. H. S. Rodgers, Pte. E. Stanley, Pte. A. David, Pte. T. Casey, Pte. E. Martin, Pte. H. Godfrey, Pte. Geo. Hutchison, Pte. E. Crofts, Pte. A. Bartley, Pte. C. M. Drummond, Pte. J. G. Graham, Pte. H. Devins, Pte. H. Evans, Pte. H. Lawrence.

C. M. Drummond sends his acknowledgement on a card in which he is photographed along with thirty-three other prisoners. His friends will be glad to know he is looking well and fit. All the boys say the parcels arrive in good condition.

Pte. A. Benzie sends warm thanks for the parcels which arrive in good condition. He wishes us to thank the Peterborough Soldiers' Wives' and Mothers' Club for a Christmas parcel sent by them.

He complains of the transitory delay then being experienced, but now happily overcome.

CHANGE OF CAMP.

We have been notified by the Canadian Red Cross' Prisoners' of War Department that Lieut. Chas. V. Fessenden and Lieut. Massey Cooke, have been moved to Crefeld, West Germany, and Lieut. H. G. Rodgers to Clansthal, Hanover, Germany.

NUMBER OF PARCELS.

The boys are now receiving three parcels every two weeks, six a month, this being the maximum allowance permitted under the new regulations. In addition to the parcels of food thirteen pounds of bread is sent every two weeks to each prisoner.

COST OF PARCELS.

Parcels and bread now cost twelve dollars per prisoner each month.

CLOTHING.

Directly on receipt of information that a man is taken prisoner, a parcel of clothing and other needful things is despatched to him. The prisoners are sent clothing when required, and warmer underclothing, sweater coats, top coats, etc., are sent before cold weather sets in.

NUMBER OF PRISONERS.

There are forty-one Peterborough boys prisoners.

ASSIGNED PAY.

Formerly some of the prisoners assigned 10/ or 12/ shillings monthly to the Canadian Red Cross in part payment of their parcels, but this arrangement has been cancelled, and nothing is taken from the prisoners. This department of the Society's work now depends entirely and altogether on the voluntary giving of the people of Canada to enable them to carry on this absolutely needful branch of its work. This they feel they can continue to do with confidence, feeling certain that the necessary money will be forthcoming.

SUBSCRIBERS TO PRISONERS' FUND.

We have some faithful subscribers who contribute month by month to this branch of our work, but we would gladly welcome others, every little helps, and though we are glad to send out $500 to pay for our own boys, it is a large amount out of our monthly income. Supplies of all kinds are needed more badly than ever, the casualty lists are proof of that, and so we would be glad of more gifts to our Prisoners' Fund, to relieve our monthly income in order to enable us to purchase bigger supplies. Will those who can respond do so, your money could not be donated to a worthier cause.

SERGEANT EDWARDS' VISIT.

Sergeant Edwards is one of the few remaining members of the Princess Pat's Battalion. He was taken prisoner, and failed in his first attempt to escape, but succeeded the second time. We are endeavouring to secure Sergeant Edwards for an evening to tell us of his eighteen months' experience as a prisoner in a German camp. We hope soon to be able to announce the date. Sergeant Edwards will answer any questions as to Red Cross parcels, camp conditions, treatment, etc.

A Letter From Gunner Burke

Mr. P. Burke, 263 Townsend street, has received the following letter from his son, Gunner F. P. Burke, 2nd Canadian Division, C.F.A., Trench Mortar Battery, now in France. The letter, which is dated May 1st, reads as follows:

"Dear parents,—Just a line to let you know I am in the land of the brave and in good health. I received a letter from home yesterday and was glad to hear from you all. Last winter I said I would be home for next Christmas and I do believe I will, for old Fritz is getting pretty well cornered up. News is scarce outside of war news, so I think I will close."

Your son,
Gunner E. P. Burke.

CUSTOM-MADE
SEMI-READY SUITS
TO SPECIAL ORDER

Feature of the Service in All the Semi-ready Stores in Canada — Tailoring Clothes To Order.

Unfriendly folk often tell a prospective customer of Semi-ready tailoring that Special Orders are only a species of ready-mades, and that they are cut and made en bloc with stock garments.

The prompt five-day delivery system would give coloring to the falsehood, because a fast schedule in tailoring clothes is beyond the ken of the average clothier.

Semi-ready Special Order Suits are custom-made to the last silk stitch. When the measurements are received at the shops the cloth is cut from the exact physique type patterns, and the suit is finished to the precise size and style ordered. It would be manifestly impossible to keep a stock of ready-cut garments on hand to fill Special Orders for individual suits. Every garment in the Semi-ready Shops, whether for stock or for Special Order, is cut to individual size with scissors—not the knife.

Over 225 patterns of British-woven cloth are available for selection — worsted, Botany tweeds, black and blue serges, cheviots, homespuns, vicunas—for business suits, dress suits, and liveries. Over 35 model designs to choose from in the Semi-ready fashion portfolio.

A custom-made Semi-ready suit is finished to Special Order in five days —at from $18 to $45, according to the cost of the cloth chosen. The price label is always put in the pocket, and must correspond with the price ticket printed on the cloth sample, as shown by Frank L. Jenne in his Semi-Ready store on George street.

We are not trying to scare you. We are simply telling you the truth. If you would ward off impending baldness you must check that hair loss and rid your scalp of dandruff.

Start right and start now with the right remedy and stick to it—Newbro's Herpicide.

Use Herpicide daily for a while, then three times a week will be sufficient. Watch the change which takes place in the condition of your hair and scalp.

The scalp is clean and free from dandruff. The hair looks strong and healthy and does not fall out. There is vigor and snap where before the hair was dead, dull and brittle. The itching which is so annoying stops and you enjoy a feeling of coolness and cleanliness hitherto unknown.

Any dealer will sell you Newbro's Herpicide either in 50 cent or $1.00 size. It is guaranteed by The Herpicide Co. The first application will convince you that Newbro's Herpicide is the very thing for the hair. Its odor is delightful.

Applications may be obtained at the better barber shops and hair dressing parlors.

Was Troubled With Shortness of Breath

When the heart becomes affected, there ensues a feeling of a choking sensation, a shortness of breath, palpitation, throbbing, irregular beating, smothering sensation, dizziness, and a weak, sinking, all-gone feeling of oppression and anxiety.

The nerves become unstrung, you dread to be alone, have a horror of society, start at the least noise and are generally fatigued.

On the first sign of the heart becoming weakened or the nerves unstrung, Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills should be taken. They are just what you require at this time. They regulate and stimulate the heart, and strengthen and restore the whole nerve system.

Mrs. C. M. Cormier, Buctouche, N.B., writes: "Since two years ago I was troubled with a shortness of breath, and sometimes I could hardly breathe. I went to see several doctors, and they said it was from my heart and nerves, but they did not seem to do me any good. One day I got one of your B.B.B. Almanacs and read of a case similar to mine.

"I bought a box of Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, and after taking it I noticed such a change that I kept on taking them until I had used four more boxes, when I was cured."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c a box, three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

Description of A Missing Girl

Chief Thompson has received an enquiry from Toronto regarding the whereabouts of a girl who has been missing from home about a week, and who purchased a railway ticket for Peterborough. She is described as follows: About twenty years old, dark brown auburn hair, brown eyes, listless and apparently despondent. She was dressed in a greenish khaki spring coat, loose back, brownish velvet collar, navy blue dress, dark sailor straw hat, some gold in the ribbon. It is likely that she may have applied for work as a domestic. Chief Thompson will welcome any information respecting this girl. Her parents are anxious for her safety.

TO-DAY'S MARKETS

The market prices this morning varied little from those of last week. Eggs, however, were a little higher.

Eggs—40c. to 42c. per dozen.
Butter—42c. to 44c. a lb.
Chicken—20c. per lb.; 80c. to $1.20 each.
Turkeys—25c. per lb.; $3.50 each.
Potatoes—$4.25 to $5.00 per bag.

FARMERS CONTINUE TO ASK $5 FOR POTATOES

Meanwhile Tariff Remains On the New Potatoes from Southern States.

Farmers showed no hesitation this morning in asking $5.00 a bag for potatoes. The supply was fairly large and some of the stock seemed scabby and generally inferior. Citizens should remember that they can purchase potatoes, if they must have them, at less than $5.00 in town. If the Government would remove the duty on United States potatoes the new crop should have an immediate effect on the local prices. But the consumer is usually considered last, and probably should be thankful for that modicum of consideration. The full force of the crop in the southlands has not yet been felt, and when it is exerted within the next few weeks it will be broken on the tariff barrier instead of coming freely across the line.

How To Prevent Acid Stomachs And Food Fermentation

By a Stomach Specialist.

As a specialist who has spent many years in the study and treatment of stomach troubles, I have been forced to the conclusion that most people who complain of stomach trouble possess stomachs that are absolutely healthy and normal. The real trouble, that which causes all the pain and difficulty, is acid in the stomach, usually due to, or aggravated by, food fermentation. Acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach and food fermentation causes wind which distends the stomach abnormally, causing that full bloated feeling. Thus both acid and fermentation interfere with and retard the process of digestion. The stomach is usually healthy and normal, but irritated almost past endurance by these foreign elements—acid and wind. In all such cases—and they comprise over 90 per cent. of all stomach difficulties—the first and only step necessary is to neutralize the acid and stop the fermentation by taking in a little warm or cold water immediately after eating, from one to two teaspoonfuls of bisurated magnesia, which is doubtless the best and only really effective antacid and food corrective known. The acid will be neutralized and the fermentation stopped almost instantly, and your stomach will at once proceed to digest the food in a healthy, normal manner. Be sure to ask your druggist for the bisurated magnesia as I have found other forms utterly lacking in its peculiarly valu-

SEVEN HIGHLANDERS LIKELY TO BE CALLED IN THE FIRST DRAFT

CLEVELAND, O., May 25.—Before they leave this week the entire New York American League team, with the exception of "Home Run" Baker who is over the age limit, will have registered with the City Clerk for service in the United States army or navy. Captain Huston, one of the owners of the club, who has already joined the Engineering Corps, with which body he served during the Spanish-American war, expects to lose seven of his men before the season closes.

The single men on the team who would probably be called to the colours are Nunamaker, Alexander, Shocker, Monroe, Pipp, Baumann, and Gilhooley. The other members of the team, seventeen in all, are married.

The Highlanders would suffer their greatest loss through the drafting of Alexander and Nunamaker, their star catchers, and First Baseman Pipp, whose place would probably be taken by Magee.

He admitted being a deserter from the 44th Battalion.

"ANTIS" ARE WORKING HARD

Montreal Opposition To Conscription is Attempting To Influence Politicians

Special to The Examiner:

MONTREAL, Que., May 26. —Among anti-conscriptionists here calmness has to a large extent replaced bitterness and their activities are being extended largely to-day towards influencing the politicians of both parties to put their feet down on any government move in that direction. There was another determined attempt last night to smash up the office of La Patrie, but the police were on the alert and the police dispersed the crowds after two windows had been broken. The police statement issued this morning warned the citizens that no more rioting would be tolerated. It is understood martial law will be applied immediately. There are indications of a reoccurrence of these demonstrations.

COALITION GOVERNMENT

Liberals in Favour of Conscription May Be Taken Into the Cabinet

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, May 26.—The probability of a strong partially coalition government to carry out selective draft proposals seems to loom up stronger through the political maze at the week end. It is thought in some circles this is the meaning of "reconstruction of government" rumour, which originated in government circles. In independent circles to-day it is considered almost certain that Hon. W. A. Crothers and Hon. Frank Cochrane may leave the Cabinet.

Hon. Robt. Rogers at present shows every intention of fighting the Galt findings which this morning created a ripple in political circles. These will shortly be up before the Commons in the shape of an Opposition resolution.

In some quarters it is intimated that strong Liberal "compulsory service" men like E. Pardee and Hugh Guthrie of Ontario, Dr. Michael Clark of Alberta, and Colonel McLean, of Nova Scotia, might be taken into the cabinet if a "conscription coalition" was formed.

Could Not Lift Stick of Wood

WORLD ALMOST FAINT FROM SEVERE PAIN IN THE BACK —DOCTORS COULD NOT GET THE KIDNEYS SET RIGHT.

Benton, N. B., May —. — A great many people suffer the results of deranged kidneys and do not understand the cause of trouble or the way to obtain cure. The writer of this letter suffered excruciating pains in the back and in vain his physician tried to cure him. For some reason or other his medicines did not have the desired effect.

Mr. Olts' brother was a merchant selling among other medicines, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, and he heard his customers telling about how they were cured of kidney derangements by their use. This led to Mr. Olts putting them to the test with the splendid results reported in this letter.

Mr. E. C. Olts, Benton, Carleton County, N. B., writes: "I am glad to let you know how much your medicine has done for me. I suffered from my kidneys which at one time were so bad I could not lift a stick of wood without getting on my knees, and then would almost faint from the pain in my back. I consulted a doctor about it, and he gave me some medicine but it did not help me. My brother who is a merchant, and carries all your medicines, advised me to try Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. I got one box and they helped me so that I got another and kept on until I had taken five boxes, which cured me. I have had no trouble with my back since and am never without Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills in the house. Last summer I also suffered from piles. I used three boxes of your Ointment and it cured them. I can certainly recommend Dr. Chase's Pills and Ointment."

Firemen Had Midnight Call

The wind-up of the 24th celebrations were, presumably, the cause of a some what serious fire at midnight at the shed and ice-house belonging to Mr. Bishor, 186 London street. The fire had a fair start on the north side of the shed before the Fire Department were called; however the men succeeded in saving the south half. About two hundred dollars damage was done, including the destruction of the contents of the building.

The firemen were called out again at 7 o'clock to a chimney fire at 265 Sherbrooke street. No damage was done.

Studebaker
Established 1852

Reasons for Studebaker Supremacy In Canada

Studebaker is the foremost Made-in-Canada automobile because Studebaker cars stand up and give the service on Canadian roads.

The Series 18 Studebakers are even better than the Series 17. They are maintaining the leadership the Series 17 established throughout the Dominion.

They embody ninety distinct improvements in mechanical construction, convenience and comfort over the Series 17.

They offer all the improvements, all the refinements suggested by four years' close study of the performance of 300,000 Studebaker cars in every part of the world.

In them the many economies made possible by vast resources, the savings obtained through the development of steadily improved manufacturing methods and the installation of the latest and best labor saving machinery are turned to your advantage.

That is why Studebaker cars are most economical to buy. They are economical to operate because Studebaker quality reduces "up-keep" to its lowest possible terms. And they are economical to drive because of great gasoline economy in ratio to power, because of great tire economy in ratio to weight and carrying capacity.

Let us give you a Studebaker demonstration today.

Y. M. C. A. Budget This Year $9500

General Canvass for Subscriptions Will Be Conducted Between June 5th and 8th — Association Has Been Doing A Great Work in Peterboro

May 28th to June 8th has been set apart by the Board of Directors of the Y. M. C. A. as a period during which the budget of the expenses of the Y. M. C. A. will be covered by subscriptions. A special meeting of the Board of Directors will be held Monday evening, May 28th, with supper at 6.30 p.m. On Tuesday evening, May 29th, the Board will meet at a supper conference at 6.30 p.m. with leading business men of the city, at which time the financial needs of the Association will be thoroughly considered. During the coming week the leading contributors will be interviewed with an idea of getting a concensus of opinion as to the possibilities of providing for an existing deficit as well as the current expenses of the Association to December 31st, next. The final line-up of canvassers will be held at a supper on the evening of June 4th, and the general canvass for subscriptions will be conducted between June 5th and 8th.

The average budget of the local Association previous to 1914 was $7-900. During the past three years the average budget has been $8,400. The increased cost of fuel and the probability that alterations will have to be made to the heating plant to accommodate a change in the kind of fuel used, together with the increased cost of supplies, has made it necessary for the directors to fix $9,000 as the minimum budget for 1917.

Repairs have been made to the building at intervals during the last ten years, but at no time have they made provision for two very important items, namely: the painting of the exterior of the building and the provision for fire fighting apparatus. The directors very much desire that these last two items be cared for this year, and if this is done another five hundred dollars should be added to the budget, making a maximum budget of $9,500. The Directors of the Association are leading business men of the city and are most careful in their management of the Association's affairs, so the supporters of the Association should understand that the expenses of the Association are conducted in the most economical manner. The directors wish to assure the friends of the Association that this is not an extraordinary budget for an Association in a city the size of Peterborough, in view of the work that is done by this organization. It is interesting to compare the work and budgets of eleven Associations of the Dominion with which the Peterborough Association is classed. These eleven cities have an average population of 35,000 and the average Y.M.C.A. budget in these cities is $14,300, as compared with a budget of $8,300 of the Peterborough Association taken from the same year in which the average of the other eleven cities was computed.

Regarding the young men in Association membership, it is also interesting to note that the average membership in these eleven cities is 742, which would mean a membership of about 386 in a city of 20,000. Peterborough's present Y.M.C.A. membership is 675. The results obtained from other lines of work in Peterborough are far above the average. This is true of the physical work which the local Y.M.C.A. demonstrated by standing second in Canada in the annual Y.M.C.A. Hexathlon events. The local Y. M. C. A. was ninth on the Continent in this Hexathlon contest, 108 boys competing against more than 9,000 boys from 80 cities of America. Fifty boys secured certificates for Bible study examinations this past year, which is also a most remarkable result.

Aside from all other receipts and not including an outstanding deficit the Association will want $5,000 to cover the current expenses to December 31st.

The Association is not self-supporting and cannot be made so fully without placing the membership fee collected from the young men who are benefitted by the Association at such a large figure as to exclude those who need the influence of the work most. At the present time the membership fees cover about one-third of the expenses. The revenues from dormitories, etc., together with the memberships, cover about fifty per cent. of the expenses. Indeed, in normal times it is thought that the revenues from these sources can be made to cover 75 per cent. of the expenses of the work. During the past two years the membership receipts have been very much below normal, in view of the fact that it has been the policy of the local Association to grant free privileges to all enlisted men. Therefore, the Association to grant free privileges to to over 1,800 soldiers who have enlisted in Peterborough, including the 286 members of the Association at the front, from whom membership fees have been waived.

The Association has a war deficit of $5,000 that it would like to include with the budget for the year. The Conference of business men to be held on Tuesday evening will determine the advisability of trying to raise $10,000 for the Association this year to cover the regular budget and the war deficit mentioned. The expression "war deficit" is used advisedly by the Association was cleared of debt by a special canvass in 1912. The present deficit dates from 1914, as the canvass for subscriptions scheduled for the Fall of that year was made impossible due to the opening of the war, necessitating the Association carrying forward $3,500 of its budget uncovered. Nearly two thousand dollars has been added to this amount during the past two years by the shrinkages of membership due to the free privileges granted soldiers as heretofore mentioned, together with the increase of expenses. Friends of the Association will understand that it would have been a very unwise move on the part of the local Association to curtail its helpful programme of work during the years of the war, when opportunities for service were greater than ever before; so we trust that they will give their hearty support to the Association as it seeks to cover its needs during the next two weeks.

Two Ways To Acquire An Estate

1—By saving, stinting, sacrificing; fighting the world at every turn, battling the blows of business competition; running the risk of fire, theft, embezzlement and misfortune; skimping your family and yourself, may be, and standing only one chance in twenty of reaching Old Age without being dependent upon others for support.

2—By securing a Life Insurance Policy—A Policy which guarantees to pay your Beneficiary at your death, either a definite lump sum or an income every month as long as she lives—an income that is fixed, certain, regular, inalienable, unassailable, untaxable, and which cannot be lost, sold, dissipated, squandered, or mortgaged.

Which is the EASIER and MORE SENSIBLE Way to Acquire an Estate?

Two Ways To Bequeath An Estate

1—By Testamentary Document: Requires an Executor. Must go through legal red tape of Court. Requires Court costs. May require months or years to settle. This kind of Will can be broken or set aside. Property is subject to attachment for debts of the Deceased.

2—By Life Insurance (when the Beneficiary is named): Requires no executor or administrator — you are your own executor, your own administrator. No need of Court proceedings—no expense of Court costs. Does not require time to settle. This is a Will direct which no lawyer can break nor Court set aside. Policy is not subject to attachment for debts of the Deceased.

Which is the SAFER and BETTER Way to Bequeath an Estate?

MILITARY NEWS

Mrs. S. Jolliffe, 6 Grand Central Apartments, has received the following letter from her son, Pte. Roy Jolliffe:

South Camp,
Losford, May 9th, 1917.

My Dear Mother and Dad,—Just a few hurried lines to let you know I am quite well and relieved by receiving both your letters to-day.

Many thanks, dear mother and dad, for the money and box which I received O.K. Went to Brighton on the glorious (7th of May), and had a splendid time. Your letters could not have arrived at a better time for we (eleven 59th men) are with the Brigade signal officers, leaving for overseas and we are carrying little or no kit, so I cannot tell you what we are going to do. It maybe we'll get another "snap" like we had here. However, dear Mother and Dad, do not let this letter worry you, for I am feeling better than I ever did, and am the happiest boy here, for at last, as I thank God, I have the chance to show what I am made of, also I miss dear Hal, an awful lot, so this is a great chance to get with him. I was to take a week-end to Carisbrooke on last Saturday, but this little affair put the "can" on it, however. I wrote dear Granny a long letter, explaining everything and gave her my address. It is, as far as I know to the present: Pte. Jolliffe, 455490, 2nd Battalion Canadians, France. Gee, ma, we are having lovely weather here now, and in Hal's last letter he said it hadn't rained for a month, and he is quite all right, and he also is asking me when I am coming over.

We are leaving for Folkestone at 2.30 a.m. to-morrow morning, so should arrive Boulogne about, well, sometime Friday.

Dear Mother and Dad, again I implore you not to worry, for I will write as often as I get a chance and give you all the news I can.

Well, Dear Mother and Dad, I must finish here as I must clean up and snatch a little sleep before they wake us for our midnight supper. Give my best love to aunty and uncle, also dear Neta and Doris. Remember me to Mr. Webb, Mr. Rambo and the church.

Believe me, Mother and Dad, ever,
Your loving son,
ROY.

TOWER OF LONDON TO HOUSE TROPHIES

SUBMARINES MAY BE KEPT IN MOAT.

LONDON.—The Tower of London is favoured as a place destined to become England's greatest war museum because a moat surrounds it in which could be displayed the German submarines captured in the war. The Crystal Palace and other less famous places that have been offered as sites for the museum possess no such feature.

In housing the relics of the present war in the ancient Tower of London there is no thought of displacing the historical exhibits it now contains. The collection will illustrate the operations of the navy all over the world and of the army on all the fronts. The Admiralty, the War Office and the Ministry of Munitions will deposit in the museum a large mass of official exhibits.

OPENING OF CANAL PRACTICALLY ASSURED IN PRESENT SUMMER

Mayor Duffus and Ald. Dobbin have returned from Ottawa, where they received the strongest assurance that the southern section of the Trent Canal would be opened this year, if possible. Mayor Duffus stated that Premier Borden, himself, was impressed by the claim for the opening of the waterway from Peterborough to Lake Ontario, and it is altogether likely that the final link will be welded in the near future.

Comparisons of weather records made for more than a quarter of a century indicate that the atmosphere of London is becoming less foggy.

Ex-Czar Joins Back to the Land Movement

Special to The Examiner.

PETROGRAD, May 26.— Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Romanoff, with Miss Romanoff and Master Romanoff, have joined the "back to the soil" movement. They are planting and hoeing potatoes in the park at Tsarkoe Selo Palace, where the same group, when they were known as the Royal family, used to deal out life and death to all the Russians.

The spectacle of the seven members of the erstwhile royalty garbed in peasant's clothes and doing peasant's work was enjoyed by a big audience to-day. Soldiers and civilians alike lined the fence to the estate peering through the steel bars and watching every movement of the shovels and trowels that the former Czar, Czarina, Czarvitch and the four Grand Duchesses made.

IN MEMORIAM.

In loving memory of Samuel McKinley, beloved husband of Elisabeth McKinlay, who departed this life Friday, May 26th, 1916, at 310 Margaret avenue:

Day by day we saw him fade
And gently sink away,
Yet in our hearts we prayed
That he might longer stay.

Affliction sore he with patience bore,
Physicians were in vain;
Till God above in his great love,
Released him from his pain.

The cup is bitter, the sting severe,
To part from him we love so dear;
The trial is hard, we'll not complain,
But hope in Christ to meet again.

DESTROYERS SENT TO EUROPE THREATENED AS RESULT OF WORK OF KAISER'S AGENTS AT CAPITAL

Mines Strewn About the Harbour at Queenstown by U-Boats —"Leak" Revealed by Rear-Admiral Sims — Berlin Knew the Flotilla Was On Its Way Four Days Before It Arrived.

INFORMATION IS POSITIVE

WASHINGTON, D. C., May 28. — Four days before the American destroyer flotilla arrived abroad Berlin knew it was on the way and to what port it was going and the day before the vessels steamed into Queenstown Prussian submarines had strewn mines about the harbour entrance.

That startling information, revealing that Prussian spies not only still are at their work in this country, but that they have a swift and sure means of communicating America's war secrets to Berlin came to the Navy Department in a cablegram from Rear Admiral William S. Sims at London.

The Rear Admiral said his information was positive. His despatch was not made public and for obvious reasons nothing will be given out concerning how the news came into his possession nor about the precautions which defeated the Prussian scheme and enabled the flotilla to speed safely through the mine field.

Immediate publicity was given the salient fact, however, the department making clear that its purpose was to let the people know of the activity and success of Teutonic spies, and to emphasize the necessity for absolute secrecy in connection with naval operations or shipping movements.

The destroyers now aiding in the quest for submarines in European waters under the direction of Rear Admiral Sims put into port at Queenstown on May 16. How long they were in crossing the Atlantic or from what port they left never has been announced, and until word of their arrival came by cable only a few persons in the United States knew of the government's decision to send war ships to Europe.

No official would comment on the possible means by which the news was conveyed to Germany. If it did not go from a secret wireless plant, it must have been carried in some code despatch that the allied cable censors passed as innocent.

The result will be the redoubling of the vigilance both of the censors and of every agency of the government engaged in rooting out the spy system. Every German known to have been connected with the espionage work of his government already is under arrest or under surveillance. Other arrests may follow at any time and now that the country is at war and the revelation of its secrets may mean death to its soldiers and seamen, swift punishment undoubtedly will be dealt out to any convicted spy.

Men now in custody operated when the United States was a neutral. Spying now is a very different thing and is likely to lead to the gallows instead of to comfortable detention quarters.

In announcing Rear Admiral Sims' despatch the Navy Department through the Committee on Public Information said:

"The department calls attention to this fact as proof that the German spy system is still at work in this country, making imperative the need of secrecy in connection with our naval operations. The premature publication of ship movements is particularly a source of danger."

Saturday Wheat Prices Rallied

CHICAGO, May 28. — Week-end evening up of trades lifted the wheat market Saturday, after an early decline. The rally was looked on as natural, in view of the recent breaks in prices. Set-backs at the start were attributed to bearish estimates of the total yield in the U.S. this season, one authority putting the total as high as 750,000,000 bushels. Opening prices, which ranged from ½c to 2c lower, with July at $2.17 and September at $1.66, were followed by an upturn all around to well above Friday's finish.

Canadian wheat prices showed very little change.

BORDEN CABINET PLANS FOR A RECONSTRUCTION

All Ministers May Resign To Enable New Vigor To Be Infused Into The Administration — Opinions Expressed by the Toronto Mail and Empire and the Ottawa Journal-Press

TORONTO, May 28.—The Mail and Empire to-day says that the Borden Cabinet plans for "Reconstruction." All ministers may resign to enable new vigour to be infused.

Ottawa, May 28.—The Ottawa Journal Press says: The suggestion that there should be a reorganization and the inclusion of some of the Liberal members or men of outstanding ability not in politics, appears to have been received with favour, not only amongst the most influential private members of both parties but by certain members of the Cabinet itself.

The idea underlying the movement is voiced as follows: The War must be won at all hazards, and nothing should be done politically to distract the attention of the Cabinet from war concerns. Therefore there must be no election. Since the war began a number of Liberals have supported the Government in its efforts to prosecute the war successfully, just as loyally as any Conservative member. Their support has shorn the situation of much of the political controversy that was ever present in pre-war times, and the result has been that the government has taken on a national aspect, rather than political. Accordingly the inclusion of some Liberals who have thus assisted the Government would not change the political situation but would give added strength to the Government in its duty of defeating the enemy.

Four Willing to Resign.

At least three or four members of the Government are understood to be willing to patriotically efface themselves in order to make way for English-speaking members of the opposition, if by so doing there would be a greater prospect of having Parliament present a more united front in what is conceded to be a serious crisis. Sir Robert Borden, whose political stature has marvellously increased since his return from the Mother Country, is said to be considering a reorganization of some kind, if for no other purpose than to recognise the large body of Liberals throughout the country who are undoubtedly behind him in his policy of compulsory service, and who have been loyal in everything pertaining to the war.

If by any chance Sir Wilfrid should decide at the last moment to place the interests of Canada and the Allies before a section of Quebec, and support conscription there will still be a likelihood of a shuffle in the Cabinet. Sir Robert Borden possibly going outside Parliament to reinforce his Cabinet with the best administrative brains available in the country.

ANGLICAN'S VIEWS AS TO WHAT CHURCH UNION MEANS

I presume that all concerned in endeavouring to find out what is good and true, whether in politics or religion, will speak and act upon the principle expressed by the maxim: Audi alteram partem. I therefore crave your permission to state briefly and concisely what is called the "High Church" position in regard to the doctrines and forms of worship of the Anglican church.

Hooker, the great apologist of the Anglican church at the time of the Elizabethan reformation declared that there can be no end to controversy without the submission of all sides to one definite standard. That standard is surely the Holy Scriptures as interpreted and applied by the Anglican church in the Book of Common Prayer and 39 articles, to which the clergy at the ordination, have given their most unfeigned consent and assent.

Let us turn then to Holy Scripture and consider briefly, but thoughtfully and honestly what Jesus Christ Himself, God manifest in the flesh, said concerning this church and His children. Immediately before His ascension, He commissioned, not all of His 120 disciples to be His ministers, but chose 12 men out of their number. His 12 apostles He ordained by an outward and visible form of words with the laying on of His hands. He laid His hands on them, saying: "Receive ye the Holy Ghost; whosoever sins ye remit they are remitted, and whosoever sins ye retain they are retained."

In this commission, no distinction is made in regard to Peter. Next our Lord commissioned His 12 apostles to go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature, and not only to preach, but to baptize: "Go teach all nations, baptizing them. In these words He founded a visible church. When He promised salvation, not to those who should believe only, but "Whosoever believeth and is baptized shall be saved." This authority given by our Lord to the apistles was extended to their successors: "Lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world," which has not come about even yet. The authenticity of the four gospels of the history of the Apostolic church, recorded in the Acts and Epistles, are no more certain that the apostolic succession of the one visible universal church, which we call the one Catholic and Apostolic church. We read in the most authentic history that the original manuscripts of the New Testament perished at an early date. No stronger statement can be made castiny any doubt upon the apostolic ministry and the origin and certainty of the visible church throughout the world. The "churches" mentioned in the New Testament cannot be regarded as independent church, like modern denominations differing from one another by certain doctrines and forms of worship. A l of the disciples in each of the churches of Asia are all spoken of as subordinate congregations of Christians, subject to the direct authority of the apostles or of some pastor ordained and appointed by them. Thus St. Paul consecrated Timothy to have the oversight and authority over all the congregations of Christians at Epheasa, to set in order the things that are wanting and ordained, i.e., ministers in every city, this authority being imparted by the laying on of the apostle's hands with the solemn words: "Neglect not the gift that was given thee by the laying on of the hands of the presbytery."

We read in history the statement, as certain and authentic as any historical record, that the Gospel was first preached in Britain at the time of the Roman conquest under Julius Caesar, and that all the converts formed but one church, called the Church of England, of which Augustine was consecrated the first Archbishop in the reign of King John. A law was passed called the Magna Charta, restricting, but not abolishing, the authority of the Pope, or otherwise interfering with the existing state of things in the church. In the preface to the present Prayer Book occur these words: "These many years past the service "in this Church of England has been said in Latin," thus identifying the present Reformed Established Church with the old Church of England when it was subject to the Pope. At the time of the Reformation under Queen Elizabeth by two English bishops, consecrated according to the Roman ritual, before they had renounced the Papal supremacy and who favoured not destruction but reformation. Dr. Parker, chosen Archbishop of Canterbury, was duly consecrated Bishop according to the reformed ritual, and from his time the apostolic succession of bishops has been faithfully kept up.

From this Reformed Church of England all the modern dissenting sects have separated. At this time certain foreign preachers came over to England, wh oare spoken of in the history of that period as the: "Puritan sect working within the church." Some of these uere most unwisely allowed to occupy positions of power and influence in the church and did their utmost to set the people against the church thus reformed. The Presbyterians, the followers of John Calvin and John Knox, were to all intents and purposes, the bitter enemies of the Anglican church as represented by the Prayer Book. Take for example the conduct of the Presbyterian mob when the English Liturgy was read in St. Giles' church, Edinburgh, a woman hurled a stool at the Bishop, shrieking. "A Pape, a Pape Anti-Christ, stone him." And again, when the Marquise of Montrose was engaged in battle on behalf of the lawful King of England and Scotland, Charles II., and taken prisoner; he was fastened to a chair in a common cart dragged through the streets of Edinburgh, hung on a gallows 30 feet high, his head cut off and nailed to the gallows, and his body cut in four quarters and nailed to the entrance of the four chief quarters of Edinburgh. When the Puritans came into power under Oliver Cromwell, King Charles and Archbishop Laud were beheaded, Puritan preachers intruded into all the parishes and the Liturgy forbidden to be used under pain of fine and imprisonment. Upon the restoration of Charles 2nd, many of the Puritan preachers, hypocritically submitted to episcopal ordination and were left in possession of their parishes and became what is now called the Low Church party, which in these modern days, after the rise of the Higher Criticisms in the Universities, has developed into the broad church faction, those hurrying down the broad road that leadeth to destruction, and are little better, if any, than infidels and freethinkers.

The Oxford or Tractarian movement was not a movement towards Rome, but towards a loyal conformity to the existing Anglican Liturgy. Pusey and Keble, who both remained faithful to the Anglican church till their death, were subjected to a bitter persecution. Many of the loyal and faithful clergy who took part in this movement were mobbed on the streets. Riots took place in church when the surplice was worn in the pulpit when choral service was introduced at St. George's in the east of London. One circumstances was told me by one of the choir, that as they left the church for the parsonage, they were beset by representatives of the Puritan sect lurking within the church, while the door of the parsonage was kept partially open to admit one by one of the choir. My informant told me when he got in and the door was shut he was found to be covered with spittle.

I do not desire to trespass on your columns to any unnecessary length, so in conclusion I would draw attention to the exact position of the clergy in reference to the Prayer Book. At their ordination they give their positive consent and assent to each of the 39 articles and assent to and promise to preach the doctrines of the Liturgy and conduct divine service according to its rules, which pledge is renewed by each on his appointment to a benefice. Yet, notwithstanding, a large number of rectors systematically deviate therefrom in these particulars.

1. Daily morning and evening prayer.
2. Observance of the appointed fasts and festivals.
3. Neglect to recite or sing the Athenasian Creed on the appointed days.
4. Omit to say or sing the Litany on Sundays, Wednesdays and Fridays.
5. Omit public baptism and catechism after the 2nd lesson at Evensong.
6. Deny the doctrine of baptismal regeneration as taught in the Catechism and baptismal services, that is the baptism of infants and believing adults. The water is the means whereby is received a death unto sin and new birth into righteousness.
7. Deny what the Catechism states, that "the body and blood of Christ is verily and indeed taken and received by the faithful in the Lord's Supper."
8. Deny that in the worthy reception of the Holy Communion we spiritually eat the flesh of Christ and drink His blood, as stated in the communion service.
9. Deny that in ordination, the candidate receives the Holy Ghost by the imposition of the Bishop's hand for the office and work of a priest in the Church of God.
10. Repudiate Act 34, headed "Of excommunicate persons, how they are to be avoided," and that persons excommunicated according to the Anglican Canons, are to be avoided. Surely it should be the end and aim of every pastor, in accordance with his ordination vows and the plain teaching of Holy Scripture, to raise the people over whom, in the words of Scripture, "the Holy Ghost hath made Him the overseer to the church, the Church of the Living God, the Pillar and Ground of the Truth," and not drag the church down to the people, as when a faithful and earnest priest ministering in the highways and byways of the country or in the back slums of the city raises those among whom he ministers to Christ, their Saviour, in all the fullness of Gospel truth "to sit together in heavenly places in Christ, in the church which is His body, the fullness of Him that filleth all in all."

Founded in Christ and by Apostles formed, glory of England, oh, my Mother church(firm to thy Master, with the fond grasp of faith, and yet mound thee and within thee scowls a fierce array of foes and falsehoods, and each fastened or base or treacherous o'er they fallen towers to lift triumphantly. And well may thoughtful hearts heave with forebodings and heavy tears to mark how mad democracy and treachery doth infect they children, how thine apostolic claims and love maternal are regarded now by cruedless vanity or careless vice. But never may madness of heart self blinded, nor the autocratic pride of reason by no hallowing faith subdued, one lock of glory from thy reverend head succeed in plucking, and love and awe and truth her doctrines preach with apostolic force. Her creed is unity, her head is Christ, her forms scriptural and her creed divine and Catholic, that crowning name she wears, by man rejected, but by God approved, for God is Catholic in law and love, that man in both would mere sectarians prove and down the depth of individual self would Christ and creed and Calvary absorb.

WOMEN'S AILMENTS

Come From Heart and Nerves

Young girls budding into womanhood, who suffer from pains and headaches, and whose face is pale and blood watery, will find Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills build them up.

Women, between the ages of 40 and 50, who are nervous, subject to hot flushes, feeling of pins and needles, smothering feeling, shortness of the breath, palpitation of the heart, etc., are tided over this trying time of their lives by the use of this remedy.

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have a wonderful effect on a woman's system, making pains and aches vanish, bringing color to the pale cheek, and sparkle to the eye.

The old, worn out, tired out, languid feelings give place to strength and vitality, and life again seems like living.

Mrs. Alfred Winter, Castor, Alta., writes: "I should like every woman who is suffering from nerves or heart trouble to know how much Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills have helped me. For two years I kept a hired girl and was doctoring all the time. After having taken four boxes of your pills I am able to do all my own work. I would especially recommend them to women between 40 and 50, as at that time they are more liable to be far from well. One of my neighbors knows how they helped me, and she is now using them."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c., or three boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct on receipt of price by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

RACING MEN'S SUGGESTION END SPORT THIS YEAR.

If Permitted to Continue Throughout This Season Will Shut Down For Balance of War Time.

OTTAWA, May 25.— A delegation from the Canadian Breeders' Association, the big body behind the race tracks of the country, had an interview this afternoon with Sir Robert Borden and Hon. C. J. Doherty. The government has promised to shut down on race track betting. The racing men claim that betting is essential to the race's existence.

The deleration to-day suggested that they be premitted to run the tracks this year and shut down then for the balance of war time. They claimed that certain arrangements had been made both for autumn and spring meetings and that shutting down peremptorily will be a hardship. They did not get a definite answer, but the proposal may be acted on.

TO CHECK A COLD.

It is easy to check a cold if you begin in time. Frequent doses of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine keep the cough loose, allay the inflammation, and so prevent it from spreading to the bronchial tubes and lungs. Mrs. G. M. Moore, Shortread, B.C., writes: "I wish to state my gratitude for Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, for it cured a cold which a friend said would soon put me in the grave."

BEAT "EVERLASTING CASE."

Wyler vs. Lewis Made Record for Length and Expense.

An action which, from the point of view of length, the amount of fees paid, and the mass of documents, established a record for the Chancery Division, and beat the famous King's Bench "Everlasting Case" of Wyler vs. Lewis, came to an end before Mr. Justice Parker, in London, Eng., on December 30th, 1912, after a trial lasting forty-two days and a week spent in fruitless efforts to arrive at a settlement. The dispute concerned a £1,000,000 contract undertaken by Messrs. John Aird & Co., for the construction of a wet dock at Singapore for the Tanjong Pagar Dock Board. Messrs. Aird claimed £500,000 damages for alleged misrepresentation regarding the nature of the strata through which the trenches had to be built in order to build the walls of the dock.

The opening statement of Mr. Upjohn, K.C., occupied a week, and he called twenty-four witnesses, many of whom had been brought over from the Malay State.

When the case began it was estimated that the "paper" on each side weighed half a ton, and it was considerably increased during the trial, there being 1,921 pages of evidence, representing 28,471 questions and answers, and 900 pages of speeches.

In addition to the consultation rooms, the court was packed with maps, plans, briefs, and piles of correspondence, and even the clock had to be removed to another position to make room for a huge map of the proposed dock. Mr. Upjohn, K.C., and Mr. McCassey, K.C., led for the plaintiffs, and Sir Robert Finlay, K.C., Mr. George Cave, K.C., and Mr. Mark Romer, K.C., for the defendants; while there was a "galaxy" of juniors, including Sir Hugh Fort, an ex-M.L.C., of the Straits Settlements. It was understood that Mr. Upjohn had 2,000 guineas and Sir Robert Finlay 3,000 guineas marked on their briefs, and that each received a "refresher" of £100 a day, the total fees running into five figures. The cost of the trial alone is said to have worked out at about £7 a minute.

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

SUSAN or KEZIAH?

By LAWRENCE PERRY

Judge Tunis Crane put the last shutter over the front window of his store, slung the bar across and snapped the padlock. Then he turned and gazed thoughtfully along the turnpike to where a single light glimmered through a grove of cherry trees. The judge always became sentimental at this hour of the evening. As a matter of fact he was in love and, what is more, admitted it to himself. This takes rare courage sometimes, but it takes even rarer courage under certain conditions to admit it to any one else. That was what bothered Judge Crane.

The judge was not much over fifty years old. His store, the one town store, yielded good profits. He was a bachelor, not a widower; was well preserved, a former judge in the town court and always a deacon. Oh, no; he was not ashamed of his personal assets. The trouble was that he was not quite sure with whom he was in love. There were two of them—two maiden sisters, Susan Appleby and Keziah Appleby. Both of them appealed to Judge Crane in one way or another, and for ten years he had been trying to decide which one appealed to him the more. But thus far his efforts had yielded him little satisfaction.

He paced thoughtfully up and down the porch, with his hands locked under his coattails. He closed his eyes, and the picture of Keziah drifted slowly across his mind. It was in church that he loved her most. He could see her now in her pew just in front of his. Her shoulders did not come very far above the high back seat, and a few curls straggled from under the black bonnet. One eye was hazel, the other a watery blue, and her hands were folded demurely in her lap. She wore a black waist cut down a little at the throat and edged with lavender silk and lace, and she had a humorous little simper at the corners of her mouth. On Sundays the simper was allowed to fade, but the telltale lines remained.

There was no nonsense about Susan—tall, straight, angular, her bonnet perked up straight on her head like a grenadier, blue eyes and a straight, tight shut mouth. She could say things, and she got up church sociables and missionary societies. Judge Crane sighed.

A few minutes later he unclasped his hands and transferred them gleefully to the armholes of his vest. He had come to a decision. He would consult a third party. But whom? There were two he had in mind, Zebulon, the brother, and Matilda, the eldest sister, a widow. All in all, he thought Zebulon would be the better of the two. Yes, he would go to his old friend and confess all. He would secure information as to the qualities of both from the standpoint of one who had spent his life with them, and he would also make inquiry as to which one would most likely award his suit with a favorable answer.

"Hello, judge!" It was Zebulon himself who stumped up the steps and sat down at the top with a grunt. "Nice evenin'."

"Hello, Zeb—um—yes, a tol'able evenin'. How air ye?" And the judge seated himself beside the prospective adjuster of his destiny.

"About as well as a man kin be with a passel of women folks about him all the time," grumbled Zebulon, filling his pipe.

"What's the matter of 'em?" queried the judge, apparently unconcerned.

"Matter?" snorted Zebulon. "Matter? Why, everything's the matter. Ef it ain't one thing it's another—sewin' societies, housecleanin', visitin', church prayer meetin', entertainin' the parson an' talk, talk, talk, nothin' but talkin' from sunrise to supper. Bah! Women is well enough in their places, but three on 'em is too derned much. Two on 'em old maids too! Why don't Providence send some one to marry 'em? It ain't right, it's ag'in natur', for one man to be pestered so."

"Um—waal, that is kind o' bad, Zeb. I'm sorry they've riled ye, because I was jest a-goin' to ask yer honest opinion which one to pick out. I'm a-goin' to git married if I kin." And Judge Crane blew his nose vigorously.

"Arrump! Huh!" Zebulon sat up. The judge sat with his jaws tight shut and his eyes stared fixedly into the road. Zebulon snorted again and regained his self control. Had heaven smiled on him at last? Had he said too much? He knew whom he wished married. Keziah would do, but Susan was the one to whose wedding he would dance all the way. He recalled her masterly ways, her trenchant tongue. Was it to be stilled for him by the bonds of matrimony? He turned to the judge.

"Waal," he said, drawing his handkerchief across his eyes, "I kin talk an' growl, but when the pinch comes, jedge, I don't see how I kin live without 'em. Keziah is good, jedge, but Susan, she is the one for ye. I know. She wants to git married. She said herself 'twould soften her, although Lord knows she don't need it. She's good an' kind an' lovin', an' she's got a good strong mind—a good strong mind. Yas, sir; I recommend Susan," concluded Zebulon.

"Well," said the judge, "ye ought to know, Zeb. Wants to get married, does she? Waal, she would 'a' been long ago had I not been afeared to ask her. I'm scared yet, Zeb, to tell the truth. What I want is the ice broken, eh?"

Zebulon was too overjoyed to stop at anything which might strengthen the judge in his quest. He actually offered to take the judge to his sister-in-law's the case and then leave the two alone. For reply the judge rose decidedly to his feet. "Come," he said.

So they trudged along the road together, Zebulon quietly radiant, the judge stern and determined.

Ten minutes later they entered the Appleby house. A raucous, twangy voice came from the parlor.

"She's in there," whispered Zebulon, and he pushed open the door and entered with his hand reaching back holding the skirt of the judge's coat.

Both were there—Keziah and Susan.

"How d'e do, jedge?" they exclaimed, rising. But the judge made reply by pushing Zebulon forward.

"Susan," said Zebulon, flushing guiltily. He knew Susan could see right through him. "Susan," he repeated, "ah—ahem. The jedge here—well—ah"—

"Well, ah what?" exclaimed Susan, with sharp impatient inflection.

"The jedge," repeated Zebulon weakly, "waal, I brung him here—O Lor'!" and Zebulon dashed for the door. He stopped at the sill and, pointing at the judge, added, "The jedge, Sue, there he is!" Then he disappeared.

The judge was frozen into a dignified statue. He could see now that it was Susan, but he dared not. Suddenly he thought of Matilda. Ah, she would break the ice for him. Matilda! His face flushed.

"Ladies," he said in sepulchral tones, "will ye kindly inform yer widowed sister Matilda that I desire to see her? Alone," he added.

The sisters swept out of the room, confident that Zebulon and the judge had suddenly gone crazy. Then Matilda entered. She proffered her hand in welcome, and the judge seized it as a drowning man grasps at a straw. He held on. Here at least was something tangible.

And then—well, Susan was not half so tangible. Matilda!

Ten minutes later Zebulon peeked into the parlor. The judge was very close to Matilda, and she was holding her hands. Everything was very still.

"Well, I'll be derned!" said Zebulon.

WOMAN SO WEAK COULD NOT SLEEP

Made Well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

North Oxford, Mass.—"I had lost three children and I was all run down and so weak I could not sleep at night. My eyesight would leave me and everything I ate upset my stomach. I was very nervous and if I would start to sweep I would have to stop and lie down before I could finish. I was looking over the paper one day and read of a woman who felt as I did and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, so I took it too. Now I am proud to tell you I am feeling fine and have given birth to a boy baby. He is my 'Pinkham' baby. I keep a bottle of Compound in my house always."—Mrs. PETER MARCO, Box 54, North Oxford, Mass.

Sleeplessness, indigestion, weakness, and nervousness are symptoms which indicate a lowered vitality of the female organism, and the tonic, strengthening properties of the good old fashioned roots and herbs, contained in Lydia E. Brindle an Extinct Color.

"Time was when no farm was complete unless there was a brindle steer in the lot and no home was what it should be unless you could find a brindle dog in the yard," said a man from the country. "At the time when I was growing up the boy who didn't have a brindle dog to chase rabbits and hunt coons with was simply not in the race with the other fellows of the countryside, and the man who didn't have a brindle steer among his lot—well, he wasn't in it either. Brindle steers and brindle dogs were a part and parcel of the countryman's outfit. Now we rarely find these creatures at the country home. What has become of the brindle steer and the brindle dog? Steam and electricity may have crowded the steer out of the business to some extent, but there are still steers abroad in the land, and they are toiling as of old, pulling wagons, dragging logs and doing other useful things. But they are not brindle steers. As for the brindle dog, steam and electricity and other things of this sort could have had no possible connection with his disappearance, but he has disappeared just the same. I do not know why it is, but he has gone, gone with the brindle steer, and I would like to know just why it is that these old friends of the country boy are counted among the things that are no more, and perhaps forever."—New Orleans Times-Democrat.

Alcohol In Bread.

"You could get drunk on fresh bread if you could eat enough of it at one time," said a chemist to a woman customer.

"I don't believe it," the woman answered.

"And yet it is a fact," the chemist pursued. "It used to be thought that the alcohol which bread in its fermenting generated all passed out in the baking, but Thomas Bolas, a distinguished scientist, proved that bread after it is ready for eating still contains alcohol. I myself analyzed the other day twelve loaves of fresh bread and found that they contained on the average alcohol in the proportion of .314 per cent. When, therefore, you have eaten 100 pounds of bread, you have consumed five ounces of alcohol. That is quite as much alcohol as you would get in a pint of whisky.

"You, madam, eat, I fancy, about 350 pounds of bread a year. That is 3,500 pounds in ten years. In those 3,500 pounds there are 175 ounces of alcohol, which is the same as seventeen quarts of whisky. Think of it! Every ten years you consume seventeen quarts of whisky with your bread!"

"I don't believe it," said the woman.—Philadelphia Record.

Lunacy and Genius.

"Is there any sure test by which a fool can be distinguished from a wise man?" asked a pupil of Esquirol, the well known specialist, and the latter replied by inviting him to take breakfast with him the following morning. When he arrived, the pupil found two other guests, one of whom was elegantly dressed and apparently well educated, while the other was rather uncouth, noisy and extremely self confident.

After breakfast the pupil rose to take leave, and as he shook hands with Esquirol he said to him: "The problem is very easy after all. That quiet, well dressed man is certainly distinguished in some line, whereas the other is undoubtedly a lunatic and ought to be locked up."

"You are wrong, my friend," replied Esquirol, with a smile. "That quiet, well dressed man, who seems to talk so rationally, has for years labored under the delusion that he is God the Father, whereas the other man, whose exuberance and self confidence have surprised you, is M. Honore de Balzac, the greatest French writer of the day."

Hitting at the Ball.

Jim used to play in 85. His game was fairly good—could putt, approach and cut the ball, was steady with his wood. Then Jim read all the golfer's books, absorbed each written line and found his game was going bad. He played in 89. Kind friends essayed to help Jim out—instructed what to do. He followed all their kindly tips—and played in 92. And then he cut out theories—just practiced day by day, with different clubs a-hitting at the ball where'er it lay. So Jim now finds an 80 is no trick to play at all if he practices plain hitting—just plain "hitting at the ball."

The Retort Courteous.

James Russell Lowell was once a guest at a banquet in London where he was expected to reply to a toast. The speaker who preceded Mr. Lowell said many contemptuous things about the people of the United States, avowing and repeating again and again that they were all braggarts. An American minister at the court of St. James Lowell could hardly overlook this speech, so as he arose he said smilingly: "I heartily agree with the gentleman who has just spoken. Americans do brag a great deal, and I don't know where they got the habit. Do you?"

Czar's Soldiers in France.

The correspondent of The London Chronicle with the French armies, recently visited the fighting front held by the Russian soldiers. Most of these men come from the Siberian regiments and for the main part are of the peasant class, warm simple natures, but good fighters. The Russian front resembles closely the neighboring lines held by the French troops and is held just as tightly, as the Huns know to their sorrow.

United States Can Put Merchant Subs To Sea 3 Per Week

New Invention Proof Against German Attacks — 10,000 Tons Capacity

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., May 25.—Simon Lake, inventor of the even keel type submarine merchantman, in an interview confirmed reports that he had perfected plans for the building of merchant submarines which would measure between five and ten thousand tons. He asserted that the designs had been under consideration for several years, but that until the present war siuation there had been no demand for such submarines.

More than 100 of the proposed submarines, according to Mr. Lake, will be constructed the first year. During the second year he estimates that 500 could be launched with the co-operation of the Government.

The craft is capable of submerging within half a minute and has been so standardized and simplified that the first one may be turned out in four months and others after that at the rate of three or four a week. It will burn heavy oil and the construction is said to be such that its parts can be made simultaneously in many widely scattered steel plants and assembled in a central plant within a few days.

The vessels are to be built and operated by the Merchant Submarine Company, under Government supervision. The company is capitalized at $10,000,000, and was chartered under the laws of Maine on May 10.

TEXAS HARVEST IS STARTED

Cutting of Grain Near Fort Worth Brings Cheer to Chicago Experts.

CHICAGO, May 25.—The cutting of wheat has been started in Texas, near Fort Worth. Work began Wednesday when binders started on a farm of 100 acres.

"The Texas harvest has started," flashed over the wires of the brokers, and crop students said that never in history did such a message carry more of hope and meaning to the world, for this crop, according to leading statesmen, enters into the grand strategy of the war and into the very politics of nations.

From now on the harvest will spread northward over the granaries of Oklahama, Kansas and Nebraska, thence on through the Spring wheat valleys of the Dakotas, until about the first of September, the last North American sheaf has been cut in the far Hudson Bay country.

The word from Texas was taken as a good omen, for it showed that the harvest had been started three days earlier than usual, and even three days is important, it is said, when the whole world is crying for wheat.

Another cheering note was added by Bernard Snow, crop statistician, who said that Texas was expected to yield 15,00,000 bushels, or 10 per cent. more than last year. Her early harvest will bring relief to the bare bins of the Southwest. Dry weather accounts for the early start.

By June 5, Mr. Snow said, the invasion of the reaper will have extended to the Oklahoma line. In three weeks more it will have covered that State and reached the fringe of the broad acres of Kansas. It should be well under way in this State by July 5, and in Nebraska by July 10. By Aug. 1, Mr. Snow said, indications were that the Spring wheat of the Dakotas should begin to fall.

"The movement of the grain to market should begin June 15, and will flow by in increasing volume day by day until it reaches the maximum between the end of October and the middle of December," said Mr. Snow. "This means that the new crop laps over in point of distribution on the old crop, (that of 1916), by thirty days and supplements to that extent any deficiencies in stocks held from last year."

Mr. Snow added that the quality of Texas wheat is usually excellent.

Suffered From Severe Headaches

FOR TWO YEARS

Headaches are many and varying; but when the head starts to ache you may be sure there is some chief cause. The stomach may go wrong, the bowels become constipated, the blood may not circulate properly, but the presence of the headache clearly shows that unless the cause is removed some other baneful disease is liable to assert itself.

Burdock Blood Bitters has, for the past forty years, been curing all kinds of headaches and has proved itself to be a remedy that cures where others fail.

Mr. I. N. Petershen, Dnieper, Man. writes: "I am only too glad to be able to state that I derived wonderful benefit from Burdock Blood Bitters. I suffered from severe headaches for two years. I was treated by several doctors but received no benefit until by chance I heard of B.B.B., and I at once procured two bottles and in a short time I was completely cured. I am and always will be grateful for what Burdock Blood Bitters has done for me. I am glad to recommend it to all who suffer from headaches.'

B.B.B. is the oldest and the best known blood medicine on the market to-day, having been manufactured for the past forty years by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

ITALY BUYS BARBED WIRE.

$3,600,000 Order Handled by Steel Products Company.

NEW YORK, May 25.—The Italian Government has placed orders in this country for 40,000 tons of barbed wire for use in the war, according to reports heard in the steel trade yesterday. The cost will be approximately $3,600,000, and funds to meet the bills when the wire is delivered are expected to be drawn from the money made available here by the recent loan of $100,000,000 by the United States Government to Italy.

The bulk of the order was handled by the United States Steel Products Company, the export branch of the Steel Corporation, and it is understood that much of the wire will be furnished by the American Steel and Wire Company. Information regarding the contract was taken in the financial district as evidence that Italy is planning to keep on her aggressive campaign against the Austrians.

Russia and France have been heavy purchasers of barbed wire here all through the war period, and Italy, too, has taken sizable tonnage before. The wire, for the most part, is wound on its core in such a manner that when flung in front of a trench it spreads out in unwinding, forming an entanglement difficult of penetration by attacking troops. The barbs are several inches long.

An English inventor's penwiper consists of a glass cup holding a sponge which is saturated with glycerine, which has a preservative effect upon pens.

OUT OF THE RUNNING AT 40 YEARS OLD

Men at 40 should be doing their best work. This is impossible unless health is good. Many a man at 40 thinks he is getting old and out of the running, because his back aches, his joints are swollen and sore, or he is the victim of rheumatism.

We have records on file of men who felt just like this but who took Gin Pills and quickly regained the young spirit and energy that goes with good health.

So much depends on the Kidneys, whose function is to carry away the poisons from the blood stream. If the Kidneys are not working right, though a man is only 20, the poisons will make him feel old before his time. Don't delay if you have a sore back, cannot lift weights, limp with rheumatism, suffer from Kidney or bladder trouble, lumbago, inflammation of the bladder, brick-dust deposits, or other urinary disorder. Try Gin Pills.

Gin Pills are noted, too, for their pleasant action as a laxative. If you are troubled with constipation, here is the remedy.

Try Gin Pills. We will refund your money if you fail to get results. All good druggists and dealers sell Gin Pills. Sample free upon request to the National Drug and Chemical Company of Canada, Limited, Toronto. 97

Once Bitten—Twice Shy.

Advertising may make a poor article sell for a while, but the most persistent advertising would not induce you to make a second purchase of a thing that turned out to be fraudulent, and the profit on the first sale would never pay for the advertising.

Do you not think the advertisers know this? They fully realize that the very first essential of success is to have something worthy, something that people want and will keep on buying.

If you see a thing advertised regularly week after week, year after year, it is safe to conclude that it possesses actual merit and is well worth its cost.

CORPL. NORMAN SAXBY'S INTERESTING DESCRIPTION OF THE VIMY BATTLE

Well-known Local Boy Who Went Overseas With The 93rd Battalion and Is Now With The 21st Tells of the Capture of German Strongholds.

BARRAGE WAS TERRIBLE

Mr. Wm. Saxby, 352 Smith street has received this most interesting letter from his son, Corp. Norman Saxby who went overseas with the 93rd Battalion and is now at the front with the 21st as will be noticed the censor has been busy, some of the letter being cut out entirely.

France, April 30, 1917

Dear Dad,—Got your letter some time ago, but owing to the fact that I haven't had much time to myself and as other matters needed my attention I did not write.

At the time which I received your letter we were training, getting physically fit, as it were, for the big push, which has, as no doubt you have read in the papers, taken place, and is taking place all along the line, but as far as we are concerned we are out of it for the present for a rest. I refer to the taking of the notorious Vimy Ridge, which was stormed and taken by the Canadians on April 10th a place which has been the scene of much fierce fighting since the beginning of the war and later, and which experts thought almost impregnable—and it was a hard nut to crack.

On the night of April 9th we moved up into our "jumping off place" as it is called. We arrived there about 2.30 a.m., received a goodly shot of rum, which was not at all amiss, as we were all wet to the skin from wading through the water in the trenches. We then lay out in the trench, to wait for the barrage which was scheduled to start at 5.30.

It opened up alright on time. The minute it did we hopped over, right for "Heinie." I might say here that no words can describe the bombardment. All back of us was nothing but one huge flash like a great fire, all the flashes of the guns mergine into one, and the noise was deafening. The screaming and whistling of the shells overhead and terrible concussion when they exploded in 'Heinie's' line caused one to think he was indeed suddenly dropped into Helf itself.

On arriving at Heinie's first line we found what had resembled a trench but now was just a huge ditch or level with the surrounding earth. I didn't see any Bosches except a few remnants. Scores were completely buried up. We rushed on to his second line to see almost the same thing but at the third or reserve we encountered resistence. The Bosches had better dug-outs there, and stayed down in them until our barrage passed, then came out and proceeded to resist our oncoming boys. Quite a good shot Heinie is and accounted for quite a number of us before we got to them.

After that there was nothing to it. Our boys mad at seeing their chums shot before their eyes were not to be denied, so we bayonetted or shot 'em all.

Our objective was to pass over the third line, go about 1,500 yards, dig in and hold it. On one end of our frontage was a town or village. We had to take a corner of it and in this we found a huge cave, in which we took about a hundred prisoners, including a few staff officers. They provided us with plenty of souvenirs, etc. and lots of amusement.

However, we dug in and held what we had taken. He shelled a good deal during the night and to further our miseries it snowed and rained about every hour, making the land a regular morass.

The Brigade had gone on ahead of us and dug in, making a front line about 4,500 or 2,000 yards in advance of us. The following night we relieved them of their difficult job and held that for (censor cut out) in filthy weather. Then we came out for a rest of (censor cut out) I was so tired and so thirsty that I could scarcely move. We drank the filthy water in shell holes, which tasted better than any cocktail I have indulged in—at the time.

However, the rest we had fixed us up pretty fair.

We again went in the line—stayed (censor cut out) in reserve then went up to the front line again to hold it, which we did for over (censor cut out) and then got relieved and here we are, resting up. We are about 25 in a tent, but still we don't mind.

It's a peach of a day and I am writing this while sitting on the "grass"—and all the world seems good again after passing through the valley of the shadows as it were.

All the boys are laying around, lazily, watching the planes float around overhead which for all the world remind one of a swarm of bees, with their buzzing. We are still in range of his huge naval guns, but that doesn't worry us now.

Had letters from both Bill and Ern. They are Jake.

Guess I'll quit now as I feel so hanged sleepy si[illegible]g in the sun.

Hope mother will soon be out of the hospital. Will write you again tomorrow re other things but I want you to get this "toot-sweet" which means in English quickly—to let you know I'm safe.

Your loving son,
NORMAN.

OBITUARY

ANNIE JEMIMA ERMATINGER

Miss Annie Jemima Ermatinger, a cousin of Dr. Burnham and well known in this city where she had been a frequent visitor, died at St. Thomas Wednesday morning after an illness of several weeks' duration.

Miss Ermatinger was the second daughter of the late Edward Ermatinger, who was member of Parliament for Middlesex (then including Elgin county) at the time of her birth in St. Thomas on August 9, 1843. Her mother was the daughter of Hon. Zaccheus Burnham, of Cobourg, Ont. Her eldest sister was Maria, who married the Rev. Maurice S. Baldfin, who was then rector of St. Thomas' Church, St. Thomas and who later became Bishop of Huron. Two other sisters died in Winnipeg. The late Frank Ermatinger, who was postmaster of St. Thomas when he died, was a brother, and Judge Charles O. Ermatinger is her only surviving near relative. She also leaves several nephews and nieces, including Capt. Percy Ermatinger, of the Canadian Army Service Corps in France; Mrs. Maxwell K. Moorehead, wife of the American Consul at Swansea, Wales; Mrs. Bevan, wife of Lieut. Basil Bevan, of Toronto, and Mrs. George Hamilton of Detroit. Miss Ermatinger in recent years spent her winters with intimate friends in Victoria, B. C., which city she greatly admired.

Although her quiet and retiring disposition kept the late Miss Ermatinger out of the public eye, she was active in many ways in the social life of St. Thomas, more particularly in the Woman's Art Association and in the work of Trinity Church, where her counsel and assistance were of special value and importance. To a rich natural endowment Miss Ermatinger added a large experience gained from her extensive tours of Europe, where she had visited every country, with the exception of Russia. Her love of travel led her also to Japan. An observant eye and a keen intelligence enabled Miss Ermatinger to acquire an exceptional degree of information regarding foreign peoples and their artistic and other attainments, which was freely given in conversation and in her social activities. Greatly respected by her large circle of friends and acquaintances, Miss Ermatinger's demise will be greatly mourned, and the utmost sympathy felt for her bereaved relatives.

A WONDER WORKER.

"It heals like magic!" is a favorite expression when Dr. Chase's Ointment is used. It works quickly, stops all itching at once, often heals in a single night. For eczema, salt rheum, barber's itch, skin irritations or eruptions, it is a most satisfactory treatment. Being antiseptic it prevents blood poisoning.

EXAMINER PATTERN SERVICE

LADY'S HOUSE DRESS.
By Anabel Worthington.

Simple in cut, smart in detail touches, neat and becoming—all of this you want your house dress to be. In the picture you see a garment with these features combined.

The dress is cut in one piece, the waist being perfectly plain, with a V neck outlined by the new style of collar, and with a tie to lend smartness. For convenience in working, the sleeves may be made to just turn the elbow and finished with a deep flare cuff; a belt is arranged about normal waistline to add to the trim effect of the frock, and for novelty the triangle pocket has been added to the skirt section.

Braid has been liberally used to trim this dress, but contrasting color goods will brighten it up and may be used instead of the braid. Gingham in narrow and wide stripes, as well as in checks, is a favored fabric for this type of garment; also percale, chambray, galatea and linen may be considered suitable.

A one-piece garment may be cut out and made in a couple of hours and the satisfaction that results from the [illegible] is bound to increase your interest in patterns.

The dress pattern No. 8,118 cuts in sizes 36-42. To make in size 36 requires 5¾ yards 36-inch material and 5 yards braid.

To obtain the pattern send [illegible] to the office of this publication.

When ordering remember to give your name and address as well as the number and size of pattern required, and age of a child.

Price 15 cents, or 2 for 25 cents.

Authenticated Story of French Bandsmen's Heroism --- Played Until Ten Were Casualties

PARIS. — Almost daily reports of manifold feats of heroism by men who fight have almost completely overshadowed the heroism of the men who battle solely with musical instruments as doggedly as their comrades of the bayonet.

Here is a true story of the 46th French infantry band, which before the war used to play summer afternoon concerts in Paris. The band, composed of fifteen musicians under Bandsman Laty, never ceased to play though ten were killed or badly wounded before the troops conquered the town of Vauquois.

Advancing with the regiment Laty was beating time for the "Marseillaise" when the first bandsman fell. Immediately afterwards another was wounded but he continued to play where he fell. Bullets were flying everywhere as the band advanced.

With the "Marseillaise" half played the casualties numbered four, the alto and flute placed out of action by an exploding shell. Soon the regiment was in the German trench and the band had struck up "the Charge."

The fifth casualty came almost immediately. Laurent, one of the three clarionets, was hit in the stomach. He grasped the shoulder of his neighbor but the latter shook him off and marched on without removing his instrument from his lips.

German machine guns were hammering the advancing French from a height in the town. The noise was terrific but the remnant of the band forged ahead without a break in the music. Blanchard, a big drummer, was the next to drop. The same bullet wounded another flute player. The troops were now engaged in handfighting with the Germans in the streets of Vauquois.

The bandmaster signalled his remaining men for the "Marseillaise." It came promptly though not so loud and strong as on the first occasion. Prevost, the first trombone player, dropped his instrument when a shell splinter shattered his hand. Mennier, second trombone, shot through the hip, crawled to the instrument Prevost had dropped and went on playing. The band had now reached a place where it came under a heavy enfilading fire. Another bandsman was shot through the heart.

When the day was won there remained but five of the heroic bandsmen who had escaped intact. One of these was Bandmaster Laty who had continued to beat time with his white gloves throughout the entire engagement. Every instrument was damaged by bullets or shrapnel. A saxaphone was torn from the hands of its player by a shrapnel splinter.

The foregoing is why the general orders a few days later said that the "46th Infantry band played under the enemy's fire to encourage the attacking troops, in spite of a heavy bombardment."

Submarine Chasers Sank Three Hundred U-Boats

NEW YORK. — The submarine chaser and its work in British waters, is the subject of an extensive article in The Navy and Merchant Marine, the official organ of the National Marine League of the United States. The article which was written by Thomas H. Simpson, covers the whole field of submarine chasing, the first part being a word picture of conditions as they exist in the submarine-infested waters around the British Isles.

Following a reference to the feat of the U-53, which journeyed 3,000 miles to sink allied ships in American waters and then returning to its base, without taking on supplies or re-fueling, and pointing out what that demonstration means as to the scope of German submarine activities, the article says:

"Notwithstanding its obvious limitations and the assertion that the Allies have devised means that will prove adequate to cope with it, the submarine boat is probably the most formidable weapon we have to meet. Of larger construction than formerly, with perfected machinery, ample supply space, more ease and comfort for the crew, and better able to stay on station for long periods, the German submarine of to-day must certainly be able to operate long distances from its base, and can be met must successfully by the small chaser.

"When the periscope of one of these craft is twenty feet above the water the man in the conning tower, can see a battleship or other large vessel six miles off in clear weather; but to detect one of the little craft ever since it became known that Brit is quite another matter. The periscope is in constant vibration when the submarine is moving and objects in the field are therefore often indistinct. Moreover the submarine-chaser lies low in the water, frequently being completely hidden in the trough of the sea, and in rough weather it is sometimes impossible to distinguish its bow wave from a whitecap. In addition to having the quality of low visibility, the 'chaser,' with its draft of less than five feet, is immune from torpedo attack, since the torpedo has to be set to run at a depth of from seven to twelve feet: and its general tininess, speed and agility in manœuvring make it a difficult target for the submarine's deck guns, which are short-calibred and therefore not suitable for fine shooting. These are the chief reasons for the relative success with which the chasers have been used against the submarines.

HEAVY TOIL FOR CHASERS.

"There is a story going the rounds among naval and shipping men that the allied 'chasers' have accounted for more than 300 U-boats. The number of German submarines sunk or captured, however, has been one of the impenetrable mysteries of the war ever since it became known taht British ingenuity had devised means to cope with the submarine peril. 'Somewhere in England' the crews of captured U-boats are interned. As for the ones that were bombed or rammed they are down on the sea floor, which they had helped to strew with other ghastly relics, and the bones of dead men tell no tales. Of neither the living nor the dead does word come out of England; to Germany they are 'missing,' for the duration of the war—a baffling silence that necessarily must have its psychological effect on the whole personnel of the German submarine service."

Voice of The People

To the Editor of The Examiner:

Dear Sir,—What a wonderful thing memory is. Something we carry into the future with us. Forty-three years ago this summer we built a Temperance hall near where I lived in Otonabee and the late James Stratton, then in connection with the Examiner came down in connection with the opening and I appeared to be always acquainted with him after, and he was one of the very few who stopped on the public market to speak of his blessed hope for the future, through the merits of our Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ. I think he passed away in less than three weeks after. And now his daughter, Mrs. Hunter being carried into Murray Street Baptist church. Her daughter, having met my daughter, as missionaries in that far off land called China, gave me some interest as I had met her at different times since her daughter came back home here.

I believe either as weekly or daily the Examiner has come into our home for nearly 50 years and you do certainly place within my reach a great deal of information. But would you tell me, does this great display of dress autos and theatres and other things tend to the study of God's holy word in this very, very serious time as a nation and people? Does not the Bible show us that man has in the past brought trouble upon himself? Look at 1st Samuel 12 and 9th verse and then look at the last chapter of Second Samuel where David numbered the people, which was, as I take it, another way of saying let us see what we have to depend upon and seventy thousand fell. Is it not still true that the lot is cast into the gap but the whole disposing there of is of the Lord Prov. 16 and 33.

Oh, have we as a people failed to come to our Heavenly Father in humility in this the time of our terrible need.

Crop Reports Are on Whole Regarded as Most Encouraging

Except in a Few Cases the Sowing of Spring Grains Is Completed and Their Seed-bed Was Never in Better Condition—The Cheese Situation

The Ontario Department of Agriculture's weekly report on farm conditions, says:

The weekly statements of the District Representatives regarding field crops are, on the whole, encouraging. Except in a few cases the sowing of spring grains is completed. Their seed-bed was never in better condition but owing to the cool weather prevailing these crops are coming up slowly, awaiting warm rains. More oats and less buckwheat is the rule. Corn and bean land is being prepared on a larger scale than ever, and some corn has been planted. There will also likely be an increase in the acreage of mangels. Fall wheat has improved with the warmer weather, but clover is not nearly so forward as usual, and pastures, generally are not yet affording the usual good bite of grass to grazing stock. Some clover in Eastern Ontario suffered a little from frost on Monday. Alfalfa, however, is reported to be looking well in various counties. More summer fallowing than in recent years is likely this season, in readiness for fall wheat.

In the towns vegetable growing is still booming. In addition to the multitude of backyards cultivated, urban clubs and associations are utilizing vacant town lots and rural plots in their immediate vicinity.

In most orchards the first or dormant spraying is about 90 per cent. completed. The prospects for fruit so far, are good, should frosts hold back during blossoming.

Live stock: All classes of farm animals, except horses, are in great demand at top figures. Fresh milking cows in Carleton have been bringing $150 during the week, and in Victoria a shipment of 100 grade Shorthorn heifers is being made this week to Saskatchewan. Lennox and Addington reports that too many promising heifers are being vealed. Hogs are being rushed to market at $16.50. Pastures have been very backward and short, yet the flow of milk has kept up surprisingly well, although some fault is being found with the quality. The unsettled condition of the cheese market is referred to by the representatives of both Leeds and Peterborough. During the last fortnight the Brockville Cheese Board offered only 22 1-2c a pound, and in Peterborough the price during the week was less than 22c, as the reported negotiations on the part of the British authorities for the purchase of Ontario cheese have not yet been concluded. A deadlock between factorymen and buyers has resulted, broken only in a few cases where patrons had to get money to buy millfeeds to supplement the rations of their cows. Fodder supplies generally are running lower than was expected, owing to the backyard conditions of pastures.

Labour: Farmers are much further ahead with their work than they were a year ago. Boy labour has been much in operation, as many high school and other lads were placed by the representatives. According to the Lambton report, several experienced farm hands were furnished by the Colonization representative at Detroit, at $40 a month and board, and more were offered elsewhere from the same source. The keen demand for help will likely revive when hoeing and haying starts, but it is said that too many farmers have been trying to get along without adequate assistance. Married men to work by the year, are said to be growing in favour with the better class of farmers.

Huns May Have To Retire To Meuse

The Italians Continue Victorious Advance

Craonne Battle May Compel Big Retirement By Enemy

Bitter Fight Has Been Raging for the Past Week Victoriously for the French Whose Success, If Continued, Will Force the Huns To Withdraw to the Meuse. General Haig Reports That German Night Attacks Were Repulsed. Italians' Advance Continues Although Austrians Are Massing All Their Reserves for a Defence at Trieste.

A SUMMARY OF TO-DAY'S WAR CABLES

Special to The Examiner:

(By Henry Wood, United Press Staff Correspondent.)

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES NEAR CRAONNE, May 28. — Steadily through one entire week a battle has been raging around Craonne which may ultimately force Germany's retirement to the Meuse.

The French communiques have not mentioned the fighting except incidentally, but it has continued incessantly, bitterly, and victoriously for the French.

Already the French troops have descended from Paon Plateau into the Valley of the Miette. To-day they were steadily driving a two-edged and fatal wedge into the Germans. Once this wedge is sufficiently plunged into the enemy's front, the French can turn either north or south—or in both directions simultaneously. A successful movement in either direction will be sufficient to force a German retirement to the Meuse line, to save the Hindenburg front northward through Laon, St. Quentin, Cambrai and Douai.

Already the battle has advanced sufficiently to insure these results if it continues favourable to the French. But several weeks continuous operations are likely before the decisive moment in this stroke is reached.

That the Germans appreciate the exact degree of the menace was indicated to-day in the number and fierceness of the enemy counter attacks launched against the French.

The Craonne battle has had no spectacular mention in the daily official statements, because the French, instead of launching immense assaults on an extended front, have temporarily adopted the strategy of capturing small bits of the line at a time, but small and almost daily attacks. The past week has witnessed steady advances of the wedge toward Corbeny. Meanwhile the French have completely captured all observatories dominating the Ailette Valley, by a battle fought with tactics similar to those being pursued on the Craonne sector. Further successes reported to-day north of the Moronvilliers' crest is one other menace to the German line which may force their retirement. Another wedge is being driven here into the big bend in the German front. This is far behind the present German line against which the British are battering to the north.

PARIS, May 28.—Repulse of a German raid made with blazing fire sprays around Mont Blond was announced by the War Office to-day as one of a number of desperate German attempts to force the French to relinquish some of their recently gained territory.

"In the Champagne at nightfall there were two attacks around Monts Sasque tnd Teton, which were everywhere repulsed," the statement continued. "West of the Meuse in the region of Hill 304 and Dead Man's Hill, artillery fire was very active.

"In the region of Uffholtz, in Alsace, French detachments penetrated the second enemy line, finding many dead and bringing back many prisoners."

GERMAN ATTACKS ARE REPULSED.

LONDON, May 28.—German night attacks northwest of Cheresy and south of Lens were repulsed and a number of prisoners taken, Field Marshal Haig reported to-day.

"The enemy suffered severe losses," the statement says. "Successful raids by the British on German support lines north of Armentieres are also reported, between twenty and thirty prisoners being taken."

AUSTRIA MASSING RESERVES.

ROME, May 28.—Austria is massing every man of her reserves for a last desperate defense of Trieste. Meanwhile her troops on the left wing are gradually giving away before the irresistible Italian advance. Estimates from the front to-day put the total Austrian losses in dead, wounded and missing since May 14, when the Italian offensive started, at sixty thousand men. The enemy is fighting bravely under decimating fire and terrific smashes from General Cadorna's infantrymen.

DETROIT, Mich., May 28.—Accused of treason in connection with an alleged nation-wide anti-conscription conspiracy, five Detroiters were arrested to-day by Federal agents. The specific offense for which they were held was the distribution of hand bills bearing the caption "Kill the draft" and announcing a Socialist mass meeting to this end for June 3rd.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—Rear-Admiral Sims, commanding the American fleet of destroyers co-operating with the Allied fleet, was to-day formally named Vice-Admiral by President Wilson. Sims is now the second ranking officer of the Navy.

NEW YORK, May 28.—American liberty-loving Germans organized a national propaganda here to-day to dethrone the Kaiser, under the title, "Friends of the German Republic." A provisional revolutionary committee established headquarters here. Everything possible will be done, it is announced, to insure William Hohensollern of Berlin the same fate that befell his cousin, Nicholas Romanoff, of Petrograd, who is hoeing potatoes.

LONDON, May 28. — One hundred thousand American fighting men will shortly be in France—in that number being included those Americans already serving in the British and French armies—the Government announced to-day.

The Government issued to-day a report of what had been accomplished by the United States since the declaration of war April 6th, demonstrating America's complete participation in the war and her ability to give immediate and powerful aid to the Allies.

Children Received First Communion

Sixty children of the Church of the Sacred Heart and thirty of the Church of the Immaculate Conception received their first communion yesterday morning at the respective churches. The little girls were dressed in white and wore veils, and the boys in black suits with white ribbons on their left arms.

RATEPAYERS OF CENTRE WARD MEET TO-NIGHT

Citizens of the Centre Ward are reminded of to-night's meeting in the Patriotic Fund office to organize for the Bridges by-law on Thursday next. Arrangements for distributing cards and securing vehicles for Thursday are to be made and it is hoped that there will be a large attendance of ratepayers from the centre division.

Vote For The Bridge By-law on Thursday

The By-law to be voted upon on Thursday of this week is to authorize the erection of a high level bridge over the Otonabee River at Hunter Street and a bridge over the river at London Street.

These bridges have been talked about for several years, and the question of their erection was brought up definitely for decision in connection with the rebuilding of the Quaker Oats Company's plant.

It is necessary for the Company to know what will be done regarding the high level bridge, because their building must be erected to conform to the conditions that will be created by the bridge. The Company was of the opinion that, sooner or later, such a bridge would be erected, and that if they rebuilt their plant as it was before, with their offices on the ground floor, the bridge when built would practically destroy their offices and seriously effect their plant. Yet if they re-erected their buildings to conform to the high level bridge, with their offices in the third storey, and the construction of the bridge was unduly delayed, they would be put to serious inconvenience in the operation of their mills and business. Consequently it becomes necessary for the Company to know that the bridge will be constructed, and within a reasonable time.

Public convenience will be served by the erection of the bridges; grave dangers to the public will be avoided; the development of a large section of the City will be facilitated, and the continuance of a very important industry will be assured by passing the By-law—an industry that other cities were most anxious to secure and were ready to expend large sums to get. One city had made preparations to expend $100,000.00 on one public work alone in the hope of getting this industry.

The electors are asked to remember the date of the voting, Thursday, May 31st, and to vote for the By-law.

NEW GOVERNMENT IN RUSSIA TRIES TO AROUSE ARMY

Assistant Minister of War Declares That Failure in Advance Against Germans Means Losing The Fruits of the Revolution.

TO STOP DESERTIONS

Special to The Examiner:

PETROGRAD, May 28. — All the Russian forces of the new Democratic government were turned to-day toward spurring the army to fight, and steeling the people at home to sacrifices. The spectre of Germany close at hand striving to wrest Russia's newly found freedom from her people was being invoked all over the country to re-awaken the fires of patriotism and back up the demand for a vigorous pushing of the war.

"Failure to advance against the Germans means losing the fruits of our revolution," declared Assistant Minister of War Yakubovitz in a speech to-day to the peasants' congress.

"Germany has removed many of her troops and her guns to the west front," he continued. "If she can possibly crush the allies there, she will then turn to us.

"Russia was never better supplied with shells than now. We have sufficient guns and other necessities of war. But the army suffers from lack of food.

"The Government demands your assistance. Not only is food needed, but more soldiers are required. You must aid in stopping desertions."

"Dave doing well.. Not dangerous."

Mrs. Mary Dwyer, 470 Stewart street has received the following letter from the Information Bureau of the Canadian Red Cross Society, 14-16 Cockspur Street, London.

Dear Madam,—I beg to inform you that Pte. H. Dwyer who is now at Queen Mary's Military Hospital, Whalley, Lancashire, Eng., is improving and able to get up our visitor reports. We are delighted to send you such a good report and to assure you of our continued interest in him. He is in a safe harbour, being well cared for. Won't you write him as often as you can. Letters count for so much.

Yours truly,

CONSTANCE SCOTT.

Miss Ella Brown, Apsley, received the following letter from Pte. John Coones, formerly of 93rd Battalion, written on 19th April:

Dear Ella,—Just a line to say I am well and hope you are all the same.

Well Ella I lost my dear brother Tom in the battle of Vimy Ridge, but never mind Ella he was a good soldier, and died honourably for his country, on the blood-stained battlefields of France. I miss him, but I'm proud of him. He fought faithfully unto death, and when the Good Shepherd saw that he had done his bit. He gently called him home to rest.

He died easy, right in my sight, in fact, right at my feet. I pray that he may receive a hundred-fold in Heaven.

Here I am fighting away, but don't worry, I will do all I can to keep up courage. I will close now.

Oh, I forgot to tell you that Tom got your box the day before he was killed, and we were sitting eating the contents among nearly a whole Canadian army and he said to me, "This is just before the battle mother," and it was quite true. He was killed the next morning. I got my box when we came out. It seemed strange, that he got his first, but I'm glad he did. Good-bye.

Your cousin,

JACK.

Since April 9th there have been 210 casualties recorded among soldiers from Peterborough and the immediate district, the majority of them members of the 93rd Battalion. The figures up to noon to-day show an

ITALIANS GREAT VICTORY CONTINUES

CORP. H. V. PICKLE, an Otonabee boy, who went overseas with the 93rd and is now in France with the 52nd Canadians.

Since May 14th General Cadorna's Forces Have Captured 23,619 Prisoners and Are Making Steady Progress Against Austrians

VICTORY IS GROWING

Official despatches dealing with the fighting of Friday and Saturday record the capture by Italians of more important positions on the Carso plateau in the drive for Trieste and the taking of 4,700 more prisoners and a number of guns. The total prisoners taken by Italians since May 14th is 23,619.

With the Italian Army on the Carso, May 27.—The men of the 7th Army Corps, who are lying out to-day in the strong sun,, close to a stone-heap, which was the village of Medeazza, are actually less than 20,000 yards in straight lines from Trieste. That is the measure of victory which the past fortnight's fierce fighting has gained for Italy. It was Friday afternoon, after the long, triumphant battle of Thursday, and after a night and morning of incessant counter-attacks, that these brigades on the newly-conquered line running south from Jamiano were moved out for a new attack.

The whole line was being shelled, but by degrees it was possible to see that battery after battery was adding its fire to the hurricane of metal and high explosives that beat upon the dark wooded slopes of Hermada, and towards 4 in the afternoon the news ran across the country, passed on, shouted excitedly across traverses, that the attack was to begin.

Victory Mounts Like a Tide.

From where I watched I overlooked the whole landscape of battle; the morning's counter-attacks by the Austrians were earning their due, and from Jamiano the Italians were driving forward upon the heights to the east and southeast and in the shallow, stony valleys where the wreckage of the big village of Brestovica sprawls to either side of the main road to Komen, and everywhere victory was mounting like a tide. Out of the smoke and dust that veiled that terrific labour came back at intervals messages cabled hastily over the newly-laid telephone wires before they were cut by shells, or carried in parched mouths, always to the same effect: "We have got this hill or that sector of an Austrian trench."

Bombard on Whole Line.

The bombardment was along the whole line, swinging itself into special concentration up the slopes which lift to the first terrace of the grey Hermada bulk. Previous bombardments, ever since the first shell baptism of May 12, have fired the woods which clothe the hillsides, burning long lanes in them which smouldered for days.

The film of smoke that shifted everywhere fogged the lenses of field glasses that searched through the mist broken by flashes of fire. The attack should be moving from the right, from the low ground, but nothing was visible there and the smoke flowed like sluggish water between the low bosoms of land, and then suddenly one was aware that the slope itself, the first flight of Hermanda was no longer empty. Up that blackened upland with its patches of yet unburned green, figures were moving, little groups of antlike shapes, straggling, going forward again, always forward and up. The enemy's shells danced on the uneven ground about them and among them like hail on a roof and one could hear the chatter and stut-

ALL HOPES OF A COALITION HAVE VANISHED TO-DAY

Ottawa Journal-Press Which Is Very Much "In The Know," States That Borden Government Stakes Itself Upon Conscription

BALFOUR AT OTTAWA

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, Ont., May 28.—There appears to-day no prospect of a coalition government to handle the conscription problem.

Any hopes held by coalitionists were dissipated this morning by an editorial in the Ottawa Journal-Press, whose President, P. D. Ross, is conceded to be a strong confidante of Sir Robert Borden, and probably more "in-the-know" than the Borden Cabinet itself.

The Journal-Press said to-day: "The Borden Government needs no coalition with the spirit that has prevailed among Liberal politicians. It stakes itself upon conscription."

The Journal-Press refers to the anti-conscription remarks of Quebec Liberals and says: "We prefer the present straight goods."

Among the names mentioned this morning of Cabinet members who may retire or be given public appointments to permit reconstruction are Messrs. Cochrane, Roche, Hazen, Burrell and Crothers. The names of probable newcomers to the Cabinet prominently mentioned to-day are Sir Adam Beck, Sir Henry Drayton, Z. A. Lash, K.C., J. W. Flavelle and Gideon Robertson, the Labour Senator.

Dean McColl Made Plea for the By-law

Rev. Dean McColl earnestly recommended the bridges by-law to the congregation of the Church of the Immaculate Conception yesterday. In making the usual announcements for the week he reminded the people that the by-law would be presented to them on Thursday, spoke of the advantages it would bring to Ashburnham and expressed the hope that the congregation would largely support it.

SERVICE AT WESTMINSTER.

King and Queen to Attend Canadian Demonstration in London.

OTTAWA, May 25.—A memorandum from the Minister of Militia says: "There will be held in Westminster Abbey, London, on July 2nd, a solemn service in commemoration of the semi-centennial of the Dominion, and also in memory of the Canadians who have fallen in the war. The King and Queen have graciously promised to be present, and a good many Canadian troops in England will be present on that occasion.

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE?

The following playful but significant paragraph appears in the Ottawa Journal-Press, the government organ at Ottawa:

Possibly, W. Wilson (meaning President Wilson) looks north sometimes, and is thankful he hasn't got a Quebec to rule these turbulent days.

This suggests that there is a serious situation in Quebec—opposition to conscription, and riots at Montreal. These are so serious that some government journals speak of the necessity of the application of martial law to Quebec province. This is quite a deplorable condition of things; and the first idea is to ask who is responsible for dealing with it.

The answer can be prompt. It is this: Sir Robert Borden is directly and personally, as he is officially, responsible for dealing with the mutinous spirit, because he is responsible for its creation, and maintaining its continued existence.

There is no doubt whatever that the hostility to recruiting in Quebec is due to Nationalism. As well known, Nationalism is a negation of the obligation of Canadian citizenship towards the Empire. And not only a negative but a positive inducement to opposition to meeting any demand of the Empire and the cause of liberty and justice upon the Canadians in Quebec. Nationalism's doctrine is incitation to deny the idea that Canada owes any duty to the Empire to help preserve it, and the liberties it represents, and resistance to any appeal to recognise and meet the duty that every loyal Canadian admits.

Frankly, we owe the present situation in Quebec, and the past indifference to recruiting, to Nationalism; and frankly we owe Nationalism and its dangers, its elemental influence in destroying pro-British ideals in Quebec, to Sir Robert Borden. He helped the first Nationalist candidate to be elected to a seat in Parliament. The official organisation of the party of which he is head, financed the candidature of Nationalist candidates in Quebec, and a score or more of them was elected in 1911 as supporters of the Conservative party. In pledge of his recognition of the Nationalist anti-British element, Sir Robert took three Nationalist ministers into his Cabinet, and has ever since and has to this day, three such members in his Cabinet. When Quebec saw that the head of the government approved of the anti-British doctrines that Nationalism has sown far and wide among the simple habitants, was officially endorsed, protected, and rewarded by Cabinet positions, the people naturally thought that Nationalism was right, and they could regard any appeal by Sir Robert to enlist, "to rally round the flag," as a joke.

Sir Robert is directly responsible, not only for the dearth of recruiting results in Quebec, but also for the present riotous situation. He protected and paid the men who sowed the seed of disloyalty to Canada's duty to fight for the Empire, and he is now reaping the harvest, and it becomes his duty to "thresh it out."

Nobody, even Sir Robert's most zealous defenders or apologists—for no defence is admissible—can deny the truth of the facts here asserted or contradict the reasoning founded upon them.

Is Sir Robert the man we want for leader at this crisis of the Empire, when its interests cannot afford that one man or one ounce of support should be withheld? Is he worthy to be entrusted with another arbitrary year in office, without the vote of the people?

At this crisis of Canada and the Empire, Canada needs a strong man at the helm, and a strong crew—no mutineers—to man the ship of state.

Sew a ring to each corner of a small rug and slip the ring over a tack in the floor if you would have it lie smooth.

THINGS TO REMEMBER.

It is inevitable that within a very short time we shall have to have a new bridge across the Otonabee at Hunter street. The present structure, about forty years old, was built at a time when the permanent and solid methods of to-day were not practised or practicable, when iron—not steel—was used. There is danger that some day not far distant the present bridge will give way or have to be closed to traffic as unsafe.

We must have a new bridge, and no one will want one built that is not solid and permanent. While we consider a bridge of this kind, it would be wise to think in terms of a high level bridge. It will cost considerably more than a low level bridge, but it will be well worth the additional expense for three main reasons.

It will meet the practical agreement the city has made to construct a high level bridge as one of the conditions of the Quaker Oats people reconstructing their immense plant, larger and greater than before — eight storey buildings, covering larger surface and providing facilites for greatly increased operations, demanding the employment of much more employment, meaning a greatly enlarged pay roll, which will amount to more in one year than the total cost or an overhead bridge.

We have no doubt, for we have had proof, of the employment value of the Quaker Oats Company. We know how generously they treat their employees; not as mere machines, but as men and women— how generous beyond the requirements of business obligations the company was in paying wages that no legal obligation required. The company may have considered this course, as it was, good business, for in business, as in other things, wise men consider a good name an important part of their capital.

This suggests another reason why we should build the overhead bridge; as not only a convenience for ourselves, but as a part of promise to the company that has kept, is keeping, and will keep good faith with us. If we build the high level bridge, Peterborough will gain a name for keeping faith with and fairly treating and welcoming manufacturers. With that name we shall have, with our other attractions, a bait to catch big factories, something upon which our future growth depends. If we fail to keep faith with the Quaker Oats Company, we shall be "blacklisted" by industries seeking location, and shall be making a bad start for the specific work we have just begun, planning and working for a Greater Peterborough.

A third reason is that by building a high level bridge we shall obviate the danger—which will be greater with the new works in operation, increased trackage and increased trains—the danger of the deadly level crossing. This may seem a trifle, but it is a very important matter—one human life sacrificed on a level crossing would be a far greater loss than many times the cost of a high level bridge over a street level bridge.

Every citizen in considering the by-law to be voted upon on Thursday, May 31st, should reflect that he is voting for a bridge such as we must soon build—that he is voting for the good of the city in this regard—that he is voting to secure the reconstruction here of one of the greatest industries in the Dominion—that he is voting to keep faith with the Quaker Oats Company, a fact that will give Peterborough a widely known fame for keeping faith and treating industries fairly—that we shall be taking a present big stride forward in the advance of our new ambition — a Greater Peterborough.

Just note the influence of "high-level" example. The Quaker Oats Company is reconstructing its big plant; and now Sir Robert Borden, following suit, is reconstructing his cabinet.

A SHAKE-UP OVERDUE.

When a farmer is sorting over his potatoes, if he finds a rotten one, out it goes; if it is kept with the others it will spread its rottenness. When a Prime Minister in considering the composition of his Cabinet—if Sir Robert Borden ever does anything so much to the point—and discovers two or three "rotten" members, what does he do? Cast them out? Not at all. He gives them, one of them at least, special marks of favour. Like a shepherd with a chilled lamb in March he carries him on his bosom; carries him to England and virtually presents him to the King as a sample of spotless Canadian statesmen.

According to the Mail and Empire, reorganization of the Borden Cabinet is talked over in government circles at Ottawa. The subject is not only talked over there but is provoking a vast deal of thinking in the country, and the question is asked, and more insistently every day: "How can Mr. Borden tolerate in his Cabinet, and not only tolerate, but pet and defer to, if not crawl, to a man with the reputation of Hon. Robert Rogers?" Did you read the report of Mr. Justice Galt of Winnipeg, a judge appointed on the recommendation of Hon. Mr. Rogers? He finds that Hon. Robert Rogers figured in "a fraudulent conspiracy." He finds as his matured judgment, after thorough investigation, this:

I find that shortly after the site of the new (Manitoba) Agricultural College was acquired, a fraudulent conspiracy was entered into by Hon. Robert Rogers (the Minister of Public Works in Manitoba) and Thomas Kelly (contractor), with two objects: (a) to provide moneys for the Conservative fund for use in both Provincial and Dominion elections, from Thomas Kelly and Sons; and (b) to provide Thomas Kelly with funds out of the Provincial treasury over and above what he might legitimately earn.

Thomas Kelly, for his share in the theft of public moneys is spending a term in Stony Mountain penitentiary, while his "pal," Hon. Robert Rogers, is Sir Robert Borden's minister in the government, and is taken to England as a representative of Canada, dishonouring Canada, as himself. Why is this allowed? Why is Mr. Rogers kept in the Cabinet, as being "fit company for decent men?" Why are the Nationalists, who preach that Canada owes nothing to England, allowed to stay in the Cabinet to further bedevil the recruiting situation in Quebec? If, as the Mail and Empire suggests, there should be a Cabinet shake-up, Sir Robert Borden has the dispensable material obviously at hand.

We can wonder at Sir Robert Borden proposing conscription. He also proposes to extend the life of Parliament—and his government a la King Charles, by forcing a measure through parliament by means of the closure and the Conservative majority in the Senate.

Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—In your leading article under the heading of "Spelling Reform," in Saturday's Examiner, you administered a much-needed castigation to the self-constituted, arbitrary and inconsistent spelling reformers in seeking to change the orthography of our words, which have been established by custom and long usage and which has received recognition from the guild of literary men.

It would, therefore, be in order for you to use the authority vested in you and insist that proper spelling, which you advocate, be used in the advertising columns of The Examiner.

I notice therein the mis-spelling of one word, frequently, if not continually, and that is the word "Stony" is mis-spelled "Stoney."

contrary to all the well-known authorities. When tourists visit our back lakes they speak in uncomplimentary terms of the orthography of the Stony Lake denizens when they see the vowel "e" inserted improperly in the word "Stony", which is ever staring them in the face, as printed on the steam boat called "Stony Lake." If the owners of that boat would look at the Government maps and records they would see how to spell that simple word and drop the unnecessary "e".

Yours etc.,

The Influence of the War Upon Educational Subjects in Schools

Profound changes are coming over education as a result of the war, according to an instructive article by Albert E. McKinley, in the "History Teachers' Magazine." For instance, in the French Schools the time-worn problems in arithmetic have given way to up-to-date and intensely practical problems such as how long will it take a battleship to overtake a steamboat, if each moves at a certain rate? How long can a besieged garrison subsist if its rations are cut down to a certain percentage of the usual supply? How long will it take a party of engineers to dig a trench which ought to be completed in eight days when all work sixteen hours a day, if, after three days of work, a certain number fall ill, and the rest are able to work only twelve hours a day? In the science classes boys and girls are instructed in the making of explosives, the principles of trajectories, soldier's food, and the effects of alcohol; they are informed regarding the absence of epidemics in 1914. Geography classes study the war areas, particularly those within the boundaries of France. Manual training for girls is directed towards objects which are useful in the war.

Of course the burden has been placed on the teachers of explaining how the war came into being, and this is a much more complicated matter than would appear at first sight, for the teachers are not only laying down root principles, but are giving exhaustive illustrations and continual comparisons between the past and the present. Caesar's trench warfare against Vercingetorix is compared with modern trench warfare; the barbarian invasions of the fifth century are compared with the invasion of 1914; the feudalism of old France with the feudalism of modern Germany; English feeling towards France with the feeling now; early artillery with that of the twentieth century, and so on. This is supplemented by an increase in direct instruction in patriotism. France does this by enlisting the services of a wounded soldier who comes to the school upon an errand while the pupils are enjoying recess:

At a signal from the teacher they form in double line at the entrance, salute the soldier, who seriously returns it. Then he gives an account of his campaign, taking the children to Belgium, retreating with the French army, and suddenly exclaims: "We have come near to Paris, my children, and one great morning we said to the Germans, 'Halt! You shall not advance further.'" This is the glorious battle of the Marne, where the French soldiers conducted themselves as heroes. In that battle I was wounded." He raises his cloak, opens his clothing and shows the wound in his chest. "That is why I walk as an old man, carrying a cane, and salute with my left hand."

In Great Britain marked changes are taking place in the subjects taught in universities, and as an instance of what is happening it is noted that six months military service is now accepted in lieu of Greek. The attendance at universities has, of course, been greatly reduced, and the same is true of schools—especially as concerns the higher grades, for attractive wages are now being offered boys and girls who would in normal circumstances be in school. Most of the innovations he quotes are ones that will possibly be only temporary. But it is quite clear that fundamental changes in education are in progress, the general trend of which would appear to be to make the subjects taught more practical, to extend the teaching of science as applied to everyday problems, and to give preference to living languages rather than dead ones.—Montreal Herald.

The League Will Present "The Old Peabody Pew" To morrow Evening

The old Peabody Pew was a story published by Kate Douglas Wiggin a few years ago. It at once made a hit with the public and had a remarkably successful run. Last summer Kate Douglas Wiggin remodelled it into a play, and gave it under her own direction in the old church at Buxton, Maine, where the scenes of the story are laid. It was again a decided success.

Briefly, it tells the story of the efforts of the Dorcas Society of the Old Tory Hill meeting house to keep the old church in a state of preservation, despite the gradual removal of most of its best families. A delightful little romance is interwoven into the play. The last member of one of the old families, Justin Peabody, goes away to make his fortune, leaving behind him a sweetheart to whom he had not then declared his love. He returns at the end of ten years, still a failure, but to find the girl—Nancy Wentworth—waiting for him.

The play is being presented in George Street Methodist Church (Sunday School Hall) on Tuesday evening, May 29th.
